Hit or Miss

by Farley

A friend of mine tells me that we stand at the outermost fringe of human enlightenment. We say chairperson without feeling awkward. We have found our technological process to be somewhat marvelous. We have, among many other things, digital clocks and wristwatches. Yet our friend says that "things are breaking down."

For example, we bought, at the post office, a roll of 22 cent stamps and only a short time later we found that they have become stuck together and that the stamps tore apart when we tried to separate them. Don't you remember that in days of old we had to be content with appendicitis and boils and shingles with a dose of measles thrown in? Now we have stress and types A, B and C influenza. We have stroke caused by the introduction of artificial and transplanted hearts and thanks to electronic miracles, we have doctors who quickly and casually can inform us of the latest bodily plague.

In discussing these things, our above mentioned friend, mentioned them and asked me if I remembered the time that my postman refused to deliver my mail until I shoveled my walk. How unfair, how could I forget it? We have psychiatrists and politicians to deliver to us all kinds of solace and comfort. We have pills and pills for any kind of ailments under the sun. The young can be placed in front of an electronic box and there they sit watching the fast changing pictures which make them incapable of sustained thought. Most everybody is trying to risk chemical or electronic help which is supposed to help one to think happier thoughts. Another chap recently said that two months ago he ordered a rowing machine from the retail division of a large mail order house. After some weeks, he called to ask why the machine had not been delivered and was informed that it had not because it had never been ordered. The inquirer said that the miracle box was an imbecile and that the only way he could get one was probably to go elsewhere, to which the box mumbled "place your order with me if you wish."

The machinery of efficiency has never been more efficient. Police squads and ingenious barricades at transportation centers and public buildings are at an all time high standard of safety. We have the most advanced weapons. We even have the car burglar alarm.

A friend of mine ticketed by highway police for driving 68 miles an hour recently had her insurance cancelled though she had had 14 years of driving experience without having been ticketed for a violation. The police miracle box had reported her ticket to the insurance agency she said, and the company had not been making a profit in that part of the country and because her husband and she shared a joint ownership of the car, the insurance company cancelled his insurance also. He called me to ask what he should do but he had a great deal of trouble getting me, he said, because the miracle box several times insisted that the number he called was "not in service."

We stand today at the threshold of the utmost in human development and advancement, but in spite of all these things, I think that our friend said it well when he said "Things are breaking down," didn't he?

4-H Contest Winners

Kerri Bristle of Manchester and Nick Gordon of Saline were runners-up in the Washtenaw County 4-H King and Queen Contest held at the Washtenaw County 4-H Fair held July 28 thru August 1, 1986. Kerri is a junior at Manchester High School and the daughter of Stephen and Karen Bristle. Nick is the son of Phil and Judy Gordon.

News From The Manchester Education Association

On August 31, the contract that the Manchester teachers have been working under expired. At this time, no agreement has been reached on a new contract. A state mediator has scheduled a meeting between the Manchester teachers and the Board of Education for Wednesday, September 3.

On Friday, August 29, the members of the Manchester Education Association, a unit of the Washtenaw-Livingston Education Association, met and passed, by a substantial majority, a resolution stating that they would continue to teach this week because of the scheduled mediation. If no settlement is reached during mediation, the negotiators for the teachers are available and willing to bargain on Thursday, Friday or through the weekend. The resolution voted upon by the teachers also stated that if no tentative agreement had been reached by Sunday, September 7, the districts teachers would not report to work on Monday, September 8.

The Manchester teachers and their negotiators have felt frustrated by the limited number of bargaining sessions and the short duration of the majority of the meetings. The teachers are anxious to settle the issues and are available to meet at any time.

Parents' Night Program For New Hunter Safety Classes

Manchester-area boys from third through fifth grade can learn more about our active Cub Pack 421 at a special Parents' Night informational program to be held Thursday, September 18, at Klager School, beginning at 7:30 p.m. There will be games, refreshments, a short program and a question-and-answer period.

In addition, second-grade boys and parents are invited to Parents' Night for information about Tiger Cubs - the scouting activity for younger boys. Manchester's Pack 421 is made up of a number of Dens, each with five to eight boys and a Den Leader, giving Cub Scouts the opportunity for supervised games, sports, hiking and camping, crafts and many other fun activities in the company of friends their own age.

New Cubs can sign up following the Parents' Night program or by returning the registration letter which all second through fifth graders will be bringing home on Wednesday, September 17.

Ms. Jane E. Brody To Be Special Guest Speaker

Jane Brody, New York Times Personal Health Columnist, and author of numerous books and articles on a variety of health topics, will be guest speaker for the opening program of Saline Community Hospital's Women's Night Out, for the Health of It series, September 16 at the Power Center.

Saline Community Hospital is pleased to announce that Ms. Jane E. Brody, noted NEW YORK TIMES Personal Health columnist, and author of JANE BRODY'S NUTRITION BOOK, will be special guest speaker for the opening program of this fall's Women's Night Out for the Health of It series.

Brody, far from being a "diet Hunter Safety Classes

The Manchester Sportsman Club will sponsor a Hunter Safety Class on the last three Wednesdays of September and hold the review, testing, shooting of fire arms and bow and arrow on Saturday, September 24, 1986.

Attendance of all classes is required.

This is taught by instructors certified by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Students must be 11 years of age or older to attend. Parents are welcome to attend.

There is no charge for this class and students completing this course will receive a certificate that is necessary to buy a hunting license in Michigan if under 17 years of age. (In Canada and many other states the age limit is higher).

Class will consist of view of film strips, demonstrations, lectures and question and answer periods. Pre-registration sheets will be available at Keith's Barber Shop and at the Middle School.

and fitness fanatic", does not believe that good food and social dining have to be sacrificed in order to maintain a healthy lifestyle. Ordinary, health-conscious people can eat well without resorting to rigid fad diets, or exotic "health foods" that are costly and difficult to prepare. She does believe in living a life of moderation, but with no sense of deprivation or self-denial.

Through her extensive research and experience, Brody has found that reducing the intake of fats, sugars, salt, and protein, while increasing the consumption of wholesome starches, fruits and vegetables, combined with daily aerobic exercise, will help an individual become more energetic, youthful and trim - all contributing to a happier life.

The heart of Ms. Brody's health plan is a high carbohydrate diet. As she explains, "Carbohydrates are the foods our bodies are best designed to handle in quantities. Human beings evolved on high carbohydrate, high fiber diets, and a healthy respect for these foods is long overdue."

Brody's program will mark the beginning of the second season of Saline Community Hospital's Women's Night Out, for the Health of It series, covering a wide variety of topics central to the concerns and interests of women. A highlight of the first year was Sonya Friedman's program "The Best is Yet to Be", stressing the value of women as individuals and encouraging them to strive to reach their highest potential.

Jane Brody's program will take place September 16, 1986, 7:30 p.m. at the Power Center in Ann Arbor. For tickets, or additional information, contact Julie Brown at 429-1508.

The Michigan League Buffet Is Renovated

The Michigan League Buffet (formerly The League Cafeteria), which has been a part of the University and the community for 57 years, has undergone a $900,000 renovation. In addition to a completely new interior design, the Buffet has been expanded to increase the capacity and an additional line has been added for faster, more individualized service. The "Grand Opening" of The League Buffet will take place September 7, 8, & 9, with special menus, music and complimentary punch.

Selecting A Long Distance Company

The Michigan Public Service Commission is urging telephone customers to study the options before selecting a company to handle their long-distance calls.

The deregulation of the nation's telephone industry obliges millions of customers in Michigan to choose a "dial-1" long-distance telephone company. Those who fail to make a selection when polled are allocated to one of the companies on the long-distance ballot.

"Dial-1" service enables a customer to access a selected long-distance company without having to dial a multi-digit access code. The allocation process was ordered by the Federal Communications Commission to ensure equal market access for the new companies which now compete for long-distance customers.

"It is better to make a choice - an informed one - than to take a chance on the allocation process," said William E. Long, PSC chairman.

Long said the PSC has prepared a guide to choosing a long-distance company. "The guide will help to make an informed choice," he said. "It also will enable those who already have chosen a company to compare their costs and services with those offered by the other companies."

Copies of the guide are available by calling the PSC's toll-free consumer services hotline number: 1-800-292-9555.

Wedding Bells Ring

Terri Lynn May and Nicholas Joseph Aiuto exchanged vows on August 22, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Manchester.

The Rev. Father Raymond Schlinkert officiated. Carol Widmayer was maid of honor while Russell Aiuto, brother of the groom, was best man. Both are from Manchester. Bridesmaids included Kathy of Manchester and Lorri Meinhart of Farmington Hills. A reception followed the ceremony at the American Legion Hall in Manchester. The bride and groom will reside in Manchester.

Public Help Again Needed For Purple Martin Project

With Michigan's summer populations of purple martins expected to start winging their way for Brazil any day now, reports of their southbound migrations are needed from all corners of the State to help blueprint many happy returns for the birds in nesting seasons to come, reports the Department of Natural Resources.

Those sightings of martin migrations are being requested by Ann Arbor researcher Richard Wolinski, who recently launched a five-year study aimed at helping stem the birds' nose-dive in numbers on Michigan's outdoor scene.

The study is one of some 30 field projects sponsored by the Nongame Wildlife Fund this summer to help bald eagles, piping plovers, lake sturgeon, bluebirds, sandhill cranes, timber wolves, endangered snakes, and a wide variety of rare and precious plants. The Fund is made up entirely of public donations. Nearly all of them come as checkoff contributions on State income tax returns.

Wolinski can already count on hearing from 336 citizen cooperators who, since last spring, have answered his call to serve as the eyes and ears of his project throughout the State.

Those volunteers, using survey forms supplied by Wolinski, have recorded when purple martins returned to their areas this spring and the number of birdhouse compartments they occupied in each active colony. This month, they will be keeping tabs on the birds' departure dates for southern climes.

Wolinski's latest appeal for citizen help is designed to fill out his project's survey coverage. In seeking volunteers last spring, he came up empty in a number of counties, notably those in the mid-section of the Lower Peninsula.

The survey project has failed to draw any cooperators in Bay, Arenac, Midland, Isabella, Clare, Mecosta, Lake, Wexford, and Missaukee counties. It is also looking for its first volunteers to report on purple martin comings and goings in Benzie, Leelanau, Otsego, and Monmorency counties of northern Lower Michigan plus Clinton, Lapeer and Branch counties in the southern third of the State.

Above the Straits, no help has come forward in Marquette, Alger, and Luce counties.

Wolinski doesn't know if these "holes" in the survey's coverage reflect a real lack of martin colonies in those particular counties. He's hoping, instead, that many potential cooperators simply have not heard about the martin study.

In any event, "landlords" of active martin colonies in any of Michigan's 83 counties are urged to get in touch with Wolinski. He can be contacted by writing to: Purple Martin Project, 2450 Baker Road, Dexter, Michigan 48180.

Wolinski terms citizen support as the key for laying the groundwork to help pull purple martins out of their decline.

Seconding his thoughts is Bob Hess, in charge of DNR's Nongame Wildlife Program. He explains:

"The information coming from cooperators over the next few years will hopefully help us determine the real answers to why the birds' populations have gone down so much. More importantly, their reports will help us focus on what needs to be done and also make it possible for us to pinpoint our management emphasis in those local parts of the State where the birds need help the most."

Statewide, the insect-eating birds have experienced a 50-percent decline in numbers over the last 20 years. In southwestern Lower Michigan, they have suffered a sharper drop, estimated at 75-80 percent for that same period.
 In Michigan, remaining colonies of purple martins are found mostly along open edges of inland lakes and the Great Lakes.

These largest members of North American's swallow family winter in South America, mostly in Brazil.

As the birds near the time for their peak migrations from Michigan in mid-August, they are starting to leave their individual colonies to join large roosting aggregations also made up of such birds as starlings and blackbirds, reports Wolinski.

Among those places where they will soon be seen en masse is Sand Point in Huron County. "For a day or two in mid-August, these birds will literally cover the Point where they'll dot telephone wires and all other perching places," says Wolinski.

Wolinski's latest appeal for citizen help is designed to fill out his project's survey coverage. In seeking volunteers last spring, he came up empty in a number of counties, notably those in the mid-section of the Lower Peninsula.

Secrets Of Successful Kabob Cooking

Mouth-watering Pineapple and Pork Kabobs are so easy to prepare when you know the secret to kabob cooking on the grill.

marinate on the grill for basting as you cook.

To save your good saucepots, make an aluminum foil saucepot for outdoor grill use. Mold three layers of heavy duty aluminum foil around a straight-sided bowl or canister to form desired size.

Pineapple and Pork Kabobs

- 2 cans (6 oz. each) or 1 1/2 cups unsweetened pineapple juice
- 1 cup dry sherry
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. rosemary leaves
- 2 pounds pork shoulder, cut in 1 1/4-inch cubes
- 1 fresh pineapple, cut in cubes
- 1 large green pepper, cut in wedges
- 24 small white onions
- Hot cooked rice

Serve over rice. Makes four to six servings.

Traffic Detour Advisory

Traffic on two miles of Interstate 94 Freeway, from the US-12/I-94 interchange to just west of the I-94/Rawsonville Road interchange, in Washtenaw County will be detoured beginning Tuesday (September 2) for reconstruction of the roadway.

Westbound I-94 traffic will be detoured onto northbound WARD Road and Westbound US-12 while a crossover between eastbound and westbound I-94 is being constructed and throughout the construction period.

Eastbound I-94 traffic will remain on the present I-94 corridor until the crossover has been constructed. Eastbound traffic then will be shifted to the westbound lanes.

The project is scheduled for completion by fall of 1988.

Council Proceedings

Unapproved Minutes Special Meeting August 9, 1986

The Special Meeting of the Manchester Village Council was held August 9, 1986, at the Village Offices.

President Hinkley called the meeting to order at 10:00 a.m. Present: Hinkley, Tapping, Reinhart, Marshall and Naimowicz. Absent: Limpert, Becktel, Zaborowski.

Naimowicz presented to Council an update on the four easements needed for the Beaufort Street project.

Motion by Tapping, supported by Marshall, to adjourn into closed session at 10:10 a.m. to discuss negotiations on easements.

Council returned to regular session at 11:50 a.m. Copies of the Easement Agreements will be on file at the Village Hall, in care of the Clerk, for public inspection.

Motion by Marshall supported by Tapping to agree to the following stipulations between Don Limpert, Garnet Johnson, Ryan Limpert and the Village of Manchester.

1) An exchange of value of the railroad property, presently owned by the Village of Manchester located on Don Limpert's Duncan St. property - for approximately 1200 ft. of river front property between Macomb

CPR Course Offered

You never thought it would happen to you, but then, with no warning, a friend, neighbor or relative clutches his chest and falls to the ground. His heart has stopped, he is not breathing. Would you know what to do?

You will, if you attend the CPR course being offered by Seline Community Hospital in Manchester on Saturday, September 20.

CPR, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, is the process of manually providing oxygen and blood circulation to a victim of heart stoppage or breathing cessation. This course will teach the proper method of administering CPR, and will result in American Red Cross Certification when successfully completed.

Other task force recommendations include the establishment of a broad, universal definition of a farm and that a farm operation be conducted according to a management plan which incorporates the standards and guidelines of the Right to Farm Act.

Schaner said that farm groups and commodity organizations are being asked to comment on the recommendations. Public hearings will be held throughout the state in October.

CPR is taught by Red Cross Certified instructors, and will take place on Saturday, September 20 from 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. at the Emanuel United Church of Christ, 324 W. Main St., Manchester. The cost is $10.00. Participants may bring a bag lunch.

To register, or for more information, please call 429-1509 Monday - Friday from 8 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Applications For 7 Reps. of Private Sector Business Available

The Washtenaw County Board of Commissioners is scheduled to consider applications for seven representatives of Private Sector Business to the Private Industry Council of the Washtenaw County/City of Ann Arbor/Livingston County (WALTEC) at the October 1, 1986, session of the Board at 7:00 p.m. in the Board Room, Administration Building.

In some cases persons currently serving in these positions are seeking reappointment. One page resumes should be addressed to the lead business agency in your area, i.e. Chamber of Commerce. Those resumes received by September 19, 1986, will be submitted to the Board of Commissioners for their consideration on October 1, 1986.

Right To Farm Law Under Review

Due to complaints from rural non-farm residents regarding the noises, odors and dust associated with farming, Michigan's right-to-farm law is currently under review, and a task force has released a list of recommendations to better define the law.

According to task force coordinator Don Schaner, one of the recommendations focuses on confinement livestock operations. "There is a group of technicians who are developing some specific standards dealing with confinement livestock operations," Schaner said. "That may involve certain standards for space as far as buildings are concerned, the construction and operation of storage lagoons, and how by-products are utilized."

Other task force recommendations include the establishment of a broad, universal definition of a farm and that a farm operation be conducted according to a management plan which incorporates the standards and guidelines of the Right to Farm Act.

Schaner said that farm groups and commodity organizations are being asked to comment on the recommendations. Public hearings will be held throughout the state in October.

Bacteria as Factories

Bacteria are microscopic creatures that are found everywhere. Some forms of bacteria make us sick. Most do not, in fact we have large colonies of bacteria living in our intestines. Not only do they not hurt us, these bacteria, E. coli, actually help by digesting some food materials for us that we do not digest.

Bacteria are single celled creatures with a very simple structure. They do not have a nucleus as most of our cells do, yet they do contain DNA. In addition to the large circular DNA molecule that provides the genetic information for each bacterial cell, a second much smaller circle of DNA can be absorbed by bacteria under certain conditions. This smaller type of DNA is called a plasmid.

Plasmids can be manipulated in the laboratory. They can be cut open and "foreign" DNA can be added to the plasmid DNA. When the circle is reclosed, a larger plasmid results. For example, think of a black hula hoop. Take a razor blade and cut through the hoop in one place. Now add a 24 inch section of red hula hoop plastic by inserting it into the cut place. Tape the junction at each end of the red section where it joins the black. You now have a larger circle because of the added red section. The red section corresponds to the foreign DNA added to a plasmid. If this new plasmid is mixed with bacterial cells that have been treated with calcium chloride, the cells will absorb the plasmid and the foreign DNA will be placed in the bacterial cell. If everything goes well, the bacteria will use the foreign DNA to make a protein.

Insulin is currently being made this way. Until recently, diabetes depended on insulin isolated from the pancreas of slaughter house animals like cows and pigs. Now bacteria can make human insulin from human insulin DNA (a gene) placed in a bacterial plasmid. Other such genetically engineered products are already available: human growth hormone; a vaccine for foot-and-mouth disease; and interferon, an antiviral protein that may be useful against some cancers. And many, many more will be available within a few years.

Several questions arise. How can we tell if a bacterial cell has taken up the plasmid with the insulin gene? Fortunately, the plasmids used for these techniques contain genes of their own. Each plasmid has one or more genes that code for resistance to certain antibiotics. Once the bacterial cells have had a chance to absorb the plasmid, an antibiotic is added. Any cells which do not have a plasmid will be killed by the antibiotic. Those that do have the plasmid will survive.

How can an insulin gene placed in a microscopic cell produce enough insulin to be of value to people? Bacteria grow very rapidly at body temperature if they have plenty of food. In twenty minutes one bacterial cell splits into two. Twenty minutes later, two become four. Every twenty minutes they double again. If this continued for 40 hours under ideal conditions, there would be a mass of bacteria equal to the mass of the earth! That doesn't happen, of course, because they run out of food or they begin to die from the accumulation of their own waste products.

Still, from one cell billions upon billions of cells can be produced in a short period of time, each making insulin molecules. A few of the cells can be saved and the whole process can be begun again and again.

Where does the human insulin gene come from? This is trickier. As was mentioned last week in Chemical Morse Code, a human gene contains DNA that has interruptions in its coding information. Bacterial DNA does not. If the human insulin gene were placed directly into bacteria, the protein molecule that would be produced would contain too much extra material, so it would not work. Instead the messenger RNA made from human DNA in the pancreas is isolated after the original RNA has been cut and spliced to the form of RNA used to assemble amino acids into insulin. The processed RNA is purified and mixed with a special enzyme that can make DNA from RNA. This new synthetic gene for insulin can be inserted into a plasmid and then put into bacteria. Now the bacteria can make human insulin that will work.

What does the future hold for these genetic engineering techniques using bacteria? The sky is the limit. Any gene or protein made by any living system could be produced in large quantities by the bacterial factories. You may see products like dynorphin, a pain killer 200 times as effective as morphine; Factor S, a sleep promoting peptide; bombesin, a peptide that signals the body that it has had enough to eat; and a hormonal combination called MSH/ACTH, which facilitates learning, concentration and memory.

New arrangements of genes in bacteria may reduce or eliminate the need for nitrogen fertilizer by placing nitrogen-fixing genes into soil bacteria that can be used with any crop. Genetic defects of the blood cells like sickle cell anemia or B-thalassemia could be corrected by removing bone marrow cells from an individual, adding the gene to correct the defect and replacing the bone marrow into the individual. Bacteria, of course, could be used to produce large enough quantities of the correct genes using the same techniques described above.

Only the tip of the iceberg has been uncovered. The world of pharmacy as we know it will be turned upside down by the products of this genetic engineering explosion. For further reading see the December 1984 issue of National Geographic.

Catbirds: Gentle Fruit-Lovers

If you've heard the phrase "sitting in the catbird seat," you may have wondered, as I have, how the catbird fits into this picture of someone sitting in a position of power, someone "on top."

For those of us who know catbirds as wary inhabitants of low-lying scrub growth, the phrase makes little sense. About the only time catbirds act "powerful" is when they're proclaiming their territory. Most of the time they're barely noticeable. From dense, concealing cover, you'll hear the mewing, catlike call that gives them their name. Or you'll hear their rapid, jumbled song—like a mockingbird's (catbirds are related to mockingbirds and thrashers), though you might, as I do, have a hard time figuring out anything the song is supposedly initiating.

They seem to be one of the gentlest of our songbirds, and I've never really understood why some people dislike catbirds. I've heard it said that they pick on the young of other birds, but they're not known as nest robbers. They're certainly not going to stalk and pounce, catlike, on us—though more than once I've been harassed by a protective parent when I approached a nest. That's not a catbird's usual behavior at all. In fact, my most vivid childhood memory of catbirds is having them eat raisins from my outstretched hand.

Catbirds love fruit, more than almost any other bird I've personally come in contact with. I've banded numerous catbirds in late summer and early fall. Most of them are invariably loaded up with the fruit of elderberries, pokeweed, black tupelo or some other juicy fruit.

You can easily entice summer catbirds to your yard using a tray stocked with raisins. They'll also share your blackberries, raspberries, blueberries, elderberries and grapes. You'll want Increasingly, it appears, more catbirds are wintering farther North.

However, to survive through the harsh temperatures and snows, they need the fruit of fall and winter-bearing trees, shrubs and vines. Providing such a fruit diet, in part with your landscape and augmenting the natural winter diet with finely-chopped fruit and shredded suet, place these supplemental foods in dense habitat such as the viney tangles the birds tend to prefer in the winter.

I've begun to wonder if catbirds are extremely fragile birds. Though I mark hundreds of them each year, few seem to return to the place where they were originally banded. Are they less capable than other birds of returning to a specific home territory? I wonder if perhaps they'd be better off, instead of flying from place to place through the woodlands, highways and skyways, they did indeed sit in the catbird seat.

YOUR FUTURE WON'T WAIT... AND TIME'S A WASTIN'!

"Time is money" . . . "The future waits for no man." Both are well-worn statements and basically true. Your time, however, is worth much more than money.

If you have been thinking about going back to school for your diploma, don't put it off another day! Adult Education classes will be starting again this fall with many adults from this area taking advantage of the no-cost program available to those working for a high school diploma. Your decision to start now could mean a better or more satisfying job and a richer, fuller life. With a diploma, the way is opened to further technical training or a four-year college program.

Call the number below and find out how you can get all the help you need to get started on your future. Time's a wastin'!

Investing For Your Future

(Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants)

Everyone wants to have a secure financial future, yet many wait until it is too late to start saving or investing. Of the many investment choices - bonds, annuities and Ginnie Mae securities represent lower risk, longer term investments that could also start paying off early, according to the Michigan Association of CPAs.

U.S. Savings Bonds: During the past year, U.S. Savings Bonds have proven to be among the best investments. For one thing, their yields move with the market and have a floor - but no ceiling - on their yields.

In 1982, Congress made bonds more attractive by allowing interest rates on new series EE savings bonds to float at 85 percent of the yield on five-year treasury securities. The government also set a minimum rate of 7.5 percent if you hold the bonds for five years.

Savings bonds don't actually pay interest, but are purchased at one-half of their face value, which can be as small as $50 and can range up to $10,000. You can redeem them at maturity at more than face value, depending on interest rates. At the minimum of 7.5 percent, a $1,000 savings bond, for which you paid $500, would be redeemed at $1,044.07 after 10 years. After the five-year minimum holding period to get that rate, your bond would be worth at least $722.52.

Tax on the interest generated by most savings bonds can be deferred until the bonds are cashed in, an attractive feature to those expecting to be in a lower tax bracket. Interest from savings bonds, like all interest from U.S. government securities, is exempt from state and local taxes.

Annuities: The traditional annuity has become a popular investment in the last few years for those eyeing a source of income to be received after retirement. The annuity builds up cash until you choose to receive distributions (in either a lump sum or periodic payments). Those distributions usually begin during retirement, are paid over a set period of time or can continue for a lifetime.

Annuities could be a high-yield investment vehicle with several attractive features. Income tax on accumulated interest, for example, is deferred until payouts begin. At that point a formula determines the excludable portion (investment) of each payment.

Because annuities may allow limited access to your money, they are attractive even when you are far away from retirement. Some annuities permit withdrawals of up to 10 percent of accumulated value in any one year without any charge or penalty. Be aware that the interest on certain withdrawals made before age 59½ is subject to a five percent IRS penalty.

Many insurance companies have now incorporated the annuity into a life insurance product. Called the single premium whole life insurance policy, the single premium policies are mostly investments that qualify for tax breaks. As the name implies, you pay the premium only once. That premium can be hefty, normally starting at about $5,000.

Ginnie Maes: For those wanting to invest less money, securities issued by the Government National Mortgage Association, normally called Ginnie Maes, could be a good investment. A Ginnie Mae certificate represents a share in a pool of government guaranteed mortgages that is backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. The minimum size of original individual certificates is $25,000, but existing certificates may be purchased for substantially less. Also, shares in mutual funds or unit trusts comprised of Ginnie Mae securities can be purchased for as little as $1,000.

Although mortgages typically run 25 to 30 years, Ginnie Mae yields are projected to an average life of 12 years. Sometimes mortgages are prepaid and the life of the pool is shortened, which could change the yield to the investor.

Each month, as a Ginnie Mae investor, you receive both interest and a partial return of capital representing partial amortization of the principal on all the mortgages in the pool. These regular payments - although they will vary, depending on how many mortgages are paid off in a given month - make Ginnie Maes an attractive investment.

Bonds, annuities and Ginnie Maes are useful for their safety and high yield. A CPA can show you how these features will affect your current finances as well as your financial future.

COOKING CORNER

Microwave Menus
It's in the bag, delicious, easy and economical meals with a microwave oven, that is.

If a microwave is a hit with your household, you'll be glad to know about a new kitchen helper that makes microwave cooking even easier and faster. It's a unique sealing system that wraps up fresh foods for you in handy microwave safe/boilable pouches that can go right in the microwave and come out cooked in minutes.

The space-saving design of the new Dazey Micro-Seal leaves your counter free for other appliances, or you can mount it on the wall or under a cabinet. It seals eight-inch bags and closes most other plastic food wraps as well.

Microwave magic in a pouch can now be yours.

The sun is three million miles closer to the earth during our winter than in our summer.
