Reprint from the Manchester Enterprise, dated August 23, 1877

Last week we spent two days in visiting among friends in Sharon and Grass Lake. To a person who is cooped up in a store or office from early in the morning until late at night, there is nothing more healthful and invigorating roof. than a ride through the country, where every breath seems to impart new life and the change gives one an appetite which astonishes him, and increases his anxiety for the safety of certain necessary buttons.

The very timely rains of the past few days had laid the dust, and it was comfortable riding although the sun was scorching hot. If shade trees were more plentiful along the road it would add greatly to the pleasure of both man and beast. And here, let account of the high prices paid. us say that Patrick McMahon informed us that he intended to set fruit trees along his fences, and wished us to urge the farmers to do likewise.' We think his judgement is sound for he will not only secure ample shade, but the fruit likewise. Some farmers may say the boys and tramps will steal all the fruit. What if they do, better have them take that than for them to go into your orchards. By all means set out fruit trees.

When the shades of night began to fall, we stopped at the house of George E. Osburn, near the stone school house, where we were heartily welcomed by himself and family with whom we had a pleasant visit. Mr. Osburn has a farm of 80 acres of excellent land, nearly every foot of which is under cultivation and well stocked. He making is improvements such as laying stone and rail fences, repairing his barns, etc.. Fruit, apples in particular, is very scarce throughout Sharon, but the farmers will at least have enough for their own use.

The Clawson wheat appears to be the favorite in Sharon, and those who have had grists ground from it claim that it makes more superior flour and more of it than any other wheat they have ever raised.

We next visited our old townsman, Wm. Freeman, at his new home about 1½ miles southeast of Grass Lake village. We found our friend and his family in a very pleasant section of country; the land is slightly rolling, rich and productive. They have a large convenient house,

We have never known the farmers to appear as happy and contented as they do now. They have abundant crops with good demand and fair prices for all their products; truly they are the favored ones.

New Outlet For Area Talent

The Manchester Art Guild opened a new gallery outlet last Saturday, February 11 with a punch and cookie reception. After about a year without a "home" it's good to see the group visible again to downtown Manchester.

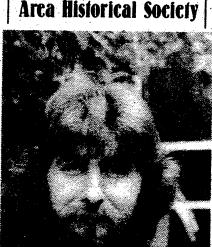

And visible they are. The Guild abandoned its gallery early last year, reluctantly, because its location off the theater lobby was difficult for some to reach and volunteer staffing became a problem. Now back anew, in cooperation with businessman Matt Donnellon, we have a refreshing look at the products of our local talent.

"Manchester Outlet", located at 146 East Main Street, is just the right size for the Guild to exhibit and sell their fine art and craft work. It is impressive to see their continual maintainance of high quality standards throughout the years. Interesting, for the casual visitor to the "Manchester Outlet", is the variety of work appearing of its walls and also displayed within the rustic charm of weathered crates.

Three Manchester watercolorists are showing currently in the Ann Arbor Women Painters exhibition. Two have several paintings in the outlet: Nancy Feldkamp and Ardella Swanberg, Joyce Sysol is the third; perhaps we'll see some of her work in the future. Scenes of local farms are common ground for the two, style is their departure. Nancy's landscapes are sensitive yet rustic. Ardella paints with a brighter palette and a flair influenced by the style of Spanish painters with which she became familiar while living in that country a number of years ago.

A fascinating study in "point of view" is illustrated in two farm landscapes by the two different

Winter In Manchester

By Marie Schneider

There's been plenty of snow this winter making it easy for kids to give their sleds and skates a real workout. Skating in the park delights them and they are making the most of it when not in Herb Widmayer remembers when he was a little fellow the streets would be covered with snow and there was no salt on the roads.

Bob sleds, cutters, teams and sleighs were main ways of winter transportation in and around the village. He and his friends liked to grab hold of the farmers rigs as they were leaving town but they didn't hold on very long for they soon began to remember they'd have to back track and there might not be any sleighs coming this way. Could be quite a hike

Cutting ice in winter from the Raisin River and storing it for summer use was quite a business. John Bowler had an ice house on the north side of Furnace Street where he stored ice to be used at the meat market in the summer. Sloats had an ice house in back of their saloon next to the river. All of the meat markets had to store ice for summer use as did the saloons. Other saloon owners included Shorty and Pete Staib, Robert Mahrle, Wm. Lehr, Nick Singer and Fred Dietle. Storing ice in the winter was the sure way of having some in the summer.

Ice cream came from Ypsilanti on the morning train packed in ice and was delivered by Casper Burger and his team to day's work and it wasn't an Snowman's Drug Store and Pete Johnson's Ice Cream Parlor in received $1.10 a day for 10 hours later years. Burger also made deliveries to Marx & Marx Clothing, Schaible's Clothing, C.H. Seckinger Grocery and G.H. Breitenwischer's Men Women's Clothing.

Widmayer remembers his father carried really good horse blankets. Another speciality were long fur coats and heavy winter caps. Some were called Scotch Caps made of wool with a peak in front and sporting a high top. Some of the lovely horse blankets found their way to the family bed for a while before being used by the horses.

Then there were the heavy wind-proof clothes sold by Wuerthner Brothers. There were socks made of heavy thick felt like a rubber boot that came up to just below the knee and then fit into a rubber boot. Probably one of the last people here to wear such an outfit was Charlie Jinks who lived north of town. He'd ride in bringing loads of hay that he sold at the hay house across the railroad from the freight house. There was a livestock yard between the hay house and the oil building. It operated every Saturday and over night the stock would be in Buffalo. This was managed by Al Kuebler.

William Armspoker contact farmers in advance so that there would not be too much or too little stock to go. Most of the farmers took the Toledo Blade. That paper had the latest livestock market so they'd know what the prices would be. Armspoker lived across the street from where Joe Schwab now lives.

There was a time when Manchester had 16 passenger trains and 4 freight trains a day. Roy Kern's father, Fred, worked on the railroads in the 1880's. He was a foreman on the railroad between Manchester Bridgewater. He soon found that winter had its own way of making things tough. He and his men would shovel the snow away from the tracks by hand, board the handcar and go a little farther and proceed as before until the tracks between here and Bridgewater were opened. They would clear out the cuts where the snow would be piled high.

All this had to be done before the railroads' snow-plow could come through the area and make way for the trains. His father carried an oblong dinner pail to work. A cup on top set in the cover held the coffee. It was not uncommon to find the coffee frozen. It would have to be thawed at the car-house where they had a stove to get warm. Then, too, the sandwiches would be frozen and have to be thawed before eating. This was all in a eight-hour day. Roy's father of work. Then from the car-house

By Jon Hardenbergh The Manchester Volleyball team stepped in to a tough spiker conference as two of the Cascade teams are in the state class rankings. One of these squads is Napoleon and we got buried by them this week. They iust served, set and spiked to send us right home 7-15 and 5-15. Next we hosted Michigan Center, a hard fought close match but Center prevailed. Betsy Royle led the spikers with 11 as Sarah Platt posted 19 sets. Lisa Rickelmann had 10 points. We are now 0-7 in the league.

As winners of the 1983 Big Tree Contest, Mr. and Mrs. Esch received a plaque to mark the tree, a tree identification handbook, a certificate for 100 tree seedlings and a $25.00 cash prize presented by the Tri-County Logging Company. All prizes were presented at the Soil Conservation District Annual Meeting held February 7, 1984.

Is this Michigan or Siberia? The tundra-like conditions that mid-Michigan residents were recently forced to endure are tough enough on even the most fit person but doubly bad for the patient with chronic lung problems.

In an effort to help you to better cope with winter's icy the American Lung Association of Michigan is offering some suggestions for taking care of your lungs. Most of what can be said about keeping warm in the frigid Michigan winter is only common sense, but it's helpful to keep these tips in mind. Remember, the effects of the cold can be severe and can put an added burden on already hard-

First, use an air warming mask. Breathing cold air often causes spasm of the breathing passages which results in shortness of breath and coughing. Walk more slowly and allow more time to get where you're going. Though it may be next to impossible at times, try to stay out of the wind. When going outdoors, choose

The proper humidity level in a home can cut down on respiratory infections, keep nose and throat dryness to a minimum, help eliminate dust and reduce static electricity, and make it "feel" warmer too. Another alternative is to use smaller table top or console humidifiers capable of maintaining the proper humidity level in two or more rooms. But remember to keep the humidifier clean since the device is often a favorite breeding ground for mold and fungi.

During the long cold Michigan winter, try to avoid large crowds. No one wants you to become a hermit, but avoiding crowds lessens the chance of picking up an infection. Another cold weather hint is to avoid smokefilled rooms. Secondhand smoke is never good for you, but in the winter it's even harder on the lungs since it cuts down on the capacity to take in fresh air. Be sure to properly vent space heaters and cooking stoves. That little woodburner that's so cozy on cold wintry nights might otherwise be an aggravation to your respiratory problem.

As always, you should, if you suffer from a chronic lung ailment, consult with your doctor at the first sign of a cold. Get your doctor's opinion on whether you should have an annual influenza shot. It's also very important in the winter to adequately stoke your INTERNAL furnace. Don't neglect a proper diet just because it's cold outdoors and your cabin Continued on page 8 had 8 points by mid first period and then went cold. We passed them and led 12-8 after 8 minutes. It took the Redskins some 4 more minutes to tally and by this time we had 22. Clinton then rallied to trail by 9 at the half. The next period saw us pull away as we. outscored them 17 to 8 to lead 38-24. In the final stanza the reserves saw action as the end brought a 50-39 score.

DRINKING AND PREGNANCY

The week of January 15, 1984, was designated by the Congress and proclaimed by the President as "Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Awareness Week." And with good reason: fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS) ranks only behind Down's syndrome and spina bifida as the most common cause of birth defects with associated mental retardation in newborn babies. If you are pregnant or are thinking about having a baby, FAS is a health problem that you should know something about.

Almost everyone is aware that alcohol abuse over a period of time can contribute to a number of serious disorders in adults, including massle and heart disease, malnutrition, digestive problems and liver cirrhosis. It should not surprise us to learn, therefore, that alcohol, when abused during pregnancy, can also damage the far more delicate system of the unborn baby,

For a number of years, now, researchers have been studying infants born to women who drank heavily during their pregnancies. What they have found in a significant number of these infants is a disturbing pattern of physical, mental and behavioral abnormalities - fetal alcohol syndrome. Babies with FAS were shorter and lighter in weight than normal babies, and they didn't "catch up" later, even when given special postnatal care.

Babies with FAS also had abnormally small heads, several facial irregularities, joint and limb abnormalities, heart defects and poor coordination. Most were mentally retarded, as well, and exhibited a number of behavioral problems, such as hyperactivity. extreme nervousness and poor attention spans.

Not every symptom of FAS was seen in every baby, of course; symptoms varied from child to child. But even one symptom of fetal alcohol syndrome is an unnecessary tragedy. The point to be made, and remembered, is that alcohol can have devastating effects on the unborn baby. So, how should you approach the question of drinking during pregnancy? What should you think about it and what, if anything, should you do?

Research is just now beginning to show the amount of alcohol that may harm the developing baby. While there are, as of yet, no hard and fast rules, we do know that even moderate amounts of alcohol pose a risk to the unborn baby. Women who consume two normalsize drinks a day, for example, increase their chances of miscarriage and of having a baby that is smaller than babies born to women who drink infrequently or not at all. Women who drink heavily during pregnancy - six or more drinks a day - clearly risk giving birth to a child with fetal alcohol syndrome.

not know about fetal alcohol Information Specialists for the syndrome. We are not sure, for instance, at what time during pregnancy the fetus is most susceptible to the damaging hours each, effects of alcohol. Nor do we know Thursdays, beginning March 20, to what extent the effects of 1984, and continuing through drinking may be compounded by April 12, 1984. Upon successful such other factors as smoking and poor nutrition. Until all the facts are in, however, the best advice I can offer women who are pregnant or who want to become pregnant is to refrain, completely, from drinking alcoholic beverages. If we do not yet have all the answers, at least two facets of the drinking - and - pregnancy problem are beyond dispute: first, the more the mother drinks, the greater are the risks she takes with the health of her unborn baby; second, there is NO possibility of fetal damage from resources and services," Jane alcohol when the mother doesn't Hoey, coordinator of the program, drink at all.

The safest and wisest choice, I'm sure you will agree, is to avoid alcohol during this most important time of both your life and your baby's.
