

ALCOHOLISM

How does a drinker know if he or she is alcoholic? A few questions might reveal the answer.

Does he or she need a drink at a certain time each day or the morning after a party? Does the person drink alone or try to hide the drinking? Has there been a loss of memory or control while or after drinking? Does he or she deny, or become upset, when criticized for excessive drinking? Are family or friends harmed by or worried about the problem? A "yes" answer to even one or two questions could indicate that professional help is needed.

Some people see the family doctor or clergyman. Others go to counselors to delve into the cause and effect of drinking. Many join Alcoholics Anonymous (AA), the nationwide self-help organization of recovering alcoholics who help one another.

Look into the Yellow Pages in your telephone directory under "Alcoholism", and you'll probably find Al-Anon for families and friends of alcoholics, and Alateen for youth 12 to 20 years of age with alcoholic relatives or friends. There are also Alcoholism Information Centers, sponsored by the National Council on Alcoholism, as well as our Substance Abuse Centers throughout the state.

If you have an alcoholic in your family, urge him or her to get help; but don't cover up for his or her problems, and don't punish or threaten. Moreover, don't take over his or her responsibilities, and never join the drinker in his or her bouts. You could end up with a problem, too.

Alcoholics can be youths as well as adults. Our Office of Substance Abuse Services reports that alcohol is the most frequently used drug among teenagers.

Living with an alcoholic is like waiting for Pandora's Box to open and release all the human ills of the world. When the box opens during a drinking spree, you may experience disappointment, despair, humiliation, frustration, betrayal, and sometimes fear. However, when the alcoholic finally gets professional help, try to be compassionate, patient, and supportive. If there is an occasional lapse, don't be discouraged; alcoholism CAN BE successfully treated. There are tens of thousands of Michigan citizens who have recovered from alcohol problems.

Alcoholism is a national problem. In Michigan alone there are about 600,000 people with alcohol problems.

Do you know an alcoholic? The questions above could give you the answer.

BILL TO SPUR SAVINGS

Mary Keith Ballantine
Twenty-Third District

A Republican bill exempting the first $1000 invested in savings institutions from the state income tax introduced in the Michigan House of Representatives is aimed at capital formation through savings.

The bill would provide a stronger incentive for saving which in turn will provide funds for capital expansion.

Lending institutions are making fewer loans to business because we have failed as a society to encourage savings. If we hope to get out of the economic crisis we're in right now, we have to realize that we must make money available at reasonable interest rates for business and industrial expansion in order to provide more jobs.

Exempting the first $1000 in a savings account from state income tax is a step in the right direction.

According to recent statistics, savings in the United States has dropped to an all-time low. Both Germany and Japan far outpace us in per capita savings, and both have strong economies, as well.

The Reagan Administration is also interested in getting people to save more through proposed tax cuts. I think this bill complements that approach quite well, and I hope it will be adopted by the Legislature.

As a state suffering from the highest unemployment and gravest recession in the nation, we would indeed benefit greatly from it.

Our state ranks fifth in wine production in the nation, and our wineries earned nearly 150 state and national awards in the last three years for the quality of their products.

Tours, offered by all the wineries, are immensely popular with visitors. During the summer months, you'll see busloads of tourists every day. Michigan vintners are proud of their art, and delight in explaining this ancient craft to their guests. Visiting the wineries, you'll learn how grapes are pressed, how fermentation is controlled, what determines the dryness of a wine, and other interesting information.

Winner Of $100.00

Dutchman Fire Fighters Association 300 Club winner was Elgin Motluck, Ticket #150, drawn by Matt Dean Herman.

News Of Good Things Growing

By: Margaret G. McCall

Looking for something different to do on a lazy summer day? Visit Michigan's wine country, where good things are growing in some terrific scenery. Autumn is the harvest season, but last year's crop has been processed and is awaiting you in distinctive bottles and varying flavors.

Vineyards marching across the rolling hillsides of southwestern Michigan tell you this is wine country, and the foliage is thick and verdant green.

According to the Michigan Department of Agriculture, our state has about 15,000 acres of commercial vineyards, with acreage increasing each year. In 1960, those vineyards produced almost 100 million pounds of grapes, worth about $12.5 million. Most of the crop goes into jams, jellies and juice. But about six percent is processed by Michigan's wineries.

HIT OR MISS

(This is a continuation of the story from last week's paper)

She (Lizzie, our car) repaid our kindness by making at least four rods in high. Then one cylinder came up missing and as if discouraged with her efforts she slowed down and began a slow nerve-racking crawl and threatened at any time to stop entirely and for good. Occasionally we did have to stop and back up for a short distance to get a fresh start. Steam from the radiator streamed back against the windshield, condensed and frozen there. And then it began to snow again. We tilted the windshield open so that we might see the road and plugged along. At the foot of Briske's hill we caught up with a truck headed in the same direction and "Lizzie," with a grateful snort, slid into its tracks and nearly made the hill without any help. But near the top she faltered again and, as Farley jammed in the clutch with extra emphasis, her radiator began to boil with indignation. We pushed her on to the top of the hill and filled her up for the third time.

Down the hill and on through to Norwalk was a little easier going and she did it without complaint, though the hill just beyond the tracks gave her another long, hard battle. We'll say this for Farley, he handled her with a master hand, and he did all that could be humanely expected of any car on such a road and with one cylinder missing. Just beyond Smazel's garage the car track we had been following came to an abrupt end in the middle of the snow bank as if the car had suddenly taken wings. We were wishing for a pair ourselves, but fortune failed to smile upon us and we took the advice of a passing pedestrian and back up to the old road. Here the going was a little easier, though still slow, and we crawled along until we were within sight of the pavement again. Then "Lizzie" began to cry for water again. We urged her forward hoping to make the pavement before we stopped but she went into a dead faint and stopped. Desserted farms were all about us but we had to have water so we struck off on foot toward the nearest one. Luck was with us. A pump in the front yard yielded water after a little coaxing and we filled a basin, kicked up from under the snow, and staggered back toward the car. When we reached it we discovered that about half of "love's labor" had been lost for a hole in the bottom of the basin was stealing the water we so badly needed. After three trips back and forth "Lizzie" showed signs of being refreshed so we were off again. At the end of the pavement we encountered better roads and actually made a mile or more in high. But our enthusiasm over this sign of better times was short lived. At the foot of Merritt's hill we encountered the worst snow of the trip. The storm, which had been growing, had now reached the proportions of a blizzard and it filled the tracks behind us almost as fast as we made them. Three hours by Farley's somewhat erratic watch had been consumed in making the 18-mile trip.

Rather proud of having bucked the storm and beaten it, we proceeded to make the calls which had brought us through the storm and to satisfy the appetites which had grown steadily since we neared the city. Then we held a council of war to decide whether or not "Lizzie" could make it back thru the storm. We decided to let her try it even tho the blizzard was sending pedestrians along River street scurrying to shelter and the roads were becoming hourly more impassible. We can come back if we can't go clear thru, we reasoned.

So we loaded up and turned "Lizzie's" tired eyes toward home. To our surprise we had little trouble though the going was

Lewis Majors Saves 4 Year Old

On July 27th Lewis Major saved a 4 year old girl from falling to her death after she had climbed upon the escalator handrail in the J.C. Penney store in Briarwood. The unidentified girl was talking to Lewis while standing next to the escalator, when she turned around grasped the escalator belt and pulled herself up upon the handrail. The escalator started pulling her down the stairway and as she was sliding over the edge Lewis grabbed her and tried to pull her off. Charlotte hearing the girl scream, saw that Lewis was losing grasp on the girl and that she was sliding sideways, over the belt, ran over and pulled the girl off the belt. The girl unharmed, though upset, was returned to her grandmother, who did not thank Lewis for his quick thinking and courage. THANKS LEWIS.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

A recent news release by the sponsors of bankruptcy restriction legislation gave the misleading impression that the Legislature is almost ready to pass a bill which would remove the availability of federal bankruptcy exemptions and require Michigan residents to use the less-protective Michigan exemptions.

In fact, this bill had no consumer group support when it was reported out by the House Corporations and Finance Committee. The bill is an attempted end-run around the federal bankruptcy law by banks and those who sponsored the bill for them in the Legislature.

The current federal provisions are barely adequate at best. Under them, a bankrupt person loses all of his or her assets except $7,500 in residential real estate and personal property, an old car worth up to $1,200, $750 in tools of the bankrupt's trade, and other small items.

What the bill in the State Legislature means is that people who have to go bankrupt (almost always as a last resort) could only keep their home if the equity they held was below $3,500, and the other exemptions would be smaller as well. This bill would almost certainly result in many more foreclosures on the homes of unemployed workers. The Michigan law has not been revised since 1961, and inflation has made it totally outdated. It also has quaint provisions allowing people to keep ten sheep, two cows, five swine, and feed for them for six months.

Concerned consumers should join the fight to prevent HB 4409 from becoming law. The federal law now in effect reflects a reasonable minimum chance to start over, and going bankrupt means that a person will have a hard time getting credit in the future. Because of our state's economic crises, many hard-working citizens are unemployed due to no fault of their own. Many have been reduced to desperate straits and forced into bankruptcy. We should not make it even harder for them to start over.

Sincerely,

Perry Bullard

State Representative

Chair, House Judiciary Committee

Manchester Jaycee Auxiliary Happenings

The July 8th meeting was started by a steak fry at the home of Janet Avery at 7:30 p.m. Acting President for the month of July and August, Carol Kemeter, called the meeting to order at 8:50 p.m. A family picnic is scheduled for August 8th starting at 6:30 p.m. at the home of Cheryl Bunn. Food, games and swimming are on the agenda so a good time for all is guaranteed. A Ladies Day in August was discussed along with possible dates and places to go. Among the cities discussed were Frankenthum, Greenfield Village, a show and dinner or the theatre and dinner. However no definite plans were set. Sandy King presented the various household needs of the Kinship Home in the area and a decision how to solve them best will be further discussed at the August 12th meeting.

Under new business, Evelyn Punched indicated that Dr. Virginia Johnson has tentatively consented to speak at our September 9th meeting at the home of Pat Bertke, discussing the topic "Women and Cancer Awareness". This should be a good refresher for all of us. A new service project was brought up by Sandy King entitled the "Learning Tree". This would be a mobile unit which would be possibly stationed at the Klager School. The unit would consist of various hand puppets and stage that could help the children learn different skills.

Our next meeting is scheduled for August 12th at 7:30 at the home of Cheryl Bunn. If there are any young women in the community interested in knowing more about the Jaycee Auxiliary, please feel free to contact either Evelyn Punched, 428-8072 or Sandy King at Baker's Dozen.

All friends and relatives are invited to attend.

On August 4, 1981, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders were married by the Rev. Theodore L. Werner at the Shrine United Methodist Church in Pleasant Lake Road, Manchester, Michigan. Mrs. Saunders is the former Mrs. C. W. Vanz of Manchester.

The couple have lived in Warren and are owners of Saunders & Son Co., an Electrical Contracting Firm. Please omit gifts.

According to tradition, if you dream of getting white pants, it means that it will arrive just the next day.

HIT OR MISS

It will show a best, and the storm was at last at work. It worked as we were assured that the work of our job was over but they and we, little knew that our troubles were just to begin. The further north we came the worse we found the road drifted and the further it became a maze our line smashes effectively. Then we used a chain and came to a standstill. We confiscated a neighbor's clothes-line wrapped it around the wheel and work to our return we had gone two rods. We pushed, shoveled, scooped and exposed the "Luzerne" refused to go further. So we waited for the snow to melt and when it came plowing through the storm like one of us heavy machinery we departed assistants. We gave up a piece of snow. A man and a woman a man I have been reduced by a piece of rope, to sit out the night. We wrapped it around the wheel. We pushed "Luzerne" until, pushed, pulled some more and we began to move. The tail light was our guiding star and we followed it home. There we pushed the car into the barn and made her comfortable for the night, and there at the next of our snowdrifts she will remain waiting for spring and her next "little journey."

WASHINGTON

Few businesses would fail to react after being cheated in a business deal. But when the federal government is cheated, I discovered during an investigation of federal contracting, it ignores steps to avoid being cheated again.

The federal government spends more than $100 billion a year purchasing items ranging from paper to space shuttles. These items are bought or "procured" from the private sector through a number of different types of contracts.

My investigation into procurement practices found that when contractors significantly fail to perform in accordance with the specifications of a contract, lie to the government to obtain the contract, or cheat the government out of money during contract performance, federal agencies in general do little in response even though they have an appropriate tool.

The tool is an administrative procedure known as suspension and debarment.

Suspension, the temporary prohibition against contracting with a firm pending the completion of an investigation into alleged wrongdoing, is usually the first and less severe of the administrative actions, and usually lasts for about a year.

Debarment, on the other hand, is the prohibition of contracting with a firm for a longer, specified period, usually three years. The debarment action can be taken upon solid proof of wrongdoing, such as a conviction for fraud.

Simply stated, the government can impose either of these sanctions to protect itself from having to do business with a bad contractor for an extended period of time.

The government has had this tool at its disposal for some time. However, because it has been used so sparingly and haphazardly, it has helped little to reduce fraud and waste in government programs.

As a result of a major investigation conducted by my staff on the Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, I have concluded that there are three basic problems with the existing federal debarment and suspension process:

1. Some federal agencies fail to debar or suspend contractors known to be fraudulent or irresponsible either because they are simply lax or because they have not established procedures for the action.

2. When one agency does act to debar or suspend a contractor, the word does not always get out to all the other agencies that might be procuring goods and services from the contractor, so they unknowingly continue to do business with that contractor.

3. Even when the word reaches the other agencies, and they are doing business with the contractor, they often fail to take their own debarment or suspension action against the firm.

I find the third problem to be the most disturbing. If a contractor has cheated one agency and the agency has acted against the contractor to protect itself, I see no logical reason why other parts of the government should sign new contracts with the firm as if nothing has happened.

My point is illustrated by bringing up the space shuttle once more. A construction firm won a contract with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to perform construction tasks related to the space shuttle project. The contractor was suspended by NASA in 1979 because of various alleged misrepresentations.

NASA turned the allegations over to the Department of Justice for possible criminal prosecution and a grand jury is investigating the matter.

The Department of Defense, although aware of NASA's suspension of the company, awarded $12 million worth of contracts to the suspended firm. One Air Force contracting officer found the firm was "nonresponsible," but the Air Force overruled him and forced the award of the contract to the suspended company. Now the Air Force says there are performance problems with at least one of the contracts (on refurbishing a Titan missile silo), and that there have been cost overruns on two.

The construction company example is one of four specific examples reviewed by the Oversight Subcommittee during recent hearings into the problem. I'm sure it won't take much digging to find more.

The new chairman of the Subcommittee, Sen. Bill Cohen of Maine, and I have recommended a number of changes in the system. I think the most important of those is a requirement that when one agency debar or suspends a company, all other agencies must presume that the action is valid, and must not award contracts to the company unless sufficient justification -- such as national security -- exists and the company is the only one that can perform the required work.

This is just one of the many steps I think we must take if we are to make sure that we taxpayers are getting our money's worth.

Merit Scholarships Earned

Twelve students from Washtenaw County earned scholarship recognition for the 1981-82 school year from Washtenaw Community College for service or potential for service to their communities. Awards cover the cost of tuition for the fall and winter terms as well as $100 per term for books and supplies.

Community Merit scholarships recognize students on the basis of their significant contribution to the community, previous grades, vocational goals, and recommendations from community organizations or groups.

On behalf of the College, Student Services Dean Larry H. Hackney, Ph. D. applauds the efforts of the students chosen for awards and welcomes them to the College community. "We are very pleased that these outstanding citizens wish to further their education at Washtenaw Community College," Hackney says.

Jacquelyn Corinne Steele, 319 East Main, Manchester was awarded for her involvement with Explorer posts, the American Red Cross, and as auxiliary police officer; planned college program: criminal justice.

Also fourteen area high school students won Merit Scholarships from Washtenaw Community College for the 1981-82 academic year. The College awards one such scholarship per high school to students who distinguish themselves academically and through their activities.

"This is an effort on the part of the College to recognize outstanding achievement in high school students," according to Larry H. Hackney, Ph. D., Dean of Student Services at Washtenaw. "We are very pleased that these persons have indicated an interest in attending WCC."

High school grades figure prominently in the selection of scholarship winners, along with recommendations from the students' schools. Each award covers the cost of tuition for the fall and winter terms, plus $100 per term for books and supplies.

From Manchester, the 1981-82 High School Merit Scholar is Karl Gregerson, 19225 Sharon Valley Road, with a planned college program of dental hygiene.

News Of Good Things Growing

by Margaret G. McCall

Fresh sweet corn is one of the rewards we get for living in Michigan. Our state ranks fifth nationally in sweet corn production, according to the Michigan Department of Agriculture. Nearly nine million dozen ears of sweet corn were harvested last year, with a value of almost $7,000,000, and that translates into a lot of good things growing, and a lot of good eating.

Maybe one reason we enjoy sweet corn so much is that it's a truly native vegetable, dating back to the early years of this continent.

We take corn-on-the-cob for granted, but I remember the summer when a young French girl was living with us. She was surprised and a little dismayed when we introduced her to fresh roasted sweet corn, but returned home a confirmed devotee of corn-on-the-cob.

There's an old saying that you should pick the corn after you've put the water on to boil, and that would be ideal. Most of us can't do that, so next best is to buy the corn the same day you plan to use it, then refrigerate in the husks until cooking time.

If you're having a cookout, corn can be left in the husks, soaked in cold water for a half-hour, then cooked on the grill. Purists will carefully pull back the husks, remove the silks, and then recover the ears with the husks. If you're fixing corn for a crowd, it's a lot easier to just pull off the exposed silks and let your customers remove the remaining silks before they apply the butter and salt. The moist husks add sweetness, but I confess that these days, thanks to aluminum foil, we usually husk the corn completely, remove the silks, spread with softened butter and a sprinkle of black pepper, wrap tightly in foil and roast. It's easier, and almost as good.

If you've bought more corn than you consume in one meal, husk and boil the remaining corn (three minutes in boiling water will do it), then cut from the cob and make corn pudding.

This recipe for corn pudding is from an early Shaker cookbook, and is delicious. You'll notice all the ingredients are Michigan products. I don't think the Shakers planned it that way, but I did.

Cut and scrape enough kernels from ears of corn to make 2 cups, and set aside. Beat 3 eggs until light, add 1 cup milk and 1 1/2 cups light cream, a teaspoon of salt and a tablespoon of sugar. Stir in the corn, 2 tablespoons melted butter, and one-quarter cup of fine dry bread crumbs. Pour into greased 1 1/2 quart casserole, place the dish in a pan of boiling water, and bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour. Insert a table knife in center to determine if pudding is set.

SICK BABY

Parents who stand beside the crib of a sick baby experience frustration and worry from not knowing what's wrong and what to do. The baby's condition could be minor and temporary, or it could signal a more serious disease. How can parents know? When should the doctor be called?

No one wants to interrupt the doctor's busy schedule needlessly, but there are some symptoms that indicate a call to the doctor is in order. When a cold lasts too long, or when a mild fever gets worse or persists, when there is persistent coughing, or difficulty in breathing, call the doctor. The doctor should be called if the baby has severe diarrhea and vomiting, because these conditions cause the baby to lose a lot of fluids that could lead to dehydration. Sometimes baby's behavior pattern will change. From being an energetic, responsive child, the little one may become drowsy, whining, and listless. Or there may be abnormal twitching of the face, arms, and legs. In these events, of course, the doctor should be contacted.

When the call is made, the doctor or the receptionist will need specific information. The parent's name, and the baby's name and age, the baby's temperature, the symptoms in their sequence, and the length of time that the baby has been sick. The doctor will also want to know if the parent has treated the condition at home. If facts are presented clearly and accurately, the diagnosis and treatment can begin more quickly.

In many instances the doctor may prescribe a simple home remedy from the medicine chest, so it's a good idea to keep a few essentials on hand for the baby's ailments. A rectal thermometer is essential. Petroleum jelly, baby aspirin, band aids, sterile gauze and adhesive tape, and ointment for baby's skin are handy items to have for most minor upsets.

Of course, a few worried parents have been astonished to see their ailing baby suddenly smile and respond alertly to the doctor's presence, making them appear overprotective and foolish. Such incidents are in the minority; so when the symptoms linger, call the doctor.

UNEMPLOYMENT BILL SIGNED INTO LAW

Legislation bringing Michigan into compliance with federal unemployment standards has been signed into law by Governor Milliken.

This bill tightens eligibility requirements for individuals who apply for extended unemployment benefits, the 13 week payment granted at the end of Michigan's 26 week benefit period. Extended benefits are paid for equally by the state and federal governments.

Because Congress dramatically modified extended benefit requirements last year, we need a law to bring us into conformity with the new regulations. If we failed to change our law, Michigan employers would be subject to severe tax penalties.

The federal government pays half the cost of extended benefits through federal unemployment taxes and it can mandate changes.

In the past, these extended benefits have been cut off if the claimant failed to apply for or accept suitable work. The biggest change is in the definition of "suitable work". Before, it was interpreted to mean work related in some way to the person's previous job. Now it means any work that pays the minimum wage, is listed with the state employment service and is offered in writing.

People must actively seek work each week they are claiming extended benefits and must provide a written record of the weekly search showing the potential employer's name and address, the date the employer was contacted, the type of work applied for and the outcome of the job inquiry, under the new provisions.

This redefinition of suitable work represents a change in attitude towards unemployment benefits. These benefits were never meant to substitute for employment, but to provide enough money to help an unemployed person get through a difficult period while he or she is seeking new employment.

The new federal law states that if you don't have a definite job offer starting on a specific date, or you can't show that you expect to find work in your own field within four weeks after you file a claim for extended benefits, then you must apply for and accept any federally defined suitable work.

The State Department of Labor has been complying with the new regulations in anticipation of the proposed law.

I am pleased this bill passed without difficulty and was signed. It is retroactive to April 5, which means that anyone who fails to comply with these requirements after that date will be disqualified and required to repay any benefits he or she has received.

Soil Sampling Service Available

The Washtenaw County Soil Conservation District is now offering an Agricultural Soil Sampling Service. With this service, a District staff member will visit the property of interested landowners to take soil samples. Approximately 15 to 20 samples will be taken per 10 acres of land. One composite sample will then be made from these samples and sent to the Michigan State University Testing Laboratory for analysis. Charges for the service will be $1.50 per acre, with a 20 acre minimum required. This charge includes the MSU soil testing cost.

Following analysis, landowners will then receive a report, indicating existing available nutrients in the soil, recommendations on the amount of lime and fertilizer that can be applied, based on the type of crop to be grown on the soil; and the maximum potential yield expected from the soil type.

For further information about the Conservation District's Soil Sampling Service, interested landowners should contact the District office at 6101 Jackson Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48103. Telephone (313) 761-6721.

A Trained First Mate Is Crucial To Boating Safety

When you're out on the water, at the wheel of your pleasure boat, and a personal mishap disables you, what then skipper? Who is ready and able to carry on?

No one can tell when such an emergency might occur...or where. The important thing is, are you READY for it?

If you are a sail enthusiast you could be knocked cold by a swinging boom, or you might be dumped overboard in an unconscious state. You could stumble on deck and break an arm or leg. And boaters are not immune to vertigo or heart attack.

In any such emergency, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary warns that it could be extremely serious if you are alone. If someone else is aboard -- and many skippers choose not to cruise extensively by themselves -- capable of assuming the captain's duties, the situation becomes less critical.

Whether your first mate is your wife, your son or daughter, or a neighbor, someone aboard should be prepared to handle your boat safely in case you are disabled. In any event, before starting a cruise, all of your passengers should be thoroughly briefed on your boat, its characteristics, and its emergency equipment.

This briefing begins at the dock. Everyone should be shown the location of personal flotation devices (life jackets), fire extinguishers (and how to use them efficiently), anchors and lines, first aid kit and tool box with commonly needed spares (such as shear pins, spark plugs, etc.).

Then, before casting off, at least one member of the crew -- the designated first mate -- should be fully instructed on operation of the engine, starting and stopping it, clutch operation, determining fuel supply, use of the lighting system, the radiotelephone and related basics.

All aboard the boat should be familiar with rough weather procedures and how to deal with grounding of the boat in shallow water.

"Man overboard" is a very serious situation, especially when it happens to befall the skipper. The first mate should be capable of maneuvering the boat for a safe pickup. Crew members should know the location of life rings, poles, lines and similar equipment.

Accidents aboard a boat are not uncommon. Usually they occur when someone becomes careless. Regardless of the circumstances that might disable the skipper, he or she should make certain, in advance, that someone else aboard is sufficiently familiarized to insure that a vessel and injured party reach shore SAFELY and QUICKLY.

Remember, the skipper of a boat is responsible for the safety of his craft and all of the passengers aboard. SAFE boating is FUN!

For information about sail and power boating courses offered by Flotilla 17-03 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, or a free safety examination of your boat, call Flotilla Commander Alber Chaffee, 313/449-4674, between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.

Michigan Frontier Entertainment Festival

The Eighth Annual Michigan Frontier Entertainment Festival will be held August 1 & 2 (Saturday and Sunday) at the Walker Tavern Historic Complex in the Cambridge Junction State Park, Secretary of State Richard H. Austin announced today.

Featuring Michigan frontier life between 1830 and 1850, the festival includes pioneer pastimes, music, games, dancing, crafts, whittling, rug hooking, tanning, lacemaking, quilting, and spelling bees for adults and children between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

Thursday, July 30, 1981 The Manchester Enterprise Page 11

The Walker Tavern and historic complex on M-50 (Old Chicago Road) served as a stopping place in Lenawee county for westward bound pioneers and a local meeting place during the last century. Exhibits in the complex show nineteenth century agriculture, travel, and living. Films on frontier life also will be shown.

Both the tavern and complex, including an exhibit center and restored barn, are operated by the Michigan Department of State. The historic park is operated by the Department of Natural Resources. Admission is free.

Further information may be obtained from the Walker Tavern Historic Complex at (517) 467-4414 or the Michigan Historical Museum in Lansing at (517) 373-1979.

New Model Replacing State Picnic Tables

NEW LOOK FOR ROADSIDE PICNIC TABLES—These rustic wood picnic tables seem far so many years along Michigan highways are slowly giving way to a new type of table. The new style, made of concrete and wood, is non-portable, and the Michigan Department of Transportation says it's virtually theft-proof, and cheaper and easier to maintain. The department plans to replace the wooden standbys in its 76 freeway rest areas with the new style when the old tables become too weatherbeaten for further use. Here, traveling families enjoy a picnic on the old (top) and the new.

70 and Out

Delbert D. Ludwick has retired as office Manager of Manchester Tool & Die, Inc., effective July 31.

Born in Sturgis, Michigan, and raised in Burr Oak, Del 'rode the rails' with his family during his youth. His Dad was employed as a section foreman for the New York Central with 44 years service. His older brother, Bill, is a retired CPA for the Guardsman Chemical in Grand Rapids. Del earned the rank of Eagle Scout in the Boy Scouts of America.

After completing Accounting and Banking at South Bend Business College in 1929, he began work in the display advertising department of the South Bend News Times. This newspaper folded in the depression. For the next couple of years, Del worked at the Sandusky (Ohio) Daily News. Odd jobs and the WPA followed until a job in the appliance department at Montgomery Ward's in Sturgis. One of his co-workers in the store was Dorothy (Defender) Miller. He began his railroad

Athletic Boosters Concern

The Manchester Athletic Boosters met on July 29 at the Manchester High School. The purpose of this meeting was for a discussion on the upcoming millage of 4 mills for the Athletic Program. The increase of 4 mill per thousand is such a small amount to pay for the total amount of satisfaction that the community derives from it. The concerns of the Athletic Boosters is that there is no way that money can be raised to supplement the program. If the people of Manchester School District vote down this 4 mill that is being requested there will not be any Athletic program offered what so ever this year. The request is only a portion of what is needed to conduct the program at the Middle and High School. The balance of the amount needed will be paid by the athletes who compete in the different programs. We, the Boosters, urge all of the voters of the Manchester School District to vote Yes on this request. Thank you for your support.

Vogel.

The budget committee received requests from participating agencies in the amount of $31,784.00. After thorough review of all requests, including presentations by executives of the various agencies, the campaign goal of $26,286.00 was recommended.

Raisin River Cleanup

The newly formed Manchester Men's Club (formerly Jaycees) assumed the task of cleaning the banks, removing dead logs, cutting decaying trees and brush along the Raisin River. This ongoing project will continue as long as necessary. The area of primary concern is South from the Main Street bridge to the Furnace Street bridge. Work crews will meet each Sunday at 10:00 a.m. in the lot behind the Bauerenstube. The Manchester Men's Club would like to encourage riverfront property owners to participate in the cleanup and place a cardboard sign on decaying trees which they would like cut down or trimmed. Co-chairmen for the project are Bill Cannon and Don Limpert. Anyone not in the Men's Club but interested in donating time or equipment, should contact Project Coordinator, Jeff Fahey 428-9306. Our ultimate objective is to beautify and maintain the Raisin River environment.

Attention Class Of 83

Special School Election Monday, August 10th

A special election for the Manchester Community Schools will be held on Monday, August 10. The citizens will be asked to cast their votes for the following three propositions:

- I. MILLAGE RENEWAL PROPOSITION
Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Manchester Community Schools, Washtenaw and Jackson Counties, Michigan, be increased by 17.78 mills ($17.78 on each $1,000.00) on state equalized valuation for a period of 2 years, 1981 and 1982, for the purpose of providing additional funds for operating purposes (this being a renewal of 17.78 mills for operating purposes which expired with the 1980 tax levy)?
- II. TAX RATE LIMITATION INCREASE PROPOSITION FOR OPERATING PURPOSES
Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Manchester Community Schools, Washtenaw and Jackson Counties, Michigan, be increased by 1.5 mills ($1.50 on each $1,000.00) on state equalized valuation for the year 1981, for the purpose of providing additional operating funds to replace losses in state reimbursement funds for transportation costs, and for maintenance and repair of school facilities?
- III. TAX RATE LIMITATION INCREASE PROPOSITION TO SUPPORT A REDUCED ATHLETIC PROGRAM
Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Manchester Community Schools, Washtenaw and Jackson Counties, Michigan, be increased by .4 mill ($0.40 on each $1,000.00) on state equalized valuation for the year 1981, for the purpose of providing additional operating funds to support a reduced athletic program?
