The Eclipse of the Negro Barber

Manchester Enterprise
October 14, 1926

Old Time "Tonsorial Artist"
Now Seldom Seen

Less than a generation ago in the United States north as well as south in the larger cities and in the smaller villages and towns, wherever a barber's red and white striped sign was displayed, the proprietor and his journeymen who there offered service to the public were in a great majority of cases, Negroes. Gradually, and for some reason which has seldom been discussed and probably never explained, shops operated by Negroes have disappeared. In few cities and towns in the north today do men, or women of the white race patronize even those that remain. Invaders from a foreign land have darker-hued "artists" who virtually monopolized a profitable and altogether respectable industry.

Even in Atlanta, Georgia, last June an ordinance was passed to prohibit Negro barbers from serving white patrons, and, probably to emphasize the existence of absolute racial equality, the rendering of similar service by white barbers to the Negroes.

The Negro barber of an early period was an institution distinctly American, says the Christian Science Monitor. Among these courteous and adept proprietors of shops were many who had established themselves, apparently as fixtures in their chosen communities. Some were property owners and taxpayers, and men who took an active interest in political and civic affairs. But as one recalls them at this somewhat remote period, the impression is that most of them were those whose hairs had even then begun to show the marks of northern frosts. They were perhaps the remnant of that period when Negro boys were taught to serve their masters in southern homes. It may have been from these homes that the barber of a half century ago was graduated after the war, to make his way among strange peoples and in unfamiliar places.

If this supposition explains the adeptness, the courteous bearing, and the dependability of the older generations of colored barbers, it may not at all be wondered at that they did not train their own boys and other youths of their race to follow their own trade. Such skill and ability do not pass by inheritance. Youth frequently seems to despise the occupations of its elders. There is always the search, insistent or casual, for something new. Often this is for the way of least resistance.

The turning point in this occupational highway has too long been passed to make probable any return to it. Except on the part of only a few who may be adversely affected by the change, perhaps the revolutionary movement will not be regretted. But the finality of the metamorphosis is indicated by the apparent determination to

Clinton State Police Post To Close

When 100 interested citizens attended an open meeting in Clinton on January 22, to hear why the Michigan State Police Posts in Clinton and Blissfield were being considered for consolidations and moving to Adrian, they were told that the decision had been made five years previously.

This had been determined by an outside consulting firm, stating that such a move would increase the operating efficiency of the State Police service in Lenawee County.

The State Police spokesman, Major Michael Anderson, explained during the evenings discussion that a trooper's office was his patrol car, not the location of the dispatching office, although he was unaware of the distance between Clinton and Adrian.

When questioned by the residents of five Washtenaw County Townships being served by the Clinton Post, Anderson speculated that eventually they might be assigned to the Ypsilanti Post.

The move is expected to take place in late summer.

On page 7 of this week's Enterprise is a listing of government officials, should anyone wish to contact them or express their opinion.

Hit or Miss

by Farley

In this country today we have many problems. We hear a great deal about the problems of the farmers. We are aware of the unemployment situation throughout the nation and there are other problems that we have to contend with but there is one problem that one hears about wherever you go. It is loneliness and anyone who can come up with a solution to this condition could become a national hero.

In the last few years the problem of loneliness has been cropping up in the papers with stories by the reporters and pollsters telling us what the public is thinking.

The political historian Theodore White, speaking from many years of experience, says that "loneliness is one of the unshaped political problems of our time. It is the curse of American life." You find it anywhere from Maine to California.

Loneliness is found in all kinds of individuals and groups - there are increasing numbers of the elderly without spouses. There's a divorce rate that tells us that there is hardly a family that isn't touched by this social malady and then there are the youths that are trying out "relationships" with ties that are so easily broken and aloneness develops. The poor suffer from aloneness but also do the upper and middle income brackets.

The government spending can be at least a partial relief for unemployment or a growing economy. It could be supported to provide a trickling down of jobs. Civil rights legislation has a direct effect on cutting back on discrimination.

Loneliness seems to have a political tie. A party that addresses itself to affirming the traditional values is certainly talking about and that our society by approving certain modes of individual conduct, used to do a better job of keeping families together.

When I was a boy in a small city hardly anyone was getting divorced. That undoubtedly caused many unhappy marriages to continue when a divorce might have been a better solution - and either separation or loneliness.

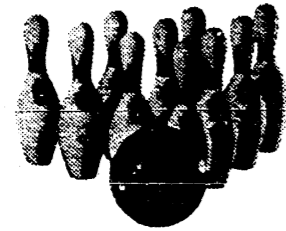

Families in those days took care of and grandparents were needed and a place was needed for them to occupy. We remember one who even built a couple of rooms on his home for his grandparents to live in during their later years.

There was probably a bit of neglect here and there back then.

In the meantime the lonely, in many instances, are consigned to a nursing home to spend their declining years in loneliness. The most pitiful part of all this is the ignoring of them by their children and grandchildren and former friends. Too many of the present generation tend to forget the many things that these oldsters have done for them. Please pause and reflect on this condition and if Attention!

Class of '66

There will be a meeting at the home of Diana Sloat, 206 Ann Arbor Street, on Thursday, February 6th, at 7:30 p.m. for anyone interested in planning our 20th reunion.

B flu can be the forerunner of Reye's Syndrome, a neurological disease with a 20 percent death rate," the CDC warned.

Reye's Syndrome affects children from infancy through young adults and can develop 3 to 5 days after the onset of the chicken pox, an upper respiratory illness, or other viral infection. It affects all organs of the body, but predominately the liver and brain, is non contagious and is often misdiagnosed as encephalitis, meningitis, diabetes, poisoning, drug overdose, or sudden infant death.

After a viral infection has seemingly run its course and the person is feeling better, the following symptoms should be treated as serious and as possibly the first indication of Reye's Syndrome:

- *Persistent or Continuous Vomiting
- *Listlessness (Loss of Pep and Energy, Drowsiness)
- *Personality Change (Such as Irritability, Combativeness or Slurred Speech)
- *Disorientation (Unable to Identify Whereabouts or Family Members)
- *Delirium, Convulsions

A life can depend on early diagnosis. Reye's Syndrome should be suspected in any child or young adult who shows any of the above symptoms. Phone your physician immediately if these symptoms develop and tell him/her you suspect Reye's Syndrome.

If your doctor is not available, take your child to an emergency room promptly. Two liver function tests (SGOT/SGPT) can be done to determine the possibility of Reye's Syndrome. There is a 90% chance of recovery when the syndrome is treated in its earliest stages by physicians and nurses experienced in the treatment of Reye's.

Research has shown an association between the development of Reye's Syndrome and the use of aspirin for treating the symptoms of influenza-like illnesses, chicken pox, and colds. Even with the possible link between aspirin and aspirin containing products, the NRSF warns that studies have also shown the disease can develop without the use of these products.

Thomas P. Price, Executive Director of the National Reye's Syndrome Foundation, said: "Reye's Syndrome can strike at any time without much warning. No child or young adult is immune against Reye's. This deadly disease strikes young people of both sexes and all races. Everyone should be extremely aware of the symptoms of Reye's Syndrome during an outbreak of the flu or chicken pox. Remember prompt action can save a life."

Attention New And Expectant Mothers

If you are thinking about breastfeeding your new baby, wondering if you can breastfeed if you plan to return to work, or if you are already nursing a baby successfully, you will want to attend La Leche League meetings. La Leche League was "born" in 1956 by a group of mothers who wished to help friends and relatives to nurse their babies successfully and happily. For thirty years, La Leche League groups around the country and around the world have been doing just that. LLL's motto is "Good Mothering Through Breastfeeding", and our series of meetings focus on helping women be the best mothers they can be, by encouraging them and supporting them in their decision to breastfeed their children.

LLL of Manchester will meet on Tuesday, February 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the Emanuel United Church of Christ, 824 West Main, Manchester. Park in the back and follow the signs upstairs.

Babies and young children are always welcome at League meetings. For further information, advice, encouragement or help with breastfeeding problems, you may call a League Leader at any time. Our local leader is Marsha Chartrand, 428-9831.

"Farming can be complicated these days. Same goes for income taxes. So I go to H&R Block."

"With farming, one wrong step and it could cost you down the road. The same is true with tax preparation, and that's why I always go to H&R Block. My preparer is trained to know all the special problems that farmers face. And that saves me money. So I'll do the farm work while Block does the tax work."
