WASHTENAW SPORTSMEN APPOINT COMMITTEE TO STUDY CON-CON

The Washtenaw Sportsman's Club this week is believed to be the first conservation club in Michigan to name a study committee on the forthcoming constitutional convention.

Daniel Robbins, a committee member, said there were no indications yet as to what lines of action the group might follow.

In discussion leading to formation of the committee, he said, it was pointed out that conservationists have a stake in any proposed constitutional reform and should take steps to protect their interests.

"Nobody said that sportsmen's clubs should try to elect conservation-minded delegates to the constitutional convention, but that thought certainly was in everybody's mind, Robbins said.

The Washtenaw Sportsman's club is affiliated with Michigan United Conservation clubs and Robbins is a member of the MUCC board of directors. These connections provide possible channels for passing local action here to the state level.

COUNTY SETS BUDGET

A budget of $3,313,667 for operations of the county in 1962 has been approved by the Washtenaw County Board of Supervisors.

This is $87,496 more than the final budget adopted for this year. A total of $2,730,367 from the direct property tax will be needed by the newly adopted budget. This is $41,867 lower than for this year.

The board's ways and means committee chairman, Carl Mast said the reduction in the amount required to several factors. He named a relatively low welfare case load in 1960; more reimbursement for public hospitalization and medical care programs, high nontax revenues than anticipated and an increase in the general fund balance.

The 1962 preliminary budget will be presented next week to the County Tax allocation board as the county's request for a share of the 15-mill property tax, which also is shared with schools and townships.

WRESTLING MATCH AT MANCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL

Four outstanding matches, including a six-man mixed Australian tag-team bout, will headline the big professional wrestling card at the Manchester High School on Friday night, April 14. Sponsored by the Senior Class, the program will feature both midget and heavyweight matmen.

Luis Martinez, popular young flash from down-Mexico-way, will go against Bulldog Brower in one of the top clashes.

Martinez is a living refutation of the sports "axiom" that "nice guys finish last." Admired by the fans and respected by his fellow wrestlers, Luis is one nice guy who has risen to the top of his profession.

A true student of wrestling, he will often remain in an arena long after his match to watch another matman who has perfected a maneuver which Luis would like to learn. His favorite hold, however, the Rocking-Chair Hold, was strictly a product of Luis' own ring inventiveness.

Crybaby McCarther, wrestling's 330-pound weeping wonder, will take on Dick "Mr. Michigan" Garza in another heavyweight encounter.

Garza has become a legendary strongman in a sport which has more than its share of former national and Olympic weightlifting champions. Veteran mat observers are almost unanimous in their designation of Garza as the most powerful man to campaign in the ring within the past fifty years.

A five-time winner of the Mr. Michigan trophy as the best-developed man in the state, Dick still recalls vividly the days when he was so weak and frail that his family doctor would not let him go out for the high school football team. Dick credits a rigid program of weightlifting and calisthenics with elevating him to his present peak of physical conditioning.

A mighty Midget battle will pit the Brown Panther against Farmer Pete in an encounter between two diminutive bundles of dynamite.

As a special added attraction, the winners of these three matches will return against the losers in the mixed tag-bout. Midgets will be in the ring with heavyweights.

CHERRY MEETING

A representative group of forty people from the Manchester area attended the annual Manchester Community Chest meeting, Wednesday night, April 5th, at the Nellie Ackerson school.

Louis Vogel, treasurer for the Fund, reported a total of $7,917.42 deposited to date for the 1960-61 United Community Fund and Red Cross Drive. After paying incidental bills and all budget requests for the February Board meeting, $8,803.60 had been disbursed, leaving a balance of $864.45 for emergency and buffer funds.

Fund agencies present reported on their use of their allowances for the past year. The Boy Scouts of America reported a healthy increase in numbers as well as activities.

The Red Cross complimented the Manchester area on an exceptional Blood Bank program which has met unusual demands for a small area with excellent public spirit and community backing. The social welfare aid division, with Mrs. Ray Kerr and Mrs. Franklin Reek as local representatives, has also had a busy year assisting burn-out and service mens' families.

"Gallon Blood Donor" pins were awarded Robert Panches and Don Mackintosh by W. de St. Aubin, executive director of the Washtenaw County chapter of the American Red Cross. These two men and other blood donors in the area were praised for their unselfish service to their community.

The Clowers of Manchester thanked the community fund for their assistance as a volunteer-guided agency for pre-teen girls in the area.

The Recreation Council reported the year's activities for Playground, swimming, and baseball programs for all ages. An offer from the Red Cross to pay half of the enrollment fee at the National Aquatic School in June for a local representative will be considered by the council.

Stanley White reported for the County planning committee for Community Chests and the budget committee of the United Fund for the state.

A discussion of family and social services for the area was activated by two guest speakers, Mrs. Fred Poole, director of the Bureau of Community Services for the United Fund and Mrs. Dolly Brenner, executive director of Family Services in Ann Arbor. The group present considered the need of a local committee or council which could correlate the existing services and facilities. The professional and business men in the area could be greatly aided by such a council or a directory of such services, Mrs. Poole suggested.

Officers for the Manchester Community Chest Board were elected by ballot as follows: Mrs. James Baker, Allen Benedict, M. Thomas Marshall and Stanley White.

Lawrence DeVerna, retiring president of the board who has served with the Community Chest since its beginning twelve years ago, was given a Red-feather pin as a symbol of appreciation.

Band and Yearbook representatives, Mary Valencich, Vickie Ball and Judy Braun served refreshments which were furnished by the individual board members to the group, thereby releasing the board members for an organizational meeting following the annual meeting.

Both Wolter and Frederick have been chairman and vice-chairman respectively for the past year. For one year prior to 1960, Wolter served as vice-chairman.

Frederick is chairman of the board's county drain committee and a member of the administrative and ways and means committees. He has been a board member for the past nine years.

Wolter has been on the board for seven years. He operates a farm at 6360 Dexter road, moving to Scio township in 1939 after having lived in Ann Arbor for seven years prior to that time.

OFFICIAL DETECTIVE STORIES

The man and woman watched in terrible fascination as Detective Rudwick toyed with the three empty 12 gauge shotgun shells. They both knew the shells had been found on the floor of the bedroom in which the woman's husband and the man's wife had been murdered.

"Mr. Taber," the Detective said, "you say you own two shotguns but both are sixteen gauge?" Taber nodded. "How about you, Mrs. Chute?"

"I don't own any guns." Her voice was low.

"Your husband owned a twelve gauge automatic though. And it was fired recently. You know the big difference between an automatic and other shotguns, Mrs. Chute?" She shook her head. "With the automatic, you just pull the trigger and the gun ejects and reloads. This would account for these empties we found. A person who knew about shotguns—like Taber—would have picked them up after firing. Unless he knew they couldn't incriminate him."

Taber jumped to his feet. "Now just a minute—"

"Why couldn't you have used his gun?" the Detective said. "You were neighbors in the same rural area, often visited, you must have known where he kept it. And you must realize that under the circumstances, you two are the chief suspects. He consulted his notes. "Mrs. Chute, you were staying with your invalid mother the past few days, but she can't swear you were in the house at six a.m.?"

Mrs. Chute nodded. "We were both sleeping."

"Okay. Give me your story again, Taber."

Taber sighed. "Friday evening I left on a weekend business trip. One of the men I was to meet today phoned my hotel long distance saying he couldn't make it. I went home, arriving a little after midnight. My wife wasn't there and I assumed she was with relatives. Our home is rather isolated and she didn't like to stay alone."

"I phoned her brother Jerry but she wasn't there. While talking, I suggested going fishing and he agreed. I knew I'd be tired after traveling and going to bed late so I told him to call me at six to be sure I was up."

"Weren't you afraid the line would be busy? It must be a party line that far out of town, isn't it?"

"Yes, but it's not used much at six in the morning. Jerry has already told you he called at exactly that time, just when you say the shootings occurred."

"That's it. One shot hit the bedside clock."

"Jerry picked me up a little later and we fished together all day. I don't see how you can place me at Chute's home, three miles away, at six o'clock. You know Louise's brother wouldn't lie for me in a situation like this."

"I guess not. You can both go home now."

The Detective frowned. Mrs. Chute's alibi wasn't as airtight as Taber's but it made sense. If true, Taber had to be lying. But with his brother-in-law's phone call for an alibi, Taber couldn't be touched.

For long minutes the Detective pondered. Then—there was just a chance to prove which suspect was lying! He phoned information. "This is the police—" A minute later he hung up, yelled for a lab man and hurried to Chute's home. On the way back they stopped at Taber's—to arrest him for murder.

How did the Detective know which suspect was guilty?

"WAKE UP AND READ" LIBRARY WEEK SLOGAN

"Wake Up and Read" is the slogan for Library Week, April 16 through 22. Manchester area people have always been library conscious. We have had continuous library facilities since 1838 with a public library that is second oldest in the county. Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti libraries were established at an earlier date but Ypsilanti was not in continuous service.
 Free public library facilities for the township have varied greatly in the one hundred twenty three year history of the institution. For years it was closely allied with the country school system, for a time it was housed in a portion of a local store. The library was brought into its present existence by the Women's Library Association and it has grown slowly but steadily to its position of importance in the Washtenaw Area Library Association.
 Adults who grew up considering the library a children's haven will now find that adult fiction, reference material and periodicals are exceptional for a library of its size. Library service also includes getting a special material for specific needs from the State Library or other large cooperating units.
 As the community has grown, so has the library service. It has grown beyond the bounds of the township from which it gets its name and main support. Library service, therefore, becomes a business matter between neighboring townships in order to have the advantages of free books. Use of the library has always been supported by Sharon Township both in Manchester and Chelsea so that the residents of that area have had access to public libraries over the years.
 Freedom Township residents may, at this time, receive free library cards for book borrowing at Manchester Township Library through recent partial support by their board. The special library service to the Pleasant Lake school will continue only until the end of this term. It will not be possible to continue the same service again in the fall unless further support for the project is available from Freedom township. This service is not to be confused with the regular school library. This is public library service with hundreds of books available for children to borrow at the school instead of having to come to town for them. A volunteer committee from the Pleasant Lake P.T.A. has made this project possible.
 Bridgewater Township Board will decide at the next meeting, early in May whether or not they will give their residents who live in the Manchester area the free library service which can be available to them through township support of the service.

 President of School Board, Luther C. Klager gave a resume of things planned.
