Mrs. Savage's class got a letter from Dr. Jacobs. He said that he would send some books. The books arrived on Friday. They are called, The Old Bear, Beany and Crunch, Small Pig and Little Mouse on the Prairie. Pictured holding the books are Brandon Carruth, Lauren Adler, Arianne Chartrand and Megan Guidry.

When Leland B. Jacobs was a little boy he lived in Detroit, Michigan. Every summer his family would leave the big city and come to a cottage at Pleasant Lake. When he was older and teaching at Michigan State College in Ypsilanti, Dr. Leland B. Jacobs still came to the cottage and became a good friend to everyone at Pleasant Lake School. The library at Pleasant Lake School was named the Leland B. Jacobs Library. Dr. Jacobs did not forget the school when he moved to New Jersey to teach at Columbia University Teachers College. When Pleasant Lake closed in 1982 and all of the students moved to Klager School, the library at Klager was named for Dr. Jacobs. Although Dr. Jacobs is now retired, he continues to mail a big package of books to students each month to put in the library. He will always love children and books.

Farmers Urged To Seek Deer Hunters

Farmers who have suffered millions of dollars in crop losses due to wildlife damage should start now to seek out hunters to help reduce the deer population, according to Michigan Farm Bureau legislative counsel Ron Nelson.

"Farmers have people from year to year approach them to hunt on their land. In some cases, they have a formal or informal agreement that goes from season to season," Nelson said. "However, with the increasing deer herd - and it seems that the deer herd population is increasing faster on private land than on public land - one option that a farmer has is to seek out individuals who are interested in hunting and offer land to them for that purpose."

Outlook Good Despite Drought

Even with the drought, farm net cash income this year could equal or even top last year's figure of $57.1 billion. According to Michigan Farm Bureau economist Robert Craig, a combination of forces will hold up 1988 net cash income.

"Net cash income measures cash receipts against cash outlays without taking inventory changes into account," Craig said. "Higher prices for 1988 crops, government outlays for drought assistance and sale of grain stocks already on hand at prices well above expectations are the factors that will support cash farm income," Craig said. "However, the income will not be evenly distributed to all segments of agriculture. Live-stock feeders, for example, will suffer from having to pay higher costs for feed. Government price support payments will also decline because of higher grain prices."

The Department of Natural Resources can help farmers find people interested in hunting on private land, Nelson said.

"I would recommend that the farmer prepare a written agreement so that both parties understand the rules. There are several general contracts available that a farmer can look at and modify as they see fit. There are suggested leases available through Michigan Farm Bureau and county Cooperative Extension Service offices, or a farmer can ask his attorney to draw up a lease," he said.

Nelson strongly recommends a written agreement between the farmer and the hunter if there is an exchange of money for the right to hunt.

Planning For Retirement: There's No Time Like The Present

"Old age is the most unexpected of all the things that happen to a man," wrote Leon Trotsky more than 50 years ago. That saying certainly holds true today for the vast majority of Americans who postpone retirement planning until the last moment. As a result, only five percent of all Americans are financially independent at age 65. In fact, according to the U.S. Department of Commerce, approximately 75 percent of all retirees end up depending on family, friends and Social Security as their only sources of income or support.

If you find these statistics frightening, the Michigan Association of CPAs advises you to begin investing for your retirement now, no matter how far in the future your retirement may be.

A financially-fit retiree will generally draw income from four basic sources: Social Security; an employer-sponsored retirement plan; personal retirement savings accounts and other investment holdings.

One of the most common financial mistakes Americans make is assuming that Social Security can provide sufficient retirement income all by itself. Undoubtedly, many retirees could not afford to live without Social Security. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services estimates that 60 percent of the population over age 65 would have incomes below the poverty level if they did not receive Social Security. But Social Security was never meant to serve as a retiree's sole means of support. Social Security just provides the foundation for your retirement fund. It's your responsibility to ### build on that foundation.

Where should you start? First, check your employer's pension plan to see how much money you can expect to receive upon retirement or separation from the company. But even if the pension plan seems extremely generous, remember that the benefit of your employer-sponsored retirement program may be significantly reduced if you do not remain with the company long enough to become fully vested. In light of this fact, and the uncertainty concerning the future health of the Social Security system, personal retirement savings plans may become the most important vehicle for accumulating funds for your golden years.

Although IRA's acclaim as an investment tool suffered a blow due to tax reform, there are still benefits to investing in them. First of all, many people can still deduct at least a portion of their IRA contributions. As long as you are not covered by a retirement plan, you may contribute and deduct the maximum amount allowed, regardless of income.

If you (and your spouse, if you are filing a joint return) are not an active participant in a qualified retirement plan, you can contribute and deduct up to $2,000 of your earnings.

If your spouse does not earn any compensation for the year, you may contribute up to $2,250 to a spousal IRA. And if both you and your spouse are employed, you can each contribute up to $2,000 of your earned income to your own accounts.

If you or your spouse are covered by a retirement plan, you may still contribute to an IRA, but the amount that you may deduct will depend on your adjusted gross income (AGI). If you are single and your AGI is $25,000 or less, you may continue to deduct up to $2,000 for an IRA.

Likewise, if you are married and your joint AGI is $40,000 or less, you can still deduct up to $4,000 if you both work and each earns at least $2,000.

Single taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes between $25,000 and $35,000, and married couples with adjusted gross incomes between $40,000 and $50,000, may partially deduct IRA Contributions.

Even if you can't deduct any of your contributions, IRAs nevertheless offer several significant advantages. You can control how much you contribute, where you invest and how aggressive or conservative your investment should be. In addition, your IRA savings will grow and compound tax-deferred until withdrawal, thus building your retirement funds faster than you could through many other regular investment channels.

Another highly recommended method for building retirement savings is deferred compensation plans, often referred to as 401 (k) plans. In 1988, the maximum amount that you can contribute to a 401 (k) plan is $7,313. The delightful aspect of 401(k) plans is that whatever amount you contribute is automatically sliced off your taxable income. In other words, if you earn $40,000 a year and contribute $4,000 to a 401(k) plan, you will report only $36,000 on your income tax return. In addition, all interest and dividends are again tax-deferred. If your employer will match a portion of your contributions, consider yourself doubly lucky and contribute as much as you can afford.

If you are self-employed, concentrate on setting up a Keogh retirement plan. In most cases, your deposits will be tax deductible - and your savings will compound with all interest tax-deferred. Depending on the type of Keogh you establish (a defined-contribution pension plan, a defined-benefit plan, or a profit-sharing plan), you can contribute up to approximately 13 to 20 percent of your net self-employment earnings.

Savings for your retirement will undoubtedly require investigation of various investment options. CPAs suggest that you choose low-risk investments that offer you the opportunity to reduce your taxable income and accumulate savings with all interest or gain tax-deferred or tax-free. Alternatives to consider include annuities, municipal bonds, EE savings bonds and certain life insurance policies.

An earthworm has five pairs of hearts in the front of his body.

Bridgewater Historical Marker

The Historical Committee of Bridgewater Township is applying for a State Historical Marker to be placed at the Bridgewater Township Hall. The marker would commemorate the fact Bridgewater Township was founded in 1832 and that the Township Hall has been the site of continued township government since the first hall was built in 1856. The site has already received a certificate from the State as being a Historical Site.

At the September Township Board meeting the Board members unanimously voted to support this plan.

The committee is hopeful that donations will be made by interested citizens of the area. The donations by check would be made to: Bridgewater Historical Fund, Harlin Fraumann, Treasurer, Bridgewater Township, 10997 Fisk Road, Clinton, MI 49236. Cash donations may also be made. A return receipt will be sent to the donor which may be used for tax deduction if applicable. If more information is needed please feel free to call Lucille Blumhardt at 517-456-4726. The committee and township wish to thank all who support this project.

Fall Reading and Discussion Series

The first discussion meeting of the Fall Reading and Discussion Series sponsored by the Manchester Township Library is scheduled for this Thursday, October 6th, at 7:30 p.m. in the Blacksmith Shop, 324 E. Main. However, if you listen carefully, you will know the discussion has definitely already begun!

The book which is being read first for this series on "Michigan Authors" is THE DOLLMAKER by Harriette Arnow. And you'll see and hear folks standing together at the Post Office, at the IGA, at meetings being held for other purposes from Village Council to the Food Coops - talking about the book. "How far have you gotten?" "When I read this before..." "Did you see the movie?" "This story is too distressing. I'm not sure I can finish it."

As an opener for this Series, Continued On Page 12

Mrs. Clark was a daughter of Jacob Filber of this village, she was 20 years of age, and had been married about nine months.

The letter will explain the cause. It was evidently written at different times during the night. "I broke your bottle of whiskey so you could get your wheat in in time. Oh! how folks will say didn't I tell you they wouldn't live together. I choose death to a divorce. Tell my folks not to dress in black for me, and don't write to any of your folks. Let Sarah have my hat with the yellow ribbon on, and tell her to wear it just so."
