MAIL CARRIERS

Tuesday, December 29th was the deadline for interested parties to file applications for mail carriers on routes 1 and 3 in Manchester. Walter Vogt and Harry Sutton have retired. Mr. Vogt was the carrier on Route 2 and Harry Sutton carried mail his entire 36 years on route 3. Robert Huber a rural mail carrier on route 1 has switched and taken over route 2.

Currently Herbert Johnson is carrying mail on route 1. He has been the substitute carrier for Mr. Vogt for sometime and Arthur Cathey is carrying on route 3 for Mr. Sutton.

It was back on April 16, 1923 that Walt Vogt started his career as mail carrier on them what was route 5. Later this consolidated and the area serviced covers twice as many miles. Now the mailmen say they are to be work at 7-45 to sort mail and leave the post office about 9-45 a.m. It takes about 4 or 5 hours to cover the route, depending on the weather and how heavy the mail is.

Among the things which Mr. Vogt remembers most in his long career is the time his dog, his constant companion, delivering the mail, managed to tangle with a skunk. That, he said, was quite an experience. Besides his work, Mr. Vogt served as secretary of the school board for 15 years, was scoutmaster here for several years and took over the football coaching here during the illness of the coach for a year. He served in World War I and is a Past Commander of the Emil Jacob Post. Among his other duties he also served several terms on the Emanuel church board. His wife, the former Augusta Harmon was high school principal here. The couple have a son, Neil who is at Lt. in the Air Corps and two grandchildren, Laurie and Noel of Ann Arbor.

Mr. Sutton started rural mail carrier on March 24, 1924 on route 3 and never changed. The route which covered 27 1/2 miles when started now includes 58. He said he used to be on the job to start sorting mail about 6:30 a.m. when the first mail came in and finished his work about noon. Now he takes until about 2:30 or 3 p.m. to complete delivery.

Back in the old days the county didn't take care of the roads and in the winter time the farmers (and the mailmen) cleared the roads. Many times the roads were impassable and it was necessary to detour many miles. Now there are about 301 mail boxes on the route compared to 100 when he started, and there are about 1100 people living on the route. It was not uncommon in the old days for the mail men to be asked to deliver medicine or a few groceries along with the regular mail delivery. But this hasn't been the custom for several years he said.

He too, was a world War I veteran and Past Commander of Emil Jacob Post, served as Worthy Master of the Masonic Lodge F & AM and High Priest of the Royal Arch Masons and has been active in Boy Scouting where he served as scout master for years.

He and his wife, the former Fern Shonsbeck are planning to leave the middle of January to spend several months in Florida. He has two sons, Donald and Hugh, both of Manchester and three grandchildren.

Both men point out that when he is seventy but both chose to retire several years sooner. Both have passed their 65th birthday.

County Commended For Improvements At Juvenile Home

A state inspector of juvenile detention facilities recently commended Juvenile Director Willard J. Maxey, jr., and Probate Judge John W. Conlin on the operation of the Washtenaw County Juvenile Home.

Marion M. Livingston, district child welfare consultant with the State Department of Social Welfare, cited the juvenile division of probate court for "improvements . . . in all areas of the home's operation."

"There is improvement in the general atmosphere, appearance, program and staff," she said. "I am particularly interested in your improved school program and I was glad to learn, too, of the improvement in the medical program at the home."

Juvenile officials began their efforts to improve operations at the home after the National Probation and Parole Association studied the home at the request of Judge Conlin and issued a report in February, 1957.

The most serious fault the association found with operation of the home prior to 1957 was the use of it for both delinquents and also for dependent and neglected children. The association also said that home was overused and that there were certain faults in the design and fixtures in the home.

Only One Use Now

"Now we only use the home for delinquent children," Maxey explained. "They are placed there on an emergency basis for short term care, so that we can study them and determine what is best for them. They are placed there only for reasons defined in the Juvenile Code of the state. They are only children who need official court services, and the court administers the intake and release policies at the home."

Michigan's juvenile code provides that a child shall be placed in a detention facility if they (1) come from home conditions that make immediate removal necessary, (2) have run away from home, (3) committed an offense so serious that release would endanger the public safety, and (4) need to be detained for observation, study and treatment by qualified experts.

Children admitted to the home go through definite procedures. They are met at the door of the home by house father Radmilo Grdich, who takes them into his office off the foyer and explains the home's rules and regulations and writes down on a form information about the children.

Interviewed Later

Later the children are interviewed by Jacob E. Terpara, superintendent and psychiatric social worker at the home, who obtains what he calls "information of a more social nature about the child."

Parents of the child in question are asked to attend this interview and Terpara gets a "great insight" into what may have caused the child to get into trouble, the attitudes and personalities of the parents and a picture of the home conditions from which the child has come.

"This preliminary hearing is held to decide what we should do with the child," Terpara said. "It really sets the stage for the forthcoming hearing in the juvenile court."

Each morning, Grdich and Terpara get together and go over all of the cases of children that are in the home at the time. They compare notes on what each has observed in a particular child during the preceding day and decide whether a particular action might be indicative of help he may need.

Dr. E. C. Ganzhorn, county physician, appears at the home two days a week and checks over all new cases and attends those who may have shown signs of an illness. Dr. Ganzhorn is on call for emergencies. Private psychiatrists or those at University of Michigan facilities also are available. Each newly-admitted child is isolated for 24 hours in a single room to reduce the likelihood that any disease he may have would contaminate others in the home.

Daily Routine Listed

He gets out of bed at 7 a.m., Sunday through Saturday, gets dressed, cleans up his room and eats breakfast from 8 to 9 a.m., at which time he goes to the special school in the home. After school is out at noon, he eats lunch and participates in a rest period in the main lounge which includes symphonic music piped in from a hi-fi record player.

At 2:30 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays he works in handicrafts, which include the making of leather articles. Each child makes one article of leather for the home and the rest he can keep himself or send to his friends and relatives.

Recreation periods at the home are from 3:30 to 5:30 on Tuesday and Thursdays and family visiting hours are from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sundays, and from 7 to 8 p.m. on Tuesdays.

After dinner on Wednesdays, the youths are shown a movie from 7:30 to 8 p.m. Following showers at 9 p.m., the children must be in bed and have the lights out by 9:30.

Recreation for the children at the home is one of the biggest concerns of the juvenile officials. They have gotten the Board of Supervisors to approve an appropriation for fencing to enclose the grounds so the children can be let outside to play without a prohibitive number of supervisors to watch them so they don't run away, and they hope to obtain the services of Eastern Michigan College students as play supervisors during the next school term.

"We still need instructors who can come to the home for a few hours on Saturdays and Sundays to teach a special skill such as art, basketweaving, athletics, ceramics and wood working," Terpara said. "In the summer time, the children get recreation by tending the flower beds around the home, mowing the lawn, and at other times in mopping floors, butting, making their beds and working in the laundry. But a more creative program of recreation is needed."
