Ms. Yvonne Henry Nominated As Teacher Of The Year

L to R - School Board President Paul DuFrane, Teacher Yvonne Henry and Superintendent Gene Thompson.

The Manchester Board of Education has taken official action to designate Ms. Yvonne Henry, a second grade teacher, as Teacher of the Year. This action was taken upon recommendation of Superintendent Gene Thompson and her building principal, Janice Hammond.

In her nomination of Ms. Henry for the honor, Hammond described her as, "One of our most enthusiastic, creative teachers. Ms. Henry makes learning exciting, challenging and fun."

Henry's work in career education has been noted throughout the State. She annually conducts a new career education unit with her second graders complete with job applications, payroll, and assembly line production. She has been invited to present these programs at State and local conferences.

During the Fall of 1962 Henry initiated and coordinated an American Education Week public relations project. An empty shop on Main Street in Manchester was utilized on a Saturday to inform shoppers about school programs. Henry coordinated volunteer efforts, arranged for equipment and demonstrations, and with her personal enthusiasm made the project a success. She published a report of this program in the Michigan School Board Journal with Hammond.

In addition, Ms. Henry has worked hard to develop a computer education program at Klager. Her second graders begin to learn programming and print statements. She invites students to her home on weekends to enable them to learn more about computers and to get to know her in a personal way.

Thompson noted, "Ms. Henry works well with all other teachers and administrators. She is not hesitant to take on extra responsibilities. Currently she is a chairperson of our Young Author's Celebration Day, and recently produced a very clever evening performance of plays and puppet shows for parents."

Board of Education President, Paul DuFrane, observed that "Activities such as recognizing teachers like Yvonne Henry make the job of being on the Board of Education a fun task."

Henry now becomes the school district nominee to the State Department of Education for Teacher of the Year. Thompson stated that he felt she had an excellent chance to be recognized for this honor.

HIT or MISS by farley

A friend of mine told me the other day that he was greatly astonished when his daughter asked him "What is Memorial Day in memory of? Her question also startled us. I have always complained about our ignorance of our traditions and this question surprised me a great deal.

This lack of a sense of tradition is a result of our rootlessness which developed socially and geographically during the past thirty years as we became a very mobile nation. Before then many of us developed in one location and our roots were deeply entrenched in the location in which we and several generations of our family were born, grew up and lived their lives.

When I was a kid, Memorial (or as then called Decoration Day) was a big event. It was widely discussed in school, particularly in the grades, and all the children in all grades took part in its observance. I remember that the day before the holiday the children from each grade brought flowers from their home gardens and lilac bushes to the hall-way on the first floor of the court house (in Jackson where I grew up) and there under the supervision of their teachers, the youngsters made up small bouquets which, the morning of Memorial, groups of the children took to the cemeteries in town and reverently placed on each soldier's grave, which had been decorated with a new small American flag, a bouquet of these flowers. Then the children hurried home and dressed up to take part in the parade in which groups from all the various fraternal and other organizations took part accompanied by the school bands and the town band.

Upon arriving at the cemetery, a rather lengthy program was presented with songs by school groups and a proud high school student recitates Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and usually a politically prominent personage gave a very stirring speech containing many references to "our boys" both living and deceased who had given so much for their country and stressed that we owed them such a great deal by making these United States the safe and "best place on earth" in which to live. The program, of course closed with the playing of Taps and the salute by the firing squad.

My father was a Civil War veteran and when the parade had reformed and marched back down town the members of the Grand Army of the Republic made their way to their meeting rooms on the fourth floor of the Court House where the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps had spent most of the day preparing a feast for the members and following the feast a social evening was indulged in until the wee small hours. In my memory Decoration Day was as important as Christmas or the Fourth of July. I am not a professional patriot but it seems that nowadays we don't give Memorial Day its due. To many it is just another Monday when we don't have to go to work. The government has even juggled the date around—moved it from its original date of May 30th. Its significance seems lost to many of the present generation, but may we take time to explain its meaning to our children who need it—that it is the day on which we should pause to honor all those who fought and those who died to preserve our freedom and our way of life and helped to spread the doctrines of freedom throughout the world, and may we give thanks to the "old timers" who carry the flags and struggle into their uniforms on that day to keep alive a tradition that should be a part of our background.

Now its not Decoration Day nor Memorial Day, it's Veterans Day, but what's the difference what it is called, the same spirit should prevail.

EARLY DEADLINE!

SAVE THEM

The Pretty Oaks In Our Cemetery
Should Be Left

A reprint from the Manchester Enterprise, dated April 28, 1904.

Noticing the statement in last week's ENTERPRISE that the township board intended to cut down the oak trees in beautiful oak grove cemetery, to save the expense of raking up the leaves that fall, we cannot forbear uttering a protest in behalf of all lovers of the beautiful and fitting; and asking that the hand of desecration be stayed, and the natural beauties of our cemetery, so much more beautiful than any artificial ornamentation, be kept unchanged, as far as possible.

We agree with the editor that the destruction of those noble trees will detract very greatly from the beauty of the grounds, and think that the expense of disposing of the leaves cannot be so great as to furnish cause for complaint.

Many towns expend far more in money and labor caring for and beautifying their cemeteries, and often plant trees instead of cutting them down, yet they cannot compare with ours because of its natural beauty of location and its crowning glory of trees which "have outlived so long the fitting generation of mankind."

Indeed, we feel that such a serious step should not be taken without consulting the wishes of our many citizens many of whose loved ones lie beneath the shelter of those lofty old oaks whose gently swaying branches murmur a perpetual requiem.

It is a comfort to the living to know that the last resting place of their friends is softened and made beautiful by the changing hues of foliage and flowers instead of being "naked rows of graves and melancholy ranks of monuments."

Then let the old trees stand! They have stood for ages past, let them stand for ages to come, and every summer cast a wider shade over our beautiful, unspoiled "city of the dead," Oak Grove.

Evelyn Spafard

Memorial Day

At Gettysburg, at San Juan Hill,
In Flanders Fields now all is still,
But men still drill and march away
Like you who made Memorial Day.

In Normandy, and on Bataan,
At Inchon, Khe Sanh, and in Iran,
Selflessly the need you met,
And now we know we must not forget.

Those who fought and those who fell,
To hear the bell of freedom knell,
We crouch beside your graves today;
These wreaths of vernal buds to lay.

And to you who died for freedom's sake,
A pledge to carry on we make:
The torch that you so bravely bore
Shall be our beacon evermore.

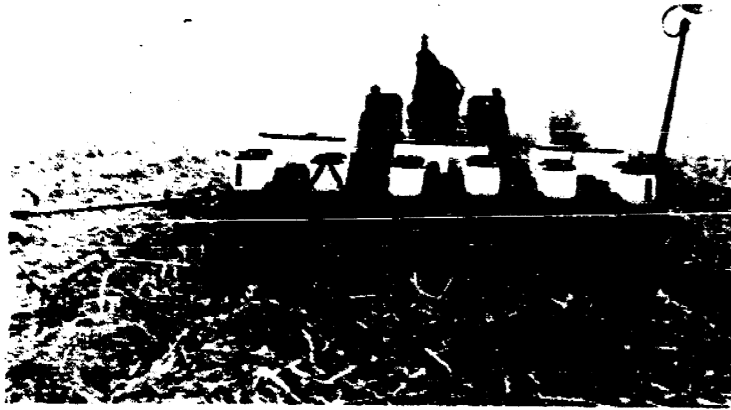

We pray that by its guiding light
We'll find our course and hold it right,
We hope it may throughout the years
Bring an end to blood and tears.

For we're a nation proud and free,
And sometimes it is hard to see
Where friendship for our cause abides
And where a foe of freedom hides.

You have found peace while we still weep
And wait o'er charges we must keep,
There'll be no peace until we find
A way that's just for all mankind. —William J. Acker

Saline Valley No-Till Project

Manchester area dairy farmer Earl Horning plants corn no-till this spring through standing stubble of last season's crop. Earl was the first of 18 farmers to participate in the no-till planter lease program sponsored by the Washtenaw County Soil and Water Conservation District and the Saline Valley Project.

Eighteen farmers from "Dexter to Dundee" are planting crops no-till through the Washtenaw County Soil and Water Conservation District and Saline Valley Project's no-till planter program. The program is making available so farmers can experiment with no-till crop production under their own farm conditions. Eighty acres of soybeans and 510 acres of corn are to be planted through the lease program this season.

No-till crop production involves planting crops in fields which have not been plowed or otherwise worked. No-till planters are specially equipped to plant seed through crop residues and existing vegetation found on unplowed fields. "We're planting no-till over a wide range of conditions with this program: on sandy loam to loam soils and through corn stalks, soybean stubble, rye cover and sod", reports Ron Struss, Extension Agricultural Agent working with the Saline Valley Project. "We're looking forward to the yield results of these fields this fall."

John Whitney, an Agricultural Engineering Technology major at Michigan State University, is serving an internship with the Saline Valley Project assisting farmers with the operation and adjustment of the planter. The Washtenaw County Soil and Water Conservation District and the Saline Valley Project, Rural Clean Water Program, USDA, are promoting wider use of no-till planting because of the excellent soil erosion control it provides, leading to more productive farmland and cleaner water.

Summer Programs Available For High Schoolers

Do you want to be productive this summer? Do you want to learn something new? Are you aware that this summer in Michigan there are more workshops, classes, and learning experiences than ever before for high school students? Some of these are for personal growth and development, some are for intellectual stimulation, some are just for fun, and many offer college credit.

When planning your summer activities be sure to consider some of the following. Adrian College is having a five day pre-law institute for high school juniors who are interested in becoming lawyers. Computer programming workshops and camps abound all over the state. Both Jackson Community College and Washtenaw Community College are offering dozens of classes for high school students. Ferris State has two separate workshops in television production. Michigan State University provides workshops for future engineers.

Michigan Tech for years has offered excellent week-long classes in such diverse subjects as backpacking, engineering, computers, small engines, drama, and photography. Through Eastern Michigan's U-tag program, high school students with a 3.0 grade point average or higher can receive college credit for taking classes in subjects such as world geography, computer programming, beginning Spanish, and the mass media in America. These are just a few examples of the multitude of programs available this summer. It is not too late to apply. To learn more about any of these or other programs contact Mr. Parson in the High School guidance office.

Manchester Schools Honors Retirees

Susan Davis lauds her friend Mae Hardenbergh.

Retirees Mary and Maynard Blossom

At a staff banquet held Saturday evening at the Beuerehouse Restaurant in Manchester and at a reception afterwards at the Manchester Sportsmans Club, teacher retiree's Theodore Tapping, Maynard Blossom, Mary Blossom and Mae Hardenbergh were honored. Mr. Tapping, who is a teacher at the Manchester Middle Schools, retired after 29 years of service to the school district. During part of that time he was principal of the Middle School before deciding to return to the classroom. Tapping commented, "When I first came to Manchester I did not expect to stay this long. But my life here has been very rewarding." Husband and wife team, Maynard and Mary Blossom, will be retiring after a combined career of 42 years in Manchester. Mr. Blossom, who is a government teacher at Manchester High School, was roared by his friend English teacher, Leonard Hastings.

Ted Tapping remembering 29 years in Manchester.

Following the roast, Hastings remarked, "I hope you are still my friend." Mary Blossom, who teaches fourth grade at Klager Elementary was lauded by her principal and several of the Klager teachers for her caring ways with children. Forming a chorus line the Klager teachers serenaded Mrs. Blossom to the tune of "Hello Dolly".

Library/Media Specialist, Mae Hardenbergh concluded her tenure with the Manchester Schools after 18 years of service. German teacher, Susan Davis, wished Mrs. Hardenbergh well as she remarked that the library was always a special place of assistance for teachers and students and that Mrs. Hardenbergh would be missed by all.

Board of Education Treasurer David Little presented special plaques of recognition to each of the retirees. During his presentation Little commented upon the many student's lives who had been positively influenced by each of the four retiring teachers. "My own children's lives have been immeasurably benefited from having been in each of your classrooms", said Little. Noted for his quips Little remarked, "The only people who won't miss you are those who move up the seniority list with your retirement." The evening concluded with dancing and other social activities by the approximately 100 staff members who were in attendance.

Our fourth graders are helping the kindergarteners by taking dictation from them and helping them make a book in the shape of their story.
