Homeowner's Insurance — How Not To Get Burned

(Prepared by The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants)

The smell of smoke permeates your car. You turn the corner and find yourself face-to-face with the charred remains of the house you've called home for 15 years. It's the nightmare no one wants to think about, much less plan for. But according to the Michigan Association of CPAs, having enough homeowner's insurance and keeping good records of your possessions can help to ease the burden of such a tragedy.

Homeowner's insurance provides protection for your most treasured assets — your home and personal belongings. Homeowner's policies include two general areas of coverage: property insurance which protects against loss or physical damage to your property, and liability insurance which covers you when you are liable for another person's injury or for loss or damage to another person's property.

Most insurers require that a home be covered for at least 80 percent of its replacement cost. Replacement cost means the amount it would cost to have the house rebuilt in the current marketplace.

If your house should burn to the ground, resulting in a total loss, you will be reimbursed only up to the face amount of your policy. So, if you're insured for $100,000 and it costs $120,000 to rebuild your home, you will have to pay for the difference. While 80 percent of replacement cost is considered to be the minimum for standard coverage, you may want to consider insuring your home for full value.

As a general rule, the contents of your house and your personal possessions are insured for no more than 50 percent of the coverage on your home. In case of loss or damage of personal possessions, actual-cash-value policies reimburse you for the current replacement cost, minus depreciation. For example, suppose a fire destroys the beautiful traditional sofa you bought for $1,200 four years ago. Even if you're convinced it was in perfect condition before the fire, its actual cash value is now considerably less than what you paid for it. And you certainly could not go out and replace it for the depreciated amount you would receive. As a remedy, many insurance companies are now offering replacement cost coverage for your personal possessions. With replacement cost insurance, you are paid an amount that will generally allow you to replace the lost or damaged property, within certain limits.

Now close your eyes for a moment and try to imagine listing every single item in your home — every piece of clothing, every kitchen utensil, every gardening tool in your garage. If this sounds like a momentous task, imagine doing it in the aftermath of a devastating fire or burglary.

As a safeguard, everyone should prepare a household inventory list on which you record everything you own — from coffee mugs to furs. In the event of loss or damage, a household inventory can be invaluable in substantiating that loss. Using a notebook, list all of your possessions, room by room, including a brief description, date of purchase and purchase price. You'll want to supplement this list with a visual account of your home's interior and your possessions. It's also a good idea to retain receipts for all your major purchases.

A video camera can provide an excellent record. You can videotape everything you own, again going from room to room. Pay particular attention to valuable items such as jewelry, silver and electronics. (If you don't have access to a video camera, you can rent one at a nominal cost.) If you cannot videotape your personal property, use a camera to take photographs of the interior of your home and your possessions. Be sure to keep your household list and photographs or video tape in a safe deposit box. They will be of no value if they go up in smoke with the rest of your possessions.

Jewelry, silver, furs and other expensive items are only covered to a limited extent by standard homeowner's policies. To cover a special item, you will need a floater (so named because the first ones insured goods shipped by water). A floater policy protects against accidental loss or theft, whether in your home or away. The insurance company will need to know the value of each item covered and will want a copy of the sales receipt or an appraisal of each, as well.

All standard homeowner's policies include liability coverage. This coverage protects you if you're held liable for property damage, such as when a tree on your property falls on a neighbor's fence, or in the event your child's playmate trips over your garden hose and breaks his ankle. Liability insurance should cover all family members and pets.

The standard limit for homeowner's liability coverage is usually $100,000. But in today's world of escalating damage awards in personal injury suits, this may not be enough coverage for many homeowners. To minimize their exposure to risk, many people are buying excess liability coverage which is often called an umbrella policy. An umbrella policy supplements your automobile and homeowner's insurance, and pays claims over and above the limits of your policies. Since excess liability insurance picks up where your other policies leave off, insurers require you to first have a prescribed amount of homeowner's and automobile insurance. Umbrella policies are sold in amounts of $1 million and up. In addition to providing excess liability coverage, umbrella policies protect you if you are sued for a host of other reasons including libel, slander, invasion of privacy, discrimination and others, depending on the policy you select. While the cost of an umbrella policy is low, the case for getting such coverage is compelling. One judgement against you can wipe out all of your assets and even lay claim to future earnings.

Review your homeowner's policy frequently. Today, many policies automatically adjust for inflation, but you'll want to review your coverage periodically to be sure you are adequately insured.

CPAs caution that there is a provision in the Tax Reform Act of 1986 that affects personal casualty losses where an insurance policy provides reimbursement for loss. If you sustain a loss that is covered by your policy and, for some reason, you decide not to file a claim, you may not deduct the amount of casualty loss your insurance policy would have reimbursed you.

Local Plant Earns Elite Ford Award

Manchester Plastics, Division of Larizza Industries has earned the elite Ford Q-1 Preferred Quality Award.

The award was presented by Louis R. Ross, Executive Vice-President of Ford North American Automotive Operations at a special luncheon in Dearborn, Michigan.

Ford credits Q-1 suppliers with helping produce the highest quality cars and trucks built in America for the seventh year. The prestigious Q-1 Award which has been earned by 32 percent of Ford's suppliers, goes to individual manufacturing plants that have implemented an effective quality assurance program and received an excellent quality rating. These plants use statistical methods to build quality in, rather than catch errors at the end of the manufacturing line. Manchester Plastics produces injection molded and decorated interior plastic parts used on Ford automobiles. The company employs the majority of its personnel from the Manchester Village area.

River Clean-up Saturday

This Saturday, the 29th, the Raisin River Water Shed Council is sponsoring a river clean-up from Sharon Hollow to Fellows Bridge.

Tri-County Logging is supplying two log skidders to pull out the large log jams. Members from the Men's Club, Jaycees, and Optimist are going to split up into 3 and 4 man crews to clean the small debris along this section of the river. We need volunteers to help out. The river is one of our most important assets, so we need your help to keep it beautiful. We will be meeting at Fellows Bridge on Sharon Valley Road at 9:00 a.m. this Saturday. Wear tennis shoes and levis, bring your chain saw or bow saw. If we have a good turn out, we can have it clean in a few hours. If you have any questions, contact Jim Mann, 428-8388 days or 428-8074 evenings.

Golfers Place Third

The Manchester High School varsity golf team began its season very early this year by participating in the first Annual Jonesville Invitational Golf Tournament on Monday, August 17th. The six team tournament was played on the very difficult Mill Race Golf Course in Jonesville. Manchester's golfers placed third with a total score of 411. Concord High School took home the first place trophy with a 348 total. Other scores included Jonesville (373), Springport (417), Bronson (438), and Union City (473).

Varsity captain Brad Uphouse was selected to the all-tournament team by virtue of his score of 99. Overall, Brad finished in tenth place in the individual competition. Manchester will next compete in the Blissfield Invitational two-man best ball tournament on August 28th. The first regular season match will be on September 2nd at Onsted.

This year Manchester has changed their course affiliation and will now be playing at the Clark Lake Golf Course.

Valuable Timber Being Shipped Out

Manchester Enterprise
May 21, 1925

Modern Methods Of Sawing Make Use Of Knots And Roots Once Thrown Away.

Many loads of logs, oak, walnut, hickory and other kinds of wood, have been hauled into town for shipment to mills and factories the past few months.

A few days ago the butt of a large walnut tree was passing on a truck and a man remarked to the Enterprise representative that they are now digging down into the ground to chop down a tree and get that part that years ago would have been despised. Truly timber is becoming scarcer and with modern machinery every part of a tree except small roots and the tree tops are in demand and are cut into small strips, glued together and made into the finest patterns of antique furniture.

Year by year our once boasted Michigan forests are fading away and the land on which they grew since the morning stars sang together, is being made suitable for crops of various kinds.

In early days the pioneer in Michigan cleared a small space in the virgin forest and with the trees constructed his dwelling place. The floors were of hewn logs; even the chimney was built of logs and plastered between and within with mud. The settler constructed his couch, tables, chairs and stools out of wood and even the cradle in which to rock the first white child born in the wilderness was made of timber sawed by hand.

Every season a portion of the forest was cleared and plowed and planted to crops of wheat, corn and potatoes. Those were hard times and often of great suffering and privation, but we frequently hear them lauded as "the good old times."

As years roll past, the use of wood in construction of buildings of all kinds is gradually being dispensed with and metal and cement are taking its place. We imagine that the desert wastes in the far east were once covered with forests, as was Michigan little more than half a century ago; that the people wasted and destroyed great sections and the building of cities swept away the verdure and homes and places of business had to be constructed of dirt. The removal of forests caused the streams to dry up and after the lapse of a hundred or five hundred years, the inhabitants died from disease produced by unsanitary surroundings, etc., and at length there was once a happy contented people came desolation, and the archaeologists are digging deep into the desert sands and bringing to light specimens of household utensils constructed and used by people who passed away centuries ago.

Early Michigan Newspapers

By Roger L. Rosentreter
Bureau of History
Michigan Department of State

In August 1809, Father Gabriel Richard printed The Michigan Essay or Impartial Observer — Michigan's first newspaper. But Richard probably produced only a single issue of his paper, and Michiganians had to wait until 1817 for their next locally produced newspaper.

On 25 July 1817, John P. Sheldon and Ebenezer Reed published the Detroit Gazette. The appearance of the weekly Gazette marks the beginning of continuous newspaper publishing in Michigan. The Gazette cost $4.00 for an annual subscription, and much of the paper was printed in French, reflecting the predominant language of Detroit-area residents.

The Gazette stopped publication in 1830 when Sheldon moved to Pontiac and began the Oakland Chronicle. One year later, he returned to Detroit and founded the Democratic Free Press and Michigan Intelligencer. In 1835 the Democratic Free Press became the first daily paper in Michigan, and the first newspaper in the west to use a power press. Today, the Detroit Free Press remains Michigan's oldest newspaper.

As more pioneers arrived to settle Michigan in the late 1820s and early 1830s newspapers appeared in many other communities. Founded in White Pigeon in 1833, the Michigan Statesman and St. Joseph Chronicle moved to Kalamazoo in 1835. Two years later, the paper became the Kalamazoo Gazette. Today, the Gazette is the oldest Michigan newspaper outside of Detroit.

In many cases, newspapers of the antebellum period relied upon political party subsidies. The

Parent Aide Volunteers Sought

The Parent Aide Program of Catholic Social Services of Washtenaw County, a United Way agency, is seeking volunteers to work with some of the many parents in our community who are under stress. These parents are trying to cope with the every day difficulties and pressures of parenting without the usual support systems, friends, family backing, and even knowledge about child care so many of us take for granted. Parent Aide volunteers act as role models, supportive "friends", understanding advocates and caring companions.

If you have a few hours a week to visit, to provide emotional support, and to care about a parent who needs someone to listen, to understand, and to "be there", this may be the program for you.

For more information call Joan at 662-4534 to find out about September training.

Most windshield breaks are repairable, and the cost is far lower than windshield replacement. Newspapers

The papers of the 1830s also printed public announcements. In the Niles Gazette in March 1836 citizens were urged to gather early one morning to widen a nearby road. The Gazette noted, "We trust no citizen able to wield an axe will absent himself from this important and public spirited undertaking."

Advice also appeared frequently. One newspaper contended, "When you feel yourself unfit for society, avoid it entirely: take a walk or canter on horseback; exercise and communion with nature are the best and easiest cures for an uneasy mind, bilious irritability and nervousness."

Witticisms must have brought smiles to many a reader's face. For example, one waggy writer noted that when the Reverend Thomas Thaw married Edward Spring and Margaret Winter, it came as no surprise since, "A Thaw generally turns Winter into Spring."

On the edge of the frontier, Michigan newspapers also offered ways to improve one's character. At "the urging of a lady," the Detroit Free Press published an item from Hints on Etiquette regarding the smoking of tobacco. The counsel concluded, "What man of delicacy could presume to address a lady with his breath smelling of onions? Yet tobacco is equally odious, the tobacco smoker in public is the most selfish animal imaginable."

The last two pages of each newspaper offered advertising, which, in the 1830s, included everything from recently arrived oysters and clams at a Detroit grocery to instruction in Monroe in ballroom dancing and fencing by a former West Point military instructor.

"Every quotation contributes something to the stability or enlargement of the language."

"Schools Open -- Drive Carefully"

"School's Open" Program To Curb Traffic Deaths

Pedestrians accounted for 42 percent of the 96 youngsters aged 5 through 14 who died in traffic across the state last year, and AAA Michigan is sponsoring a statewide "School's Open - Drive Carefully" program to help reduce that statistic.

"Last year, most school-related pedestrian deaths happened after 3 p.m., during warm weather months and in densely populated areas," said Robert V. Cullen, AAA Michigan Safety and Traffic manager. "We urge motorists to pay special attention to young pedestrians in the afternoon now that schools are open."

AAA Michigan studies show that school-related pedestrian deaths last year occurred most frequently on Thursday and Friday, with the student - rather than the driver - most often at fault. More than half happened at mid-block where motorists do not expect to see pedestrians.

Over the past five years, an average 93 Michigan youngsters aged 5 through 14 died in traffic. During that same time, an average 10,635 youngsters were injured in traffic. The five-year fatal-injury average rose eight percent from 1982.

While the 40 pedestrian deaths last year accounted for the largest number of traffic fatalities in the 5 through 14 age group, 21 percent of those killed were bicyclists. Nineteen percent were passengers in a vehicle and the rest were classified as "other."

Cullen said parents should walk to school with their youngsters until the route can be traveled safely by the child and these safety rules are learned:

*Cross only at intersections - never between parked cars.
*Check all directions before crossing streets and stay alert for cars turning on both green and red lights.

*Obey safety patrollers and crossing guards.

*Walk on the sidewalk. If no sidewalk, walk facing traffic.

*Follow the safest route to school, using streets with low traffic volume and controlled intersections.

*When waiting for a bus, stand in a safe place away from the roadway.

*Never retrieve anything near the bus wheels unless the bus driver is alerted.

To help reduce the number of school-age pedestrian deaths and injuries, AAA Michigan will conduct 400 safety patrol training programs throughout the state this fall. Nearly 33,000 safety patrollers will assist students walking to school. Safety patrollers are usually stationed at intersections along established student walking routes, especially at heavily traveled intersections.

In addition to the workshops, AAA Michigan will donate safety patrol belts, badges and training booklets to 1,519 Michigan elementary schools and provide "School's Open - Drive Carefully" bumper stickers free to the public at all branches.

How To Keep Motorists Within Speed Limit?

Concerned with Michigan's potential noncompliance with the 55-mile-per-hour speed law and subsequent loss of up to $12.6 million in federal highway funds, State Transportation Director James P. Pitz today called a summit meeting of law enforcement agencies to deal with the problem.

Pitz has asked the directors of the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police, the Michigan Sheriffs Association and the Michigan State Police to meet with him in Lansing Friday, August 28, at 9 a.m.

"Together, we must come up with a way to keep Michigan motorists within the speed limit," Pitz said. "Col. Rich Davis (Michigan State Police director) already is encouraging higher visibility of patrol cars on the highways."

Pitz said the associations of county sheriffs and city police chiefs have said they would support a program to reduce speeds and increase safety.

Using data available after three-quarters of the 1986-87 fiscal year, ending Sept. 30, officials estimate that 50.5 percent of all vehicles operating on roadways signed for 55 mph are exceeding the speed limit.

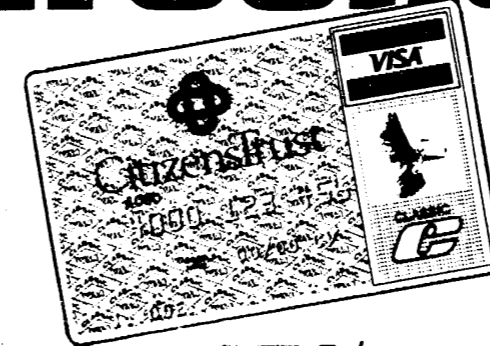

If the total exceeds 50 percent, the state faces the loss of up to 10 percent of federal highway funds allocated for work on its primary, secondary and urban systems highways, enough to resurface about 90 miles or rural two-lane highway.

Invitation To Senior Citizens

State Senator Lana Pollack (D-Ann Arbor) today issued an invitation to senior citizens in the 18th District to apply for participation in the 1987 Senior Intern Legislative Program, a project designed to give senior citizens first-hand experience in the legislative process. The program is scheduled for the week of September 21-25, 1987 and application forms are available from local senior citizen organizations, Senator Pollack's office, and the Office of Services to the Aging in Lansing.

The Senior Intern Legislative Program provides the ideal opportunity for seniors to become involved in legislation and statewide senior issues," said Senator Pollack. "I welcome the chance to have a senior intern work in my office assisting with constituent casework and legislative issues while learning the legislative process."

Senator Pollack said that the intern program is intended to provide senior citizens with the skills and knowledge to become advocates for local communities and the senior network. The program will include legislative workshops which are designed to familiarize the senior interns with: Senate and House calendars and procedures, the lobbying process, the committee structure and meetings, the legislative sessions, and the Executive Office and departmental functions. In addition, working directly in their legislator's office will allow participants to become better acquainted with their own and other legislators.

Housing during the week will be provided for interns through arrangements made by the Office of Services to the Aging. Transportation and some meals will be the responsibility of the intern. An intern may include his/her spouse, but must be prepared to cover the extra costs for meals and travel. Minimum criteria has been established for the program, Senator Pollack added. Interns must be 60 years of age or older, be in good health, be actively involved in senior programs and activities in the community, and be willing to make a commitment to involvement in specific work during the week in Lansing, as well as involvement in the community upon return.

Applications must be sent to Senator Pollack's Lansing office as soon as possible, due to the selection deadline of August 28, 1987. Further information may be directed to Senator Pollack's office, State Capitol, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

 6 important facts about wheel alignment

- Extend tire life
 It's happened to almost everyone: buy a set of tires, and before long one or two tires are wearing out before the others. On today's cars, this applies to the rear tires as well as the front tires. The most common cause of unusual tire wear is improper alignment. Over the years, a properly aligned vehicle can save hundreds of dollars in tire wear.
- Spot problems early
 A suspension system inspection is an inherent part of the wheel alignment operation. This gives the mechanic a chance to spot worn parts that would affect vehicle alignment. It also gives him an opportunity to spot small problems before they become big, costly ones.
- Ensure safe driving
 A periodic four wheel alignment makes sure your car handles properly and, more importantly, provides an opportunity for inspecting the suspension system for defective parts. In some ways, the safe driving aspect may be the most important benefit of wheel alignment.
- Stretch fuel mileage
 Fuel mileage increases as rolling resistance decreases. Proper wheel alignment sets all four wheels parallel which, in turn, assures minimum rolling resistance. This plus proper tire inflation provide top efficiency for maximum mileage.
- Improve handling
 Does your car pull to one side, does the steering wheel vibrate, do you have to constantly move the steering wheel to keep your car traveling straight ahead? These and other handling problems can generally be corrected by four wheel alignment.
- Get a better ride
 Proper alignment helps the front and rear suspension systems do their job. With all the system components in proper relation, road shock is efficiently absorbed, so the vehicle is more stable, and you get a smoother ride.

IRAs UNDER TAX REFORM

(Prepared by the Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants)

Contrary to what you may have read over the past few months, the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) is not dead. A bit weaker, perhaps, but alive nonetheless, reports the Michigan Association of CPAs. Last year, Congress took a giant step in an attempt to return the IRA to its original purpose: to provide a personal retirement income fund for lower to middle income Americans who often were not covered by pension plans at work. As a result, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 imposed new restrictions on who is eligible to deduct IRA contributions and just how much may be deducted.

But don't despair. Even if you don't qualify for a deduction (and many people still do), you can still contribute up to $2,000 to an IRA and earn tax-deferred income. Interest, dividends and capital gains continue to compound tax-free in an IRA until you begin to withdraw from your account. You can use an IRA's tax advantage to the fullest by investing your entire deposit at the beginning of the year. And, of course, the longer you contribute to an Individual Retirement Account, the greater the advantage of tax-sheltered earnings. But keep in mind that the original value of the deduction and the value of the tax-deferred growth will become less valuable as lower tax rates are phased-in.

With all the talk about the demise of the Individual Retirement Account, it's easy to lose sight of the fact that the deductibility of the IRA contribution is only one of the two important tax benefits an IRA offers. Even under tax reform, many experts feel the IRA remains a good long-term investment.

WHO GETS THE DEDUCTION?
Two factors determine whether you still qualify for an IRA deduction and how much you can deduct. The first "test" is whether you or your spouse is covered by a retirement plan at work and the second factor is your adjusted gross income. If neither you nor your spouse are considered active participants in a retirement plan at work for any part of the taxable year, the rules remain the same. You can continue to contribute and deduct up to the lesser of $2,000 a year or 100 percent of compensation ($2,250 for a spousal IRA and $4,000 if each spouse earns at least $2,000 and makes the maximum $2,000 contribution).

If you or your spouse is covered by a retirement plan, you may still contribute to an IRA, but the amount of your contribution that you may deduct depends on your adjusted gross income. If you are single and your adjusted gross income is $25,000 or less, you may continue to deduct up to the lesser of $2,000 or 100 percent of compensation for an IRA, even if you are covered by a pension plan at work. Likewise, if you are married and your joint adjusted gross income is $40,000 or less, you can continue to deduct up to $4,000, if you both work and each earns at least $2,000. Incidentally, your adjusted gross income must be figured before subtracting an IRA deposit.

There is no deduction allowed for an IRA contribution if you are covered by a company plan and have an adjusted gross income of $35,000 or more if single, and $50,000 or more if married and filing jointly. This limit applies even if only one spouse is covered by a pension plan.

Single taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes between $25,000 and $35,000 and married couples with adjusted gross incomes between $40,000 and $50,000, may partially deduct IRA contributions. The rule is that for every $1,000 in income over the ceilings of $25,000 or $40,000, you lose $200 in deductions. So if you're single and have an adjusted gross income of $30,000 and make a $2,000 IRA contribution, $1,000 worth of your IRA contribution may not be deducted.

For those who cannot take the deduction, an IRA contribution may still make sense because of its potential for tax-deferred growth. Active participants in employer-sponsored plans, who are not eligible to make deductible contributions, may make non-deductible contributions to an IRA. The maximum allowable contribution to an IRA is the same for both non-deductible and deductible contributions. Although you miss out on the deduction, you can still enjoy the benefit of tax-deferred earnings.

WITHDRAWALS FROM IRA
Most of the old rules governing IRA withdrawals remain intact. Because IRA tax breaks are designed to encourage you to save for retirement, unless you are permanently disabled, any withdrawal of IRA money before age 59½ is subject to a 10 percent penalty tax in addition to the tax due. As was previously the case, you must begin making withdrawals from your IRA no later than April 1, of the year following the year in which you reach 70½.

If you suspect that the change in the rules for putting money into an IRA might affect the rules for taking it out, you're exactly right. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 complicates the way your IRA savings are taxed when you withdraw your money. Before, all withdrawals from an IRA were taxed as ordinary income. Clean and simple. That remains the case for funds attributable to deductible contributions and all accumulated earnings, but non-deductible contributions made after the Tax Reform Act of 1986 will not be taxed again. You do not have the option of first withdrawing the non-taxable money in your account based on the total of deductible contributions and all accumulated earnings. Each time you withdraw funds, a certain portion may be taxed and the rest may be tax-free. It is up to you to add up everything you have in your IRA and then determine what percentage of your withdrawal is taxable. You'll need to keep track of what portion of your total contributions was deductible and what portion was not. Depending on your contributions and earnings, the percentage will change from year to year.

While IRAs have increased the likelihood of a financially secure retirement for countless Americans, CPAs advise you to consider the deductibility, tax-deferred status and withdrawal requirements of Individual Retirement Accounts, as well as the possibility of alternate tax-deferred or tax-free investments that may give you a better or equivalent yield, before making an investment decision.

Farmers - Apply For Refund

The Department of energy has received only about 1,800

applications for agricultural oil overcharge refunds, a small number according to Michigan Farm Bureau Information Director Mike Kovacic, compared to the amount of farmers who may be eligible.

"It doesn't cost a farmer anything to apply for a refund for oil overcharges that occurred between August of 1973 and January of 1981," Kovacic said. "All they have to do is estimate how much diesel fuel, kerosene, motor oil, heating oil, propane or grease they purchased from independent suppliers during that period, and they could get $8 for every 10,000 gallons of fuel used."

Kovacic said the amount of refund will vary with the type and size of farms. "Because petroleum demands differ based on the crops grown, the number of acres farmed is not the only factor. For example, it takes about 10 gallons per acre per year to produce a wheat crop compared to about 127.5 gallons per acre per year to raise apples." Farmers can get refund application forms from their local county Farm Bureau office.

"All is for the best in the best of all possible worlds." Voltaire

Michigan Has Her Mountains

Little Visited Spot, Rich In Scenic Beauty Is Worthy A Place As State Park

Very few people have any idea of what the state of Michigan possesses in the way of mountain scenery. Most of them will laugh at you when you hint that there is a hill anywhere in the peninsular state that will outtop the Irish Hills, south of Manchester. Some of our residents, notably Ed. E. Root and A.J. Waters, have roamed all over the southern peninsula and have heard their engines knock sometimes when driving up an unusually large mole-hill. Some have stopped their cars at the top and viewed the country round about and come home and told the neighbors what they saw near Newago, Gaylord or Somers.

up to the Soo or to Marquette, but they had more to say about woods and lakes than anything else. So let us say, that if you want to see a mountain in Michigan you must visit Porcupine Mountain, in the copper range of Ontonagon county. "There is no area like it, nor such virgin forest and rugged picturesque topography between the forests of northern Minnesota and the Appalachian ridges," said a state park secretary. Government Peak, where a state fire observation tower is located, looms up 1,250 feet above Lake Superior and 1,850 feet above sea level. But there are higher peaks not far away that top any between the Black Hills and the Alleghenies.

Some of our readers have been charmed with the lakes in the Adirondack Mountains in New York, or the lakes in the White Mountains in New Hampshire, little dreaming that in "Michigan my Michigan" they might behold Carp Lake and Little Carp lake in the Porcupine range, not only a counterpart of these, but surely their superiors. They are like blue gems set down among the green mountains, with Lake Superior curving around at their feet. R.H. Torrey has his eye upon that wonderful region and we may expect the state to locate a park there before many years roll around, with one of those northern Michigan roads leading to it.

K-6 Girl Scout Round-up

The Manchester Girl Scout Fall Round-up and Parents Meeting will be at the Emanuel Church, 324 W. Main Street, on Thursday evening, September 10, 1987, at 7 p.m. All girls in grades K-6 who would like to participate in Girl Scouts this year and their parents or guardians should attend the meeting. Girls will be registered, troop meeting times, locations, and troop plans for the year will be discussed. The $4.00 registration fee includes insurance for all Girl Scout activities. The Huron Valley Girl Scout Council to which we belong will see that every girl that wants to be a Girl Scout can do so regardless of family finances. A uniform exchange will be held. Please bring uniforms marked with your name, uniform size, and asking price to the meeting. Donations of uniforms are welcome.

Girl Scouting offers girls the opportunity to be involved in the learning of skills and values in a wholesome, enjoyable environment.

Learning skills such as singing, playing games, creating art and craft work, sewing, cooking, building a fire safely, camping, first aid, being a part of group planning and decision making, carrying out projects, and developing leadership.

Strengthening values such as honesty, fairness, helpfulness, patriotism, and responsibility so she will be able to stand the pressures of her adolescent years. Being a part of a caring group: recognizing the value of others and being recognized as a person of value in return.

Doing community services such as marching in the Memorial Day Parade, decorating and riding in the Girl Scout float in the Manchester Fair Parade, contributing gifts to the Manchester Family Service Christmas Project, and caroling at homes of shut-ins and senior citizens and planting flowers and shrubs.

1986-87 was a great year for Girl Scouts in Manchester and we hope to do even better this coming year. Join us for fun, learning and adventure!

was to write his last column. Compared to my grandpa, my be as good so I hope you will bear with me.

First I would like to thank the many people that read his column over the years. Because of HIT or MISS my grandpa could go through his final years with dignity and grace.

My grandpa always held a special place in his heart for Manchester and it's special after I always felt like I'd missed something when he told me about the good old days. When he would hear someone start to talk poorly about small towns, grandpa would always defend them. He always said that a small town was like a big family and big towns were where the little guy always got lost. My grandpa's life was something most of us can only wish for. He had a long full life of happiness with his family and friends but more than anything he was a newspaper man and he said he never could have made it without his partner and love, my grandma.

He is gone now and is in a much better place than the rest of us people. During my childhood and because of towns like Manchester and Clinton, the memory of Hollis and Isadora Farley will remain and mean something.

The Farley family left behind love and misses you both.
