[From Our Own Correspondent]

Some members of the first families of rascals made this town a passing call on Saturday night. Three members were seen prowling around that evening, so it is conceded by all that there were three of the detestable gentry. One man entered the house of D.R. Gibson, went near the bed where two young ladies were sleeping, and from some cause one of them awoke; as she did so she saw a man dodge down so as to be hid by the edge of the bed. A lamp was burning at the time, thus she got a view of his hat and coat. During this time she was trying to awaken her companion, and the burglar was also creeping toward the door, which he reached just as young lady No. 2 awoke. They both got up and searched the house, but found no one.

In an attempt to enter the dwelling of Henry Larzerleer, the burglars raised a window, the noise of which aroused Mrs. L., which defeated the designs of these night prowlers.

The dwelling of G. Dwight Kies was also visited; here also a light was burning. Mrs. Kies awoke, probably from the noise of the door knob, as it was being turned. Mrs. K. succeeding in awakening her husband, who got up, and searched the house, which doubtless frightened the burglars away.

This night patrol made an entry into F.W. Freeze's house, through the chamber window, which they reached by means of a ladder. Here also the woman awoke and arousing Mr. F., they distinctly heard the snap of a board, which was a sure indication that someone was walking in the chamber. Mr. F. called to his son to inquire if he was up; being answered in the negative, he took a light and went up the stairs, expecting to meet some one; as he did so, he heard some person descending the ladder outside, who in their great haste to reach the ground fell through the ladder, making considerable noise in their rapid descent. The night prowlers made a draft of a watch, at Mr. F.'s, which is all the plunder known to be taken. Clinton women are too easily awakened for successful burglarizing.

Mary Ann Fielder Teacher Of The Year

Since this is American Education Week, Manchester Community Schools would like to take this opportunity to honor Mrs. Mary Ann Fielder who was selected as our 1984-85 Teacher of the Year.

Mrs. Fielder was nominated for this award by Mr. Brian Schick, middle school principal. The following excerpts from Mr. Schick's nominating petition give a clear picture of why Mrs. Fielder was deserving of such an honor:

—Mrs. Fielder's influence and involvement are very visible throughout the middle school program.

—Her leadership skills and her willingness to put in those "extra hours" have served as a "model" for teachers and students alike.

—It is unusual to have a staff member who is so flexible and qualified to teach such a variety of classes (reading, science, algebra, spelling, German, computer basics and literature).

—Extracurricular commitments to Mathcounts Competition, Cascades Spelling Bee, Toronto Trip, and cheerleading require organizational skills and dedication.

—Her personality and teaching style certainly put her in the class of "master teacher".

Manchester Community Schools is very fortunate to have teachers like Mary Ann Fielder and wish to thank her for her efforts.

For the employees at Manchester Plastics, Inc. fund-raising is spelled "fun-raising". The recently completed United Way Campaign provided fun, games & prizes for employees while bringing in record donations for United Way. Everyone got

On Tuesday, we squared off against Whitmore Lake and when the game ended the scoreboard read 36-24 our favor. Dawn Brady was high scorer with 20 points.

Our next battle was in Clinton on Thursday night. The first meeting with Clinton, which happened to be the first game of the season, we left victorious by 1 point. The score this time was 38-28, our favor, which shows our improvement over this season. Sarah Corwin led all scorers popping for 16 points, as Dawn Brady hit in double figures with 11.

Snowmobile Trails Expanded

Nine of the nation's most prominent snowmobiling vacation spots, located in Michigan, now give snowmobilers access to a 300-mile trail that covers the full length of the Upper Peninsula (U.P.).

Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Forest Management personnel recently expanded the trails to stretch from the northern tip of the Keweenaw Peninsula to the southern edge of the Wisconsin boundary. The trails will also run east to west from Ironwood to Sault St. Marie.

"Because vacationing snowmobilers are a vital part of the UP's economy, it is always the goal of our Department to provide easements for guests of our State to use the trails," said Forest Management Division Chief Henry Webster.

Ordinarily used from the middle of December through April, the trails run through Covington, Michigamee, Gwinn, Munising and Wakefield.

The DNR and private contractors will maintain and groom the trails for public use through March.

Free snowmobile trail maps may be obtained at all DNR District Offices and the DNR Information Services Center in Lansing.

We hosted the 3rd State ranked Whitmore Lake Trojans on Tuesday. We played tough and 3 minutes into the 3rd period lead 24-22. Unfortunately Whitmore Lake started putting it all together and sailed to the easy 52-36 win.

Because of Parent Teacher Conferences in our building, we were forced to travel to Clinton on Thursday. The Redskins did everything right as we missed chance after chance. The final score was 62-41 with Kim Lockridge playing her best game of the season in scoring 10 points.

Agriculture In Action

BIRDS GOTTA FLY....

Birds gotta fly, fish gotta swim, according to the lines of an old song. By the same reasoning, you might add farmers gotta farm. It's in their blood, but what's in their blood is causing problems.

While farmers keep producing for markets that aren't there, prices go down, warehouses overflow, storage costs soar...and the process is repeated each year. It's a cycle that has forced many farmers off the land because they simply could not meet mounting debts.

Fortunately, many non-farmers are beginning to realize that agriculture has a tremendous impact on the nation's economy. With that awareness, there is more concern and a better understanding of the myriad forces that shape the future of farming in the U.S.

This non-farming public is beginning to see that farm issues are so complicated and interwoven with politics, foreign affairs, trade policy and the world economy, that finding workable solutions isn't easy. They see rural communities drying up as merchants go broke and local governments lose a large percentage of the tax base that supports schools and other public services, and they know something must be done.

With farmers and non-farmers pulling together, perhaps Washington will listen to the message that the opportunity for profit in agriculture is the marketplace, not by producing for the government warehouse.

Good Habits for Hunting Rabbits

For rabbit hunters in Michigan, all roads lead to thickets, swales, cedar swamps, pine plantations, and other such likely spots at this time of the year. Here are a few basic pointers which should get them on the right track for action this winter, whether they'll be going after cottontails and snowshoes with or without dogs. In general, it's a good idea to start hunting early in the day when the tracks are fresh or right after a snowfall. Of course, whenever you get the chance, it's the right time for rabbit hunting, provided the weather isn't downright miserable.

Lucky for me I just happen to have an extra long tape measure.

The largest county in the country is San Bernardino, California. At 20,117 square miles, it's larger than nine states.

I come now to debate the anonymous wit who once observed that a chessboard is nothing more than a checkerboard with delusions of grandeur.

Some of the Drueke game boards and sets are made in miniature (pocket-sized) for the convenience of those who like their games on the go. During World War II, more than one million of the little Drueke game sets went off to war with our nation's soldiers.

So, if you're shopping for a Drueke chessboard, don't go to the toy department. Try fine furniture or gifts.

In any case, let's keep making it - and buying it - in Michigan!

But chess is not the company's only game. I discovered on a recent visit. It also produces vital accessories and necessities for nearly all the games that people play - checkers, backgammon, skittles, cribbage, poker, dominoes and even roulette. Nonetheless, the company got its start (in the basement of the Drueke home in northwest Grand Rapids) making quality, in-laid chessboards and now, more than 70 years later, chessboards remain the company's premier product. Did you ever examine an in-laid board and wonder how it's done? I did too, until I saw it happen: The artisans (master woodworkers) glue alternating strips of walnut (dark) and maple (light) wood together and then cut them cross-wise. Each of the resulting strips are then tongue-and-grooved and joined to another strip so that the colors alternate by rank as well as file in neat rows. The board thus formed is edged with beveled walnut and the finishing process begins: sanding, varnishing and polishing. It's beautiful work, in the grand tradition of the Grand Rapids furniture makers.

Use of Mammography In Early Detection of Breast Cancer

Janet K. Baum, M.D., Director of Radiology at Chelsea Community Hospital and U-M Clinical Assistant Professor of Radiology, is one of four researchers whose article on the use of mammography by physicians and patients was published in the September issue of Radiology, published by the Radiological Society of North America. The article states that mammography, the most effective method of early detection of breast cancer in women over 35, is widely underused by physicians and patients instead of becoming a preferred mass screening technique. The research has also shown that two other breast cancer screening methods, breast self-examination and clinical examination by a physician, are performed more frequently than mammography but are also underused to some extent. The researchers would like to encourage radiologists to have family physicians and other health care practitioners launch a massive education effort to convince patients of the importance of mammography in breast cancer screening.

According to Dr. Baum, "Mammography should now be brought into parity with breast self-examination and clinical examination as an equal partner in screening for breast cancer. Repeated regular mammograms, are recommended for women older than 40, in addition to an earlier baseline mammogram, to document any breast changes over time in comparison with the first mammogram."

The American College of Radiology and the American Cancer Society recommended that women have mammograms as part of routine breast cancer screening according to the following frequency:

Women 35 to 40 should have a baseline mammogram; those between 40 and 49 at low risk should undergo mammography at least every two years, and women between the ages of 40 and 49 who are at high risk and those over 50 should get annual mammograms.

The American Cancer Society recommends monthly self-exams for women age 20 and older.

The Michigan breast cancer screening study involved 257 women between the ages of 20 and 82. The vast majority of them live in one of six townships west of Ann Arbor. The results of the study included the following: (1) Sixty percent of the women aged 35 to 49 and fifty-one percent of those over 50 had not obtained a baseline mammogram. (2) Only twenty-two percent of the 40 to 49 year olds and twenty-five percent of the women older than 50 had repeated mammograms after a baseline mammographic screening. (3) Monthly self breast examination was practiced by more than half of the women polled, but about 30 percent of the women 35 and over reported either never examining themselves or just once or twice a year.

Women interested in mammographic examinations can call the Department of Radiology at Chelsea Community Hospital (313) 475-1311, Ext. 270.

The average adult has 3,500 square inches of skin.

Getting ready for thirsty movie fans are Kellie Stockwell, Wendy Hauessler, Jessica Porter and Pam Preston busy preparing straws for soft drinks. Children and parents work hard to make movie night a success.

Wednesday evening the smell of popcorn drifted tantalizingly through the door as movie goers waited in line to purchase their tickets. The Klager P.T.O. Movie Night was fun for everyone. Nearly two hundred parents and children enjoyed seeing Walt Disney's movie "The Sword and The Stone."
