Shake hands, fellas, and come out fighting! Saline's Centennial Chairman, Lauren Wild thanked Gale Koebbe (village president) for the key to the city. (l to r) Al Gaige (huh!), Lyle Widmayer and John Althouse, councilmen, look on.

Saline's centennial caravan here Saturday was the longest to date with some estimating that 450 cars rolled along the 12 mile blacktop Manchester. Adding spice were the buggies, carts and old vintage cars. Music of all kinds added to the street dance in front of the mill.

The water is fine, boys! Come on in!

Saline wasn't the only town represented in the parade here Saturday. The local boys joined in with special musical effects.

You've heard of roll out the barrel--this is wash out the barrel! The fire department vs. the Dutch firemen.

NOPSIS OF A FIASCO

Adrian street was blocked off for the Centennial dancers but the wind spilled over the entire business section. After the notes of the polka faded away the local boys took a long look down Main Street. They decided that wasn't all that spilled! Some of the firemen rolled out their sleeves (there were no more barrels to roll out) and with their village street broom swept up the mess. The new fire truck got underway hosing down the blacktop--just like in Holland. And when the church bells started to chime Sunday there wasn't a trace of the parade on the town! That is, except for a truck load of cans in the age dump.

200 CHEFS SET TO SERVE 'Chicken At Its Finest'

by Marie Schneider

It's Chicken Broil time again! You can almost feel it in the air as men folk in this southeastern Michigan community prepare for the 13th annual event.

This small village nestled close to the Irish Hills, near Wamples Lake and Pleasant Lake, is situated just 22 miles southwest of Ann Arbor, 22 miles east of Jackson and about 18 miles north of Adrian. For several years there hasn't been rail service or a bus route but on the third Thursday in July all roads will lead to Manchester.

Just how Manchester goes about serving chicken dinners to more than five times its population is a marvel to many. It could be that Luther Klager and Roland Crossman have something in common with the Pied Piper. They have been engineering this big event ever since it started. One thing is certain, they have the cooperation of every man in the village and the townships surrounding it.

This is no small project. It started big. At least that was the opinion of folks here when over 2,000 were served at that first Broil. But it has been snowballing ever since. Last year 8,500 were served. Where will it stop? No one seems to have the answer.

Women have no part in the dinner arrangements, the preparation or the cleanup. It is their chance to be Queen For a Day. They can invite friends and relatives with nary a thought of who gets and prepares the food, or who works on the cleanup.

They know there will be four lines of charcoal pits totaling 300 feet to insure faster service to the guests, and that the red carpet will be out.

The chicken will be served well done and golden brown. This comes when the chicken halves have been slow broiled over charcoal pits. This chicken will be basted with 120 pounds of country fresh butter and it is never burned or blistered. It will be lightly salted. There will be no guess work when these 200 chefs set about their task. Working these long hours with the eager chefs will be the hosts, servers, and cashiers.

Chicken at its finest--the Manchester way is no happenstance. It is the result of experts in the field at the Poultry Department at Michigan State University. These men set out to prepare chicken to come into its own in Michigan. It was Dr. Howard Zindel of Michigan State who came here for that first broil 13 years ago. He wanted to make sure that the chicken was broiled just as he directed. He will be here again this year.

Men in gleaming white aprons and chef's hats will preside over the pits. Some one hundred serve on this detail alone. Sure, they will have help! The more than 2 ton of charcoal will have to be preheated and delivered as needed to the pits.

Michigan chicken is generally plumper. Michigan chicken halves are considered better conditioned than imported varieties. Each half will average 18 ounces or more and will emerge lightly frosted but not frozen from refrigerated trucks and put on the grids.

Can you visualize about 3,600 pounds of cabbage being consumed in a single meal? This would make quite a mound. But come Thursday, July 17 all the German sauerkraut cutters will be in use and fresh heads of cabbage will be converted into slaw with a vinegare and oil seasoning accented with plenty of celery seed, second to none.

All the buns which will be served will be baked right here in the Manchester Bakery. The more than 25,000 radishes will be grown on a farm near here. There will be potato chips, coffee or milk on the menu. Sound good? It is.

Professor Zindel will tell you that the secret of the whole thing lies in the way the chicken is broiled. Every piece is tested. Chefs wearing white canvas gloves check the chicken. The meat must move free of the bone when it is done. This is the important test. No amateur works in this department. This is a job for the skilled chef. It takes 1 hour and 45 minutes to slow broil a chicken half. During that time it is turned 50 times. And men will wear out 100 dozen pairs of gloves.

Detailed planning goes into the broil. Many try to copy it with varying degrees of success. And these businessmen will close their stores and the farmers will forget their work in the fields on this one Thursday afternoon. They will serve chicken--slow broiled, at its very best.

Team work is a must! There will be 28 committees on the work team. Long ago the Optimists and Jaycees called to the Scouts, 4-H, FFA and Farm Bureau for help. One committee remains constant. It is the famous weather committee. Never forgetting that good weather plays an all important part in the success of the broil the weather committee begins its part in the affair early. Heading this group are all the clergymen of Manchester and the country churches. Loud speakers will herald the arrival of out-of-town guests, out-of-state-guests and those who will be visiting here from abroad.

There will be ticket lines--two of them--and a special line for take-outs. And everything will run smooth. It has for 12 years. There are committees for coffee making, ice cream, soft drinks, and cutting and preparing slaw.

Paul Bunyan has nothing on Manchester when it comes to the Big Chicken Broil. And these visitors will come, not only to the dinner, but to watch the spectacle. Those who have moved away will return to eat and visit. For them this will be "Old Home Week". There will be class reunions and everyone will have a chance to stop off and visit old friends.

Two Class-A softball or speedball games will entertain guests before and after dinner. The sheriff's mounted detachment will direct traffic.

Dinners will be served from 4:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. The price is the same as it was in 1954: $1.50 per ticket. And just the same as when the first Big Broil was held the profits will go to the support of youth activities in the area.

MORE FUNDS ADDED

Funds are again being added to the Melvin "Red" Lamb fund from the Chelsea area. These will help defray the expenses involved from a kidney ailment and probable kidney transplant.

Another $332 has been added to the Lamb fund through sale of chances on the Television set from the local legion post.

During the past week eight Chelsea area 4-H clubs worked together to sponsor a second benefit bake sale and bazaar.

Mr. William Van Riper, one of the leaders in charge of organizing the sale said the clubs received articles for the sale from other persons who wanted to do something to help.

A check for more than $370 will be sent to the Lams. Melvin and his wife are in the Cleveland (cont. on pg. 2)

BIG IMPOUNDMENT IS PROPOSED

-by Marie Schneider

A second tour of the proposed Mill Creek impoundment and adjoining recreation areas will be held Sunday, July 17.

The Chelsea-Dexter project includes 15,000 acres under study by the Army Corps of Engineers for a reservoir area. Special invitations have been sent to area governmental officials, but any area resident may go on the tour if the bus space is reserved.

The tour route includes both the northern and southern impoundment areas, and takes more than two hours to complete. Tour guides will be H. Charles Powers, 12755 Scio Church Road.

If the project is approved, some 900 persons will be displaced in the Chelsea-Dexter area.

The tour begins at the Leonard McCalla farm at 481 S. Steinbach Rd., which is included if the land area is impounded. Ninety-three farms in Lima Township, 15 in Scio Township, seven in Dexter Township and four in Freedom and Lodi Townships, all of which are operated and contribute substantially to the output of farm produce from the county are included.

This totals 16,513 acres of farmland, including 11,529 acres of cropland.

If the impoundment is approved the Chelsea School District will lose a large portion of its taxable land but only a few of the students.

About 20 per cent of Washtenaw's beef cattle and 10 per cent of the total swine production, 8 per cent of county dairy cows and 20 per cent of the county's sheep and lambs are now raised on the area which would be impounded.

This does not take into account the grains including much wheat which Chelsea Milling Co. uses in the Jiffy Mix products.

An industrial area would also be swallowed up, including the Chelsea Heating Plant, Larrow Elevators, Detroit Abrasives and others.

There have been many questions asked as to the advisability of such a project.

What could such a project do to the growth of Chelsea and what will become of the village's waste water in a stagnant shallow body of water?

Farmers indicate that very little of the land in question could not be converted into productive farmland. Many historic landmarks will be affected including historic homes and centennial farms.

The Salem Lutheran Church on Scio Church Road will not be flooded but the homes of half of the parishioners would be covered.

The purposes of the impoundment project are flood control, low flow augmentation of the Huron River to provide a future water supply for downriver areas and recreation.

Opponents to the project question the use of the water for drinking because of the pesticides, insecticides and herbicides in it. Unless trees in the impoundment site are removed, the flooding of the trees will form tannic acid which will flavor the water, they maintain.

Members of the Mill Creek Research Council note that recently one farm sold at $600 an acre and another 2-acre plot sold for $900. The project could be costly.

Council members are questioning the sources of water supply. They doubt that the narrow stream of water, which is the North Branch of Mill Creek and the main source, would be enough to be of importance to the project.

Members say that if the water supply is what they believe it to be—shallow, sluggish and mud flat infested with mosquitos—it will be anything but inviting for this possible recreation area.

Fewers wishing to go on the tour would contact the council secretary, Mrs. Leonard McCalla, for bus reservations.

Ross Campbell Seeks Post As Second Probate Judge

Ross Campbell, referee for the Juvenile Division of the Washtenaw county Probate Court for the last three years, has thrown his hat into the non-partisan ring for the second probate judge position recently authorized due to the overloading of the court.

The 43-year-old attorney is a resident of Ann Arbor and is concerned with not only court disposition of the cause and prevention of it. A childhood ambition was realized when in 1945 he graduated from West Point. After spending nine and one-half years in the Army, Campbell left the service to enter law school at the U. of M. He earned his law degree in 1955 and has since taken graduate work in sociology and psychology.

In 1958 Campbell developed a course in legal aspects of medical practice for the U. of M. and the Kellogg Foundation.

Campbell has been guest speaker for many civic organizations on the causes and correction of juvenile delinquency. He recently addressed Dexter Jaycees and is currently studying the recent increase in delinquency in the Dexter and Manchester areas which have, in the past, been relatively free from any significant amount of juvenile crime.

Campbell, who has dedicated his life to fighting delinquency, is a consultant to "Project 74" which is trying to improve and broaden the services of neglected and delinquent youngsters in Washtenaw county.

Campbell was raised in Detroit and was an Eagle Scout. He was instrumental in getting an ROTC program started at his high school.

He received an appointment to the U. S. Naval Academy, was through competitive examinations the day before he was notified of his West Point appointment. Campbell and his wife, Jeanne, live at 2729 Cranbrook Rd. in Ann Arbor. They have two children, Chris, 8, and Charles, 7.

Campbell feels Washtenaw county has an opportunity to become a national leader in preventing and correcting juvenile delinquency due to its superior social and scientific resources, enlightened citizens, and the recently-created second judgeship.

Campbell is active in the Allen school PTO, is a board member of the Family Service of Ann Arbor and the Senior Citizens Guild, a member of the Huron Valley Girl Scout Council and is still interested in scouting in general. Though he is a marksman in rifle and loves outdoor sports, Campbell is most interested in fishing and skiing at the present.

LETTER TO THE MANCHESTER ENTERPRISE

July 11, 1966
Dear Lois and George Koda and Marie Schneider:

The following is another letter to the people of Manchester to thank everyone for everything they have done for us. I want to thank you folks also for the many articles you have printed about and for us.

Sincerely,
Jeanette Lamb

Please accept this letter as a big "thank you" to each organization and each person—from the youngest to the oldest—who has helped us so very much. We are lost for words at the results of the different projects to raise funds to help pay for Red's hospital bill. We try not to worry about the financial burden caused us by Red's illness. Thanks again to all of you, you have lightened this burden.

We enjoyed looking through the guest book and the pictures of the dance and breakfast. A special thanks to those who prepared it for us.

The box of ticket stubs from the raffle were also brought in by Red's family. There is really a lot of them and we are amazed by the many names and places to which they were sold.

We are still waiting for that call from the hospital. We are anxious and yet it means that operations and medicines may in the hospital for Red. We hope and pray in God that it will mean longing home in two or three months for us. Red often asks me "Will I ever see home again?" We have faith that he will.

Friday, July 15, Red had his 12th treatment on the kidney machine.

Again, Thank You. One to All.

MARVIN ESCH SEEKS REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR US CONGRESS

Rep. Marvin L. Esch, candidate for the Republican nomination of U.S. Congress said he was pleased the National Republican Coordinating Committee was supporting efforts similar to his own, which would provide for automatic increases in Social Security benefits to offset increases in the cost of living.

Rep. Esch, who has been calling for a Social Security cost of living allowance since his work on the Federal Relations Committee in 1965, said that the Republican recommendations were excellent, but they did not go far enough.

Speaking before the Ypsilanti Women's Club, Rep. Esch said he would be pleased for its attempts to bring Republican programs up to date with the needs of our changing society.

"But we must go even one step further and eliminate altogether restrictions on the wages of our senior citizens. We are encouraging elderly persons from earning more than $1,500 annually without losing their Social Security benefits."

The Representative from Ann Arbor has worked closely with problems of the aged during his two years in the State House and is co-sponsor of a bill to establish the University of Michigan-Wayne State University Institute of Gerontology.

He said the elderly should be allowed and even encouraged to seek employment if they so desire.

While the President cries out for a $3,000 minimum wage, we are encouraging poverty through limiting the employment of the elderly.

Rep. Esch cited the labor shortage in Southeastern Michigan and said it was foolish to place labor restrictions on senior citizens while at the same time jobs are going unfilled.

He also criticized the President's housing program, stating that they were discouraging private groups from furnishing housing for the elderly and placing all housing under federal control.

"Our present programs for the elderly are disgraceful," Rep. Esch said. "Increase in Social Security benefits have become political plums, designed to gain votes, not to alleviate the problem of the elderly. And even those benefits are quickly eaten by inflation."

"Our senior citizens are proud people, and they deserve more than the Johnson Administration is giving them."

COLLEGE WEEK SPICED WITH VARIETY

If variety is the spice of life, College Week for Women should be pretty spicy and pretty lively this year.

The conference, July 26-29 at Michigan State University, is based on the theme, "Target—You and Your Government." But classes and special sessions are designed to intrigue homemakers of all interests says Mrs. Helen Fairman, Cooperative Extension Service home economist serving Washtenaw, Monroe and Lenawee counties.

College Week, which is sponsored by the Extension Service, is featuring a U. S. Congresswoman, two Michigan Legislators, a legislative counselor, a news reporter, and University administrators in the special sessions.

Instructors of the 36 different classes, which will be offered, come from 11 state departments and service organizations and 20 MSU departments.

Each woman attending College Week may choose to attend three classes. Each class meets three times, Mrs. Fairman says. The subjects range from psychology to Michigan history. . . from genealogy to managing the family budget.

Many women who attend the entire conference will stay at Shaw Hall, a University dormitory. Registration, housing and meals for the four days will be $29.00. Those attending only one day can register for $2.75. July 28 has been designated as visitor's day.

For more information on the conference, registration forms and information on possible travel arrangements, contact Mrs. Fairman at the Cooperative Extension Service office in the County Building, Ann Arbor.

Washtenaw County Brucellosis Free

Washtenaw County was recently recognized as a Certified Brucellosis-Free county by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the 55th county in the state to achieve this status.

Brucellosis is a highly contagious disease of cattle that has cost herd owners millions of dollars over the years. It causes abortions in cows with resultant loss of milk and calves which eventually reflect higher cost of food for consumers. The disease under certain conditions is transmissible to mankind in the form of undulant fever. For a county to be Certified Brucellosis-Free means there are no quarantined herds in the county and that less than two-tenths of one per cent of the cattle have shown infection within the past 18 months. The program in the state to eradicate the disease is a cooperative one between the Michigan Department of Agriculture's Animal Health Division and the USDA's Animal Health Division. In 1954 there were more than 7,000 brucellosis infected herds in Michigan. Today there are only 43 infected herds in the entire state.

Villagers Air Problems With School Board

by Marie Schneider

It is apparent that the Manchester Public Schools will be bulging at the seams when school opens in September. There will not be enough room to go around. This was predicted about three years ago by the school study committee which based its belief on the steady influx of people to the area. The school board had tried to avert this situation by asking the voters to indorse a package building program including additions to the Manchester High School and the Pleasant Lake School. The package deal was turned down by the voters. This was the first time that any request for a school building was rejected here. At the annual school election this last June the high school addition building project was put before the voters again, with some revisions. This time the voters approved a $520,000 addition to the high school. Currently this does not provide any additional rooms for the opening of school this fall. But with the letting of contracts last Friday work is scheduled to begin within 10 days from that time.

The school board pushed aside the regular business session on Monday to explain to parents of first graders why this grade is being moved.

Robert Swartz, Supt. of Schools, said that after much consideration it was decided that the three sections of the first grade would be moved to the Emanuel Church hall if the proposal meets with the approval of the State.

Before the school board and the administration arrived at this decision they studied every possible solution and believed this to be the most feasible.

It involves some 65 to 70 children. Those across town would go to the elementary area school and be bussed across town to the Emanuel Hall. Children in the Pleasant Lake area entering the first grade will attend classes at Pleasant Lake school.

Luther Klager, president of the school board, stressed the importance of an adequate facility for the first graders. He said that the Board is happy to find such a building at Emanuel. He said that the cost of using the building has not been decided, pending approval of the state.

Some parents expressed concern and suggested that it might be better to move the kindergarten sections. School officials explained that first graders will adapt better to move the kindergarten sections. School officials explained that first graders will adapt themselves easily to the change.

Also up for discussion was the remedial reading program now in full swing. Manchester received federal money to finance the summer reading project--Title I of Public Law 89-10. This program is officially designated as "Financial Assistance to Local Educational Agencies for the Education of Children of Low-Income Families".

Under this grant Manchester received $20,258.90 and there are 77 children enrolled in the program. There are four full-time teachers: Mrs. Marion Kime, Mrs. Jane Raus, Miss Dealoris Dahl, and Mrs. Marvel Trol.

Part time teachers are: Mrs. Maynard Blossom, Mrs. Patricia McKeen, Mrs. Philip Mains and Miss Judy Walters.

A resident of the area, John B. Cole, said he didn't believe that Manchester should have attempted to qualify for the grant.

"If our children need extra help during the summer with their reading skills, the operational millage should be increased and I, for one, will go on record as being willing to pay an additional 10 mills if necessary for school operation," he said.

Various school board members expressed the opinion that most of the taxpayers in the area would find it quite a burden and asked why Mr. Cole waited until the program was so far advanced before publicly opposing it.

School Board members pointed out that this is not the first time that the Manchester Schools accepted federal help and the mentioned that the milk program is subsidized by federal funds.

A thorough screening of all students in the school system was conducted by the teachers and they picked the children who would best benefit from remedial reading. Ethics prevented the Board from making public the list. Supt. Swartz said that no child who was eligible was turned away and in some cases individual tutoring is being emphasized. Letters were sent to parents of eligible children, school officials said.

Because this program required more teachers to staff it, the ordinary summer reading classes are not being held this year. Neither is the modern math being taught this summer.

Field trips are being planned as a part of the program in order to make it more enjoyable for the children.

Basically, the intent of the program is to improve reading skills, but it is also going to encompass activities that are of personal, hopefully resulting in a feeling from each child that school isn't such a bad place after all. Some of these planned activities are:

Reading the rounds in the area.

PRIZES TO BE GIVEN AWAY BY MANCHESTER MERCHANTS

Sidewalk Sales in Manchester have been catching on over the past few years so that now shoppers are looking forward to this fourth big event next Wednesday, July 27.

There was talk at first of having the sale for two days, but the proprietors of the stores talked it over and decided that it would be better to have ONE BIG DAY instead of two half hearted attempts!

They ought to get the CHICKEN BROIL WEATHER COMMITTEE to work for them, because they will need nice bright weather for the sidewalk sale. But, and of course this does seem logical, if it rains the same merchandise will be available in the stores. And the merchants will be just as pleased to show their displays inside. Anyway they can't pile the entire stock they bought for the sale on the street--always best to go and take your time and browse around. The stock is new--the price is right! The rest is up to you!

When our merchants first held a sidewalk sale--they were new at the game but some of that stock wasn't. But they learned --and last year's sale was a great success and this year promises to be the same!

For months the merchants have had an eye out for articles for the sidewalk sale and they've been stocking their shelves. They want to get these bargains along to their customers--realizing that a dissatisfied customer is no great asset.

For a while we were under the impression that every barrel was rolled out a couple of weeks ago when the Saline caravan wheeled into town but now we are told that the merchants managed to salvage the big wine barrel. You know the one we mean. No one told us probably Dan Boutell was responsible for hiding it--maybe in the big bank vault. Anyway, he has a sharp eye out for the welfare of the community and we know that the Union Savings Bank wants things to go. This applies to the tickets that the merchants will be giving away beginning Saturday, July 23. So it stands to reason that the big wine barrel will be rolled out in front of the Bank so that people can deposit their tickets for the drawing next Wednesday evening.

CHICKEN BROIL A SUCCESS

by Marie Schneider

They made history and fed 'em all! This should be music to the ears of the local men who planned the 13th annual chicken broil. For the last several years this village of 1,500 has been behind the eight ball--and ran out of chicken.

The succeeding year the boys would grid an extra thousand halves but the increase didn't keep up with the demand. An extra 1500 would arrive and stand in line. Local folks wondered if there would be any let up or if they could possibly catch up. They were about ready to throw up their hands.

It is no small job to speculate whether Aunt Jane will be inviting her family from up-state or whether folks in Ohio will decide to drive here for the big broil.

There is a lot of guess work connected with a dinner of this magnitude. But last night they hit the jack pot!

Those in the know, report that some 9,300 halves were brought in that refrigerated truck from Ypsi. About 9,100 dinners were sold. Some of the workers bought chicken halves after the affair was over. But the judging was very close.

How do they do it? Well, they say practice makes perfect. These guys have had the practice.

Then, too, we suppose that the famous weather committee which has played an important part through the years, probably casts a watchful eye and a serious thought in the direction of the committee heads who plan the biggest chicken broil of its kind in Michigan.

The weather was perfect. There was just enough of a cool breeze to keep up the spirits of those whose job it is to work the pits. The breeze was just enough to whisk away the smoke from the pit area.

It would be hard to say those fellows had the hardest job--working the pits--not even if they can't lift their coffee cup come Friday morning. They had a real work out twirling those heavy grids 50 times every hour and a half. Remember there are 24 halves on each grid. It takes two men, one on each side of the pit to turn them.

By the way they used 190 pounds of butter to baste the chicken. If you give too much credit to the chicken testers, someone will be sure to mention the cabbage cutters who mow through 47 crates of cabbage--about a ton and a half and season it with dressing fit for a king.

When you see all those plastic bags of Manchester grown radishes you marvel how they can be so uniform in size. They added such a cheery look to the dinner plate.

Just for the records there were about 4760 half pints of milk consumed, that's about 1,040 over last year.

Serving started at 4:30 p.m. and the last person was fed at 9:30 p.m. At one time the one line reached to City Road and the line to the west extended for two blocks, with people standing two and three abreast. But the lines kept moving. There was no serious waiting and no one seemed to mind for there was plenty of activity as politicians made the most of the situation in their campaigns for the coming primaries.

This year the take-out line hit an alltime high. This helped by moving many from the congested area to the lawns of residents who find it an excellent way to entertain.

After the broil was over the workers went to Carr Park where there were refreshments of all kinds--including chicken--the first time in several years. Then there were cold cuts donated by Albert Hall & Son.

This we are sure of--come Friday morning when the clean-up detail was hard at work, there were very few. The 300 workers had shrunk to a mere handful!

We'll have to give credit to Howard Zindel, from Michigan State. He is no quitter! Remember? He organized the first broil 13 years ago. He returned again Thursday, as he does every year to work along with the boys . . . to see that everything runs smooth. He likes to prove again and again that people will drive miles to eat chicken . . . if it is prepared right!

Thursday night's broil should have been a dream come true.

Retires as Librarian

At the July meeting of the Manchester Township Library Board, Mrs. Dan Boutell was appointed local librarian. She will replace resigning librarian, Mrs. Burrill Hansen.

Mrs. Hansen and her husband will be house hunting in Concord, Mass. where Mr. Hansen has accepted a position as a sixth grade teacher of math and science in the Emerson School.

Mrs. Boutell's appointment leaves a vacancy on the board of trustees at the library.

Mrs. Rolland Grossman will fill the unexpired term. Appointments will be effective starting August 1st.

A book sale will be held on the lawn in front of the library on July 27, weather permitting. Books are being sold daily to anyone who is interested in browsing among the hundreds of used books in the basement!

The new best-seller at the library this week is "Columbella", a romantic novel of suspense by the author of "Sea Jade", Phyllis A. Whitney.

Book circulation reached an all time high in the month of June. Out of 5,429 books owned by the library, 965 were borrowed.

Miss Barbara Kemmer has been hired as the librarian's assistant this year.
