MOVING OF MEMORIAL STONE A WEIGHTY PROBLEM

Memorial stone in the village park at the northeast edge of the Main Street Bridge has been the target of a lot of controversy. And its a pretty weighty problem to the tune of better than seven ton. But it is going to be moved. There is a definite parking problem on east Main Street, especially for the super food market. An enterprising group of business men, the Manchester Development Company bought and tore down the old Conklin Building to make way for a small parking area for the market, which they also own.

The village park, next to the Raisin River and adjoining the Development Company's land, offered a 10 foot strip to the Company in order to expand the small parking area. The park boasts of only one thing-the memorial stone with the names of Manchester area soldiers who gave their lives in World Wars I and II.

The Development Company offered to move the stone to another location if the people responsible for its location approved. Mrs. Mike Wolfe was president of the Manchester MOMS back in 1949 when it was decided to dispose of the honor roll which had the names of all service men from the area. It was Mrs. Wolfe and the MOMS club who had decided to see what best suited the needs of the community in the kind of memorial to be erected. She invited a group of local citizens to her home to make plans for a suitable memorial.

In April 1949 the Manchester Enterprise carried the story of the first meeting and the names of the people who attended including village president, L. V. Kirk; Commander of the American Legion Post, Russell Middlemiss; Chamber of Commerce, Mike Wolfe; MacCabe's, Carl Wuerthner; Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Basil Schwab; and from the MOMs, Mrs. Clayton Parr, Mrs. Herman Weidman and Mrs. Wolfe.

There was little money to be found for this project and it was decided to try and find a large field stone which would be suitable Mrs. Schwab, Russell Middlemiss

TRIP IN CANADA NETS A REAL WHOPPER

-by Marie Schneider

Four area couples are home after a fishing trip in Canada that gave them something to boast about. One of the party, Mrs. Elmer Below caught a 45 inch Northern Pike. The trip was nothing new for the Lawrence Burkhardts who had made a couple of trips to Wabikoba Lake area in Canada before, but to the Russell Brauns, Elmer Belows and Norman Hinderers it was a new experience.

Careful plans were made with the Burkhardts doing the engineering of the nine day fishing spree.

Temperatures in the Caradian lake area read from 32 to 40 degrees at night, which calls for sleeping bags. Each couple had his own pick-up or truck, loaded with all kinds of gear. They say they didn't forget a single important thing for the 1290 mile trip from Manchester.

Mrs. Braum said she thought they had "roughed it" while building their cottage at Mio, before they put in electricity, but after this trip she decided she hadn't known too much about it.

She related that they left the main highway about 45 miles from Wawa the nearest town.

"This trail was never intended for a car or truck and has a unique way of making the driver keep his eyes on the dirt trail which winds over hills and around curves over a 12-mile stretch and crosses a bridge of logs which was never intended to support a heavy load," she said. "The water was not too deep and they managed to cross without mishap."

It was about 6 P.M. when they arrived at their destination. As soon as camp was set up they went out to try their luck fishing. Darkness doesn't fall until about 10:30 P.M. so they had several hours to drink in the gorgeous scenery and bring in a good mess of fish.

On Monday they took the boats two miles up the Wabikoba Channel, crossed a rock pile and beaver dam to Large Wabikoba Lake. Mrs. Braum said it was wonderful—everything so peaceful and quiet except for the nibbling of fish on the line and the biting of the black flies that infest the area. As the Brauns were marveling at this expanse of wonderland where there seemed to be nothing but tranquility they suddenly heard Mrs. Below call out for help. She and her husband were trying to land the big one. The Burkhardts were first to reach them, just in time to grab Mrs. Below's broken line and help land the 22 pound 45 inch northern pike. Clothesline rope was entwined through the net and minutes later the fish was transferred to Hinderers' boat and stashed away under the seat.

The fish must have been a real jinks to the Hinderers for they didn't catch another fish all morning. Mrs. Below caught the "big one" with a 19 cent 2 1/2 inch dare devil and a Zebko rod and reel. A couple of days later Belows and Hinderers left for home for, they decided, a fish like that deserved to be mounted. But they missed some excitement.

Mike Fox and Art Przysocki, college students from Detroit, were the only other campers the Manchester folks saw. They arrived at the lake a day after the local folks and camped only a hundred yards away, apparently glad to have company in the lonely Canadian woods. The two spent little time fishing, they were hunting bear.

As Mrs. Braum told her story she remembered that, "One morning just as we finished our breakfast, Mike came rushing into camp and in a hushed voice teeming with excitement told us he had shot a bear. It looked awfully big to him but he thought maybe it was only a small one. He wasn't sure. Just for an instant his buddy thought he was joking but one look at his face convinced me that he was pretty serious."

Everyone tramped back and a short distance from camp there lay a satiny, black bear which weighed between 350 and 400 pounds. The young hunter downed him with the first shot but bled away again, just to be sure.

Mrs. Braum explained that it was a gorgeous sight to see, particularly since it no longer moved. After joining the boys and helping dress it out and bring it into camp the Manchester folks took a walk through the woods, feeling fairly safe with Art's gun for protection. There were plenty of fresh moose and bear tracks and Mrs. Braum said she occasionally thought she felt one breathing down her neck but she didn't see any.

They had good luck fishing and even brought home some in their ice chests. All too soon Saturday rolled around and they broke camp. The Detroit lads decided to return at the same time with their bear.

As they climbed into their pick-ups everyone decided it was time to start home. As they jogged along over the rocky trail Mrs. Braum casually mentioned to her husband that she had been wondering about the log bridge and wondered if they'd have trouble crossing. She didn't have long to ponder because as they approached they were dismayed.

Someone had tore part of the old bridge away and to make matters worse the beavers had built a dam down stream causing the water level to rise.

There was little at hand to work with. You couldn't call for help. No one would hear you unless the men hunting for uranium. They had arrived the day before with all their paraphernalia. From all appearances they intended to stay a long time and they said it wasn't their first trip into the region.

Burkhardts were the first to attempt to cross, after some repair work. The front of the pick-up made it but the rear was too heavy and bogged down into the water, over the wheels. There it perched like a teeter-tatter. Braum hooked on a chain and pulled it back. Then they chained the bridge and pulled it into position and boards were placed under the wheels as the pick-ups crossed the bridge. The Detroit car with the heavy cargo was left to the last and both trucks were used to pull it across. It took a good two hours to go 12 miles.

And as they drove past the sign on the main highway at the entrance to the lonely trail they had a better conception of the meaning of the sign. It read "Traveling Prohibited to Vehicles".

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION STUDIED BY SCHOOLS; WOULD POOL RESOURCES

The Boards of Education of the Manchester, Chelsea and Dexter School systems met in Dexter to discuss the possibility of a vocational education program. The school boards expressed enthusiasm for a proposal that they pool their resources to provide agricultural, electronics and business training for high school students of the three districts on a cooperative basis.

Manchester, Chelsea, and Dexter have about 1,500 high school students and it was suggested that if another nearby school joined in there would be about 2000 students.

Taking the usual percentage of students who could benefit from vocational training, this would give the group about 1000 students for an area program and by pooling the facilities and resources, the three school districts, plus others manifesting interest, a vocational program of great value at reasonable cost might be realized, the school officials believe.

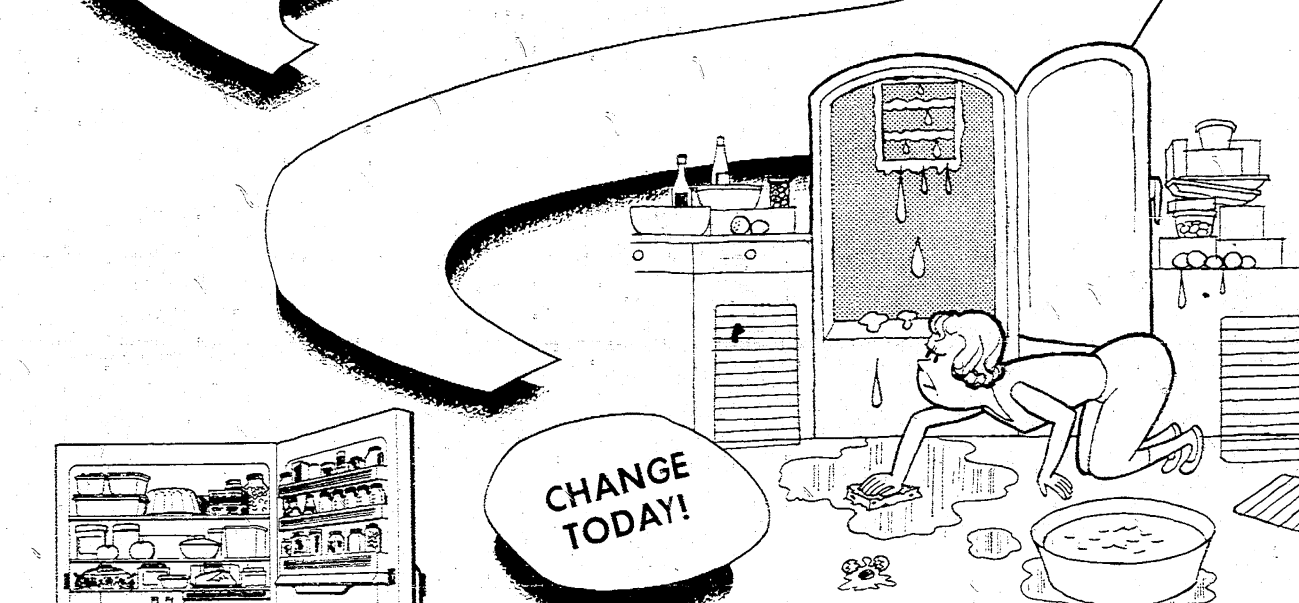

Dexter School Supt. Nicholas Ianni, who presented slide programs outlining the proposal said an area effort could provide better and more complete vocational training than any of the individual school systems could provide separately.

He pointed out that the first step would be the establishing of funds to provide for a professional vocational training coordinator. He said that the coordinator could develop class and laboratory schedules that would employ existing facilities. Other than teachers' salaries the only other expense would be the cost of bussing the students to classes.

This proposal is now under study by the three school boards. A consensus is expected to be reached before all of the boards meet again separately on July 6.

The school boards said there is no legal obstacles to a cooperative program although such arrangements are not common. Manchester and Chelsea boards of Education recently visited St. Clair County School to examine that system first hand.

THREE TRUCKS DELIVER BOOKS

-by Marie Schneider

Books and more books! Mrs. Ted Tapping listened to the request for books for missions at the convention of the National Council of Catholic Women in Detroit. Miss Mary O'Hara of Ann Arbor, Washtenaw County representative was asking for more books to be sent to missions in the United States, Africa and other foreign countries.

Mrs. Tapping has retired as president of St. Mary's Altar Society and decided that this was a project for her to try to collect the much needed books from this area. She talked with Miss O'Hara who promptly told the Manchester woman she would personally see that the books would reach the Detroit warehouse if they could be collected and taken to Ann Arbor. The representative didn't know exactly what she was bargaining for.

Books in the Junior and Elementary Schools here are furnished by the school and when the books are changed the outmoded ones are discarded. Mrs. Tapping checked with her husband, Junior High School Principal to see if anyone had asked for the old books which would not be used next year. A careful check revealed that no one wanted them.

There were over 3,000 text books, teachers manuals, mathematic books and novels which Mrs. Tapping managed to collect. Of course the school was the largest contributor, but many friends joined in and gave novels etc. Included too, were a number of maps which were most welcome. In all there were three truck loads of books which made their way to Ann Arbor.

Miss O'Hara said her nephew was borrowing a truck and transporting the books to Detroit to be used by the International Relations Department of the National Council of Catholic Women with Ruth Gerberg in charge. Besides books the committee is looking for cooking utensils to be sent to the missions. These utensils can be used ones, too, the representative said. Among the articles including clothing which have been collected in this area recently are fur coats which still have years of wear. Some have been repaired by Ann Arbor furriers free of charge and sent to be used in some of the arctic missions where they will be most welcome.

Mrs. Tapping is still interested in collecting for the missions and people may contact her at her home. Other towns in the area sending books include the Milan and Whitaker schools.

CHICKEN BROIL Thursday, July 16th

Manchester's eleventh annual charcoal chicken broil, the most popular event of its kind in the state, takes place next Thursday, July 16th, on the high school athletic field. On that day some two hundred citizens of the town will rival the legendary exploits of Paul Bunyon. Between the hours of 4:30 and 9:30 they will slowly broil and serve nearly four tons of plump Michigan bred chicken halves to over 6500 guests. Some sixty white hatted chefs will supervise the cooking on special turning grates resting on 150 feet of charcoal pits capable of cooking 180 chicken halves at one time.

The slow broil technique, which assures that the chicken will be done to a turn without blistering the skin, was developed by Howard Zindell, head of the Michigan State Poultry Science Department, who personally supervises the big Manchester event each year.

The broil features Michigan chicken, generally plumper and better conditioned than imported varieties. Halves average 18 ounces. Crates of chicken are delivered to the pits from a refrigerated truck, from which they emerge lightly frosted but not frozen.

During the dinner, more than a ton of chilled cabbage will be fresh sliced on German sauerkraut slicers and converted into slaw with a vinegar and oil seasoning featuring plenty of celery seed. Buns, relishes, coffee and milk complete the menu.

Although the Broil is officially sponsored by the Optimist Club and the Jaycees, practically every organization in town takes part. High school classes supervise soft drinks and ice cream. Scouts, members of 4-H and FFA, church and Farm Bureau lend a hand. It's an all-male affair, the ladies take the day off.

The Manchester Broil, which has become a model for similar mass picnics throughout the Midwest, depend for its smooth operations on the full cooperation of twenty-two committees.

The largest committee presides over the pits, where sixty men do the broiling and basting. There are subcommittees to preheat a ton or more of charcoal and deliver it to the pits, take the chicken from truck to grid, turn and baste, test the chicken for finish, and deliver the cooked chicken to the serving lines.

There are two ticket lines and a special line for take-outs. There is a large host committee to show guests to tables seating two thousand people at one time, and to clean up places for newcomers. There are committees for coffee making, ice cream, soft drinks, and taking out potato chips, relishes and buns, for cutting slaw and bringing it to the serving tables. There is an audio committee to announce distinguished guests and advise the waiting diners of the chicken supply.

All these specialized committees, well trained in their jobs, assure a smooth running event. Many visitors come to Manchester not only to enjoy dinner, but to watch the spectacle. This year they will see the giant Paul Bunyan skillet, large enough to scramble eggs for 500 people. They will see an assortment of backyard charcoal broiling equipment. Two Class-A softball and speedball games will entertain guests before and after dinner. The sheriff's mounted detachment will direct traffic.

There has not been a serious threat of rain in the ten years the broil has been held. If there is rain on July 16, guests may take their dinners to nearby shelters, school rooms, and into their cars. Prices remain what they were in 1954: $1.50 for adults and $1.00 for children and $1.50 for take-outs. All profits go to the support of youth activities in the area.
