Old Scenes Revisited

C.W. Owen, editor of the Quincy Herald, lived in Manchester when he was a boy, his father owning the farm now owned by John Gumpper on the Ypsilanti branch railroad in the east part of town. In his paper last week he says that the item on the death of Gen. Jabez H. Fountain at Los Angeles, Cal., "was read with more than usual interest by the editor of the Herald, as it revived many memories of our boyhood days at the old home in Manchester.

We remember Mr. Fountain well as a prosperous and successful business man prior to and during the war. As an associate of a young relative of Mr. Fountain's who lived with him some time, we passed many happy hours at his pleasant home midway between Manchester and east Manchester.

Mr. F. was an enthusiastic republican and during the exciting campaign of 1860 he commanded a large local company of Wide-

We well remember the first war meeting held at Manchester immediately after Gov. Blair's call for one regiment of three months troops, Michigan's quota under President Lincoln's proclamation 75,000 troops. The Governor and the military board met at Detroit April 16, 1861, and made arrangements to organize, arm and equip the First Michigan Infantry without delay. On returning home from Detroit Mr. Fountain was injured at Clinton, being cut by glass from a shattered window in the car, resulting from firing cannon in too close proximity. He appeared before the war meeting on his arrival at Manchester with his hand bandaged, told the

He afterwards served through the war in the 20th Infantry and rose to the rank of Captain. For many years he has been a popular methodist minister at Detroit. The Manchester company was soon filled up and did good service at the front. On their return home in August they were given a grand reception and a big picnic dinner in the grove out of town. Those were exciting days which we can never forget. Little did we think then that the war would last four long years and that we would be permitted to serve in the ranks of the reorganized First from the Wilderness to Appomattox."

The Mill reveals Greek Revival inspiration in its simple massing and stylistic elements. The principle (west) and rear elevations are four bays wide and display symmetrical fenestration with plain surrounds, and are capped by a massive frieze. The south elevation is three bays wide featuring a set of offset windows in the second story, rising from a slope exposing an entrance in the fieldstone foundation, beneath a water table. Its most distinctive element is a wide frieze linking massive gable returns. The north elevation is identical except for the generator room over the race, which features wide corner pilasters rising to a plain frieze and supporting a shallow pitch gable roof with returns. The split fieldstone power house unit's west elevation presents a bank of large windows, while the east elevation is four employed to blend with the primary mill building.

Sharon Hollow has been a mill-site since 1834 when Amasa Gilbert erected a sawmill. Information about the original mill on to local historians it was built in the 1830's or 1840's. John W. Rice, the Justice of the Peace of Sharon County in 1858, was an early owner of the mill, used primarily to grind flour. In 1874, Alexander Kirkwood bought an interest in the property and became sole owner by 1890. When Alexander Kirkwood died in 1900, his son George inherited the site. George Kirkwood operated the mill until 1926, when the mill was purchased by Henry Ford and essentially rebuilt during the 1930's. Henry Ford had personally visited the mill in 1926 to record its machinery and interview George Kirkwood.

In 1939, Henry Ford rebuilt the original stone and earthen dam which had washed out in 1926, and rebuilt the mill to exact specifications. He retained its original construction and stylistic elements and added the stone powerhouse to the rear. The Sharon Mill became the thirteenth Ford Village Industries plant, part of an ambitious endeavor by Ford to create a series of small water driven plants in rural areas farm-factory partnership. Most of the plants were located in Michi-

The ideal Village Industries plant employed between one dozen and four dozen people, and manufactured small components for use in Ford products. It was an economic experiment on a grand scale, employing thousands of workers at its height, but was never financially successful. After Ford's death, these plants were gradually phased out during the 1940's and 1950's. The Sharon Mills plant, which opened in 1939, employed between one dozen and two dozen men who manufactured cigar lights for Ford V-8 dashboards from components supplied from other Village Industry plants. The rebuilt mill, dam, and race featured a modern 30" waterwheel capable of generating 40 horsepower, while the stone powerhouse supplied backup capability with a V-8 generator and boiler. It is believed that the Ford-supplied generator may be the only original Village Indus-

use. In recent years the mill has served as an antique shop, residence, and wine tasting center.

As a representative of mill technology which served as a catalyst for early settlement of the area and as an excellent example of the type and style of building employed for milling, the rebuilt Sharon Mill is an important resource. However, its primary significance stems from its association with Henry Ford, not only representing his active involvement in rural history but also as an example of his attempts at promoting an alternative economic system, rather ironically, to the centralized assembly line production with which he is intimately associated. The staff recommends designation at the state level of significance.

problems often occur during cold weather. Alan Kulwicki, a native Wisconsian and a leading NASCAR Winston Cup stock car racer, offers these easy-to-follow suggestions for avoiding winter car headaches:

CAR CARE

• Check the level of antifreeze coolant by looking at the radiator's plastic overflow reservoir every time you stop for gas. A 50-50 mixture of Zerex® antifreeze coolant and water guards against corrosion as well as freezing.

• Never drive with either the oil or transmission fluid low. Remember always to check the car's oil level with the engine off; then turn the engine on to see if the transmission fluid is at the full

FINANCIAL AID NOW

If you plan to apply for federal financial aid to pay for next year's college costs, the time to file is now. The federal government started accepting applications last week and procrastination can be costly. According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, the federal government frequently runs out of program expires at the end of September. Remember, too, that many colleges have submission deadlines as early as January 31.

To obtain a federal financial aid form, contact your high school or college financial aid office. The three most common forms are the College Scholarship Service's Financial Aid Form (FAF), the aid application.

You won't have to begin repaying the loan until six months after you graduate or leave school, and you'll have up to 10 years from that time to complete the repayment. Because of their long terms, Stafford Loans make inflation work to the advantage of the borrower.

In 19889, the Stafford Program permitted first- and second-year undergraduate students to borrow up to $2,625 per year, while third-, fourth-, and fifth-year students could borrow up to $4,000 per year. The actual loan amount. however, is reduced by loan origination fees paid to the lender. Eligibility for a Stafford is based Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants range from $100 to $4,000 and are usually given to students receiving Pell Grants. Work-study programs provide part-time jobs to students demonstrating need. Finally, the Carl D. Perkins Loan Program allows students to borrow up to approximately $4,500 at extremely low rates. In addition, the grace period following graduation is nine months.

Remember, federal financial aid programs are just one of the resources available to help you pay for a college education. Investigate all options, including employer-funded scholarships. Since many financial aid programs have debt ceilings, CPAs advise you to combine federal, state, college and private aid in order to obtain the most aid at the lowest

Bet You Didn't Know....

...It costs $40,000 to rebuild a $13,000 car, part by part.

These three factors: skyrocketing cost of repairing cars, epairing people, and the use of attorneys to settle claims all contribute to the increasing cost of your auto insurance.

..Health care expenses rose 10% last year, double the general inflation rate.

That is why it's smart to shop around for the right coverage at the right price to fit your needs. You can avoid much of the legwork by using independent agents.

.Accident victims not only get a lower percentage of claim payments when they use lawyers, but must wait twice as long to receive their settlements.

Independent agents represent more than one company so they can get several quotes for you. Independent agents are also supporting insurance industry and legislative reforms that will benefit their customers. These include working towards ceilings on premium increases and urging manadatory seat belt laws, to name two. How many agents that sell for only one company can say that? After all, keeping customers happy keeps independent agents in business.

Changes In Driver Testing

Sweeping changes in the way Michigan drivers of commercial vehicles are tested and licensed will take effect on January 2, 1990, according to Michigan Secretary of State, Richard H. Austin. "The Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act establishes a uniform, nationwide testing and licensing system," stated Secretary Austin.

The revised standards are part of Michigan and federal initiatives to improve highway safety by improving testing, licensing and post-licensing procedures and controls for operators of commercial vehicles.

Starting in January, new applicants for a commercial license will take revised knowledge and skills tests. Drivers of commercial vehicles renewing their licenses may be able to waive the skills test, if they have a satisfactory driving record and two years experience driving the type of vehicle for which they wish to be licensed.

Drivers exempted from licensing requirements include firefighters meeting approved training standards and operating authorized emergency vehicles; farmers operating vehicles under 26,001 pounds gross vehicle weight rating (GVWR) transporting farm products, machinery or supplies on trailers over 10,000 pounds GVWR within 150 miles of the farm; on-duty military personnel operating military vehicles; and individuals operating motor homes or other vehicles transporting personal possessions or family for non-business purposes.

Among the time-saving products that received awards were a new drill bit that lets the user drill curved holes in wood and a wood boring bit that pulls itself into the work. Both were developed by Vermont American Tool Company.

The drill bit with the ability to drill curved holes is aptly called the "Around the Corner Bit." The new bit is good for rewiring jobs as well as for remodeling. deck lighting installations, and other jobs where there's a need to eliminate sharp inside corners that obstruct easy passages. The wood boring bit that pulls itself into the piece is called "Wood Eater." It has a self-feeding screw to do most of the work.

Good news indeed for do-it yourselfers who like their projects to go quickly and smoothly.

Eleventh Consecutive Increase

The number of Michigan farmers who recognize the benefit of no-till planting systems continues to grow. 1989 was the eleventh consecutive year of increased no-till corn acreage in Michigan according to a tillage survey just completed by the Soil Conservation Service.

"There were approximately 293,200 acres of no-till corn in 1989 compared to approximately 280,000 acres in 1988, an increase of 4.7 percent. No-till soybeans increased more dramatically from 69,000 acres in 1988 to 97,300 acres in 1989, a 41 percent increase", said Dwight Quisenberry, State Conservation Agronomist for the Soil Conservation Service in East Lansing.

In the State of Michigan there were 47,025 acres of no-till orchards, 31,400 acres of no-till wheat, 10,300 acres of no-till pasture, 12,700 acres of no-till hav, 10,751 acres of no-till oats, 14,659 acres of asparagus and 3,934 acres of no-till rye grown in 1989. Other no-till crops grown in Michigan included barley, blueberries, brambles, brassicas, field beans, grapes, oats, onions, radishes, snap beans, sorghum (forage), sorghum (grain), sorghum-sudan, sudex, sugar beets, sweet corn, tematoes and trefoil.

In Washtenaw County 208,650 acres were planted to crops. 32.000 acres (15%) of the total cropland planted had conservation tillage used. Of the 32,000 acres of conservation tillage, 9,850 acres or 33% were planted using No-
