Greenkeepers to the Rescue

elean.

Sheer mindless vandalism by a group said to represent animal rights campaigners, have dug up all but four of the eighteen greens at Fairhaven Golf Club near Lytham St. Annes.

The highly organised desecration of the beautifully kept greens, was done at night with gardening forks and spades in a so called protest, by members of the Animal Resistance Group, against the Poultry Association, who were holding their annual conference in Blackpool.

The Secretary at Fairhaven Golf Club, Mr. Brian Hartley, told Golf Greenkeeping it was impossible to put a figure on the damage caused to the course, though thanks to the help immediately offered by neighbouring clubs at Royal Lytham St. Annes Old Links and Lytham Green Drive, most of the initial repair work had been completed within three days.

Greenkeepers from the three neighbouring courses joined Head Greenkeeper George Lloyd and the Fairhaven staff to repair up to eighty fork and spade holes all over the greens to bring the course back to a playable state, though during the winter months much more will need to be done with top dressing and re-turfing to return Fairhaven to its usual immaculate condition. Why Fairhaven was chosen to highlight these criminal protests against battery chicken farming is hard to understand. Perhaps it was because there was an announcement in the conference programme that a round of golf was available at Fairhaven for those delegates seeking a break from the weekend deliberations, though according to Mr. Hartley it was not an organised competition, simply the availability of the facilities for a small group to play golf.

Greenkeepers nationwide were horrified when news of the appalling damage to the fine putting surfaces was announced in the national press and it was not surprising the club had such instant offers of help from the greenkeeping staff of nearby courses.

Play continued immediately after the greens were dug up on the Friday night by cutting temporary putting surfaces, so the weekend competitions could take place and it is to the credit of the staff that they refused to bow down to the actions of what many would believe to be the criminally insane.

Next year the Open Championship is due to be played over the links at Royal Lytham which must cause grave concern to both the club, greenstaff and the Secretary of the R&A, Mr. Michael Bonallack, in view of the vandalism perpetrated at Fairhaven, a qualifying course for the Open.

The last time the Open Championship took place on the Fylde Coast at Royal Birkdale, a group, said to represent a man wrongly convicted of a robbery and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment, breached the security and spray painted several greens with slogans demanding his release.

To police a golf course of over 200 acres is an almost impossible task regardless of the finance set aside for security fencing, electronic surveillance or manpower.

It is a sad fact of life that action groups, who invariably represent minority interests believe the only way they can make their mark is to cause damage and distress to innocent victims.

Their ideals would appear to be summed up in a recent piece of graffiti seen painted on the wall of a derelict building near a red brick University.

It read:

'Votes in the ballot box achieve nothing'.

The Kubota Golf Challenge.

In this year's Kubota Golf Challenge played on October 12th and 13th at the Belfry, the greenkeepers swept all before them, for their third successive victory.

Young and fit, from a healthy outdoor life, they brushed aside the less athletic stewards by six matches to two in the semifinals before overcoming the guile of the secretaries in the final. The margin was $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $2\frac{1}{2}$ and the greenkeepers were always in control, losing only the last two matches.

The Fourth Estate, represented by the golf writers, duly finished fourth, finding the combination of a wet and windy Brabazon course, a woman team member and stewards intent on dispensing defeat rather than hospitality too much to cope with. At least they had run the Secretaries, twice winners of the event, close in the semi-final despite starting off a point down as a result of one team member breaking down on the M6.

To everyone's surprise, including their own, the writers did manage to win something. Flinging Kubota's gleaming orange mini-tractors round a cone-bedecked car park with reckless abandon, they won a novel driving competition. Admittedly, the greenkeepers, the real professionals, were handicapped by having to drive a much larger machine in the confined space.

Out on the course, however, where it mattered, there was only one team in it. In the bar afterwards, the stewards and the secretaries could be seen in huddles discussing the merits of reducing greenkeepers rations and increasing their workloads before coming to the conclusion it would just make them leaner and meaner and harder to beat. Turf Grass Diseases

The onset of winter is the time when the greenkeeper must keep a constant vigilance over his greens to spot and diagnose the first symptoms of disease.

The latest edition of an excellent publication from the Sports Turf Research Institute entitled Turf Diseases, defines a disease as a harmful deviation from the normal functioning of physiological processes caused by a pathogenic organism.

Both bacteria and viruses can cause diseases in turf, but they are considered to be relatively unimportant compared to the fungi organisms.

In the introduction, author Neil Baldwin says much new information has come to light since the first booklet was published in 1979 and this new information and the advice for treatment is included in the 40 pages.

As would be expected Fusarium Patch occupies the first pages in the book as the most common and most damaging disease to affect putting surfaces. The small brown or orange circular spots appearing on the green surface, are the first visible symptoms. They can increase rapidly both in size and number to produce patches of dead grass, both in fine turf and particularly on poa annua greens.

It is suggested the best preventative measures are mechanical rather than chemical. Greens should be adequately drained, dew taken off the surface and aeration with the addition of a sandy based top dressing to make the surface less moisture retentive.

There are now a number of products on the market to treat Fusarium Patch once the first signs appear. During the winter months when growth is slow the contact fungicides such as chlorothalonil, iprodione, vinclozolin, and quintozene, provide good control, though many of these products are expensive.

A total of eighteen turf grass diseases, which will cover almost all those known to the British Greenkeeper are described in detail, together with the visible symptoms, conditions in which the disease will thrive and measures and treatments to relieve the problem. There are also eight colour plates for instant identification of Fusarium, Take-All, Red Thread, Dollar Spot, Fairy Rings, and Damping Off.

This essential publication for any greenkeeper can be obtained from the Sports Turf Research Institute at Bingley St. Ives, priced £2.50. FEATURE 1

To any greenkeeper, the tranquility and beauty of the golf course is as much a part of the game as the challenge and competition it offers. Yet, how many greenkeepers paused to consider the vital role they played in preserving and safeguarding the important wildlife habitats of this country?

To raise money for the British Wildlife Appeal, the British Wildlife National Golf Classic, is set to 'tee off' in January 1988, and some 500 golf clubs and 70,000 golfers are expected to participate. Club members will be invited to take part in their individual Club competitions between January and July 1988, with the winners progressing to one of nine regional finals being held around the country. Regional finalists will then go on to play in the Women's Professional Golf Association Pro-Am to be held in September.

Entrants will be asked to donate a fee of £5.00 and this, together with all monies raised by the event, will be used to support the British Wildlife Appeal in its fight for Britain's countryside. The Appeal, aims to raise £10 million by 1990 to protect and maintain the natural habitats of Britain's wildlife - a cause which any greenkeeper would be proud to support.

Five Weeks Work -Without Pay!

Would any golf course care to offer a five week working experience to a keen, 6' 3 German Schoolboy from Hamburg, who has set his heart on joining the profession?

Seventeen-year-old Franz Bach lives alongside a new course at Grambek, owned by his family where he spends all his spare time assisting on the course. He is already experienced in many aspects of golf course maintenance, but wants to come to Britain during his summer holidays to work alongside greenstaff, particularly on green's maintenance.

Franz is not looking for any payment, though if a club would care to make some contribution to his living costs, he no doubt, would be very grateful.

This is an excellent opportunity for a club to benefit from the services of a most willing extra hand during the height of the season and at the same time give him valuable experience in our greenkeeping techniques.

Golf is steeped in the family. His sister plays for Hamburg and his Mother has represented West Germany.

Beaver Take-Over

Polymark

F. H. Tomkins P.L.C., the industrial management company, has acquired Polymark- Beaver Equipment Ltd., manufacturers of professional and commercial grass cutting equipment.

Tomkins already owns Hayters P.L.C. and this new acquisition will compliment the current range of Hayters' rotary grass cutters. It will significantly strengthen Tomkins' position in the professional lawnmarket and further establish its products overseas, particularly in America. Recently, Tomkins have invested more than £1m in improved production facilities at Hayters' Bishop's Stortford factory and this will benefit the combination of Hayter and Beaver and aid the strengthening of distribution arrangements.

Greg Hutchings, Chief Executive of Tomkins, said,

"We are very pleased to be making this infill acquisition which will complement and extend our already strong position in the lawnmower market. It clearly demonstrates our commitment to developing and expanding our existing business''. F. H. Tomkins recently made unsuccessful overtures to Britain's biggest grass cutting company - Ransomes Sims & Jefferies, and this take-over of Polymark Beaver confirms their determination to gain a sizeable piece of the turf maintenance market.

CURIOUSER

Is this the way forward for Golf Course Architecture?

Fred Hawtree looks at current trends in the confection of new courses and yearns for a classical revival.

CURIOUSER

They are at it again, as you have no doubt noticed. I refer to professional golfers. In times gone, they designed the world's earliest golf courses. Then, as the purses got bigger, they concentrated on their own game while Colt, Alison, Morrison, Simpson, Mackenzie, Mackenzie Ross and many others, all amateurs, developed a profession and set out a few rules on how to do it best. Now, just when the purses, the prizes, the sponsorships, and the rewards for endorsing somebody's tee shirt have anything up to five noughts on the price tag, the pro's are back with a vengeance and a few more noughts are being added to the price of today's new lay-outs.

Well, it's a free country with a market economy and we all like to see our lads doing well even if we ourselved pay for it in the end. But I am bothered by those extra noughts and by some of the reasons for them appearing on the bill. There is no need for me to declare an interest as we of riper years can rise entirely above all that is petty, envious or malicious and pass on to you the pure distillation of half a century's experience without fear or favour.

Let's first take a look at where all these extra noughts on the cost of today's golf courses are coming from.

First of all, the top names in any sort of job do not come cheap. The sportsman probably comes less cheaply still because he only has about twenty years to turn it into cash. Fortunately in golf, the Seniors' Circuit will now help him to prolong the season but the principle remains the same. The best hay is made before the seedheads start to appear.

But then a name in itself is not an isolated item on the bill. It has to be emphasised, publicised and maximised. This process, besides requiring more payouts, involves other insidious erosions of the bank balance. To justify an expensive intervention, the design of the golf course spreads a nasty rash over the countryside. This will be due to so much sand, so much water, so many rockeries or so many mini-mountains that the visual effect is outlandish: One used to be able to describe a layout in broad terms as 'links', or 'park' or 'heath'. Not any more. Eager to engrave a strong signature on a piece of ground which he may well only see two or three times in his life because he has little time to spare from other commitments, your 'professional' golf course designer will do his damnedest to ensure that, when the dust settles, the result is as unlike any other golf course as he can make it, except for the number of holes. (And I am not so sure that even the mystical figure 18 is sacrosanct any more).

The result will be interesting though puzzling for archaeologists in the 25th century but not always much fun to play in this one. And expensive.... just listen to this. In order to transform a little piece of Britain into a displaced section of the Gobi Desert, the first thing these rascals do is strip the top-soil off something like 50 acres. It may be 100 in practice but 50 will do to start with. Now this morning at 10.00 a.m. the price of this operation by your friendly contractor was 25p per square metre. A quick sum in your head which you have probably done by now, turns 50 acres into 20 hectares so you do not need me to tell you that those mounds of earth all over the place cost $200,000m^2 \times £0.25 = £50,000$ to put there. Another quick calculation suggests that when to put there. Another quick calculation suggests that when we spread all that top-soil out again, we shall be spending another £50,000 on top of the first. And now we can start building the golf course. So it's no wonder the green-fee has to be £25 and upwards and you can't always get a comfortable round.

But don't rush off to get your clubs yet. There is more - much more. All those exotic earthworks have got to be maintained because they don't really belong in their new situation and do not easily adapt to our native routine. I am indebted to Donald Steel, current Chairman of the British Association of Golf Course Architects who ferreted out the vital figures while he was covering the Ryder Cup at Muirfield Village for 'The Sunday Telegraph'. 'The reason', his article concluded Muirfield Village's condition was so perfect is its maintenance budget of $850,000 a year, including salaries for 43 greenkeepers to give it tender, loving care'.

See what I mean? A whole new golf course every twelve months. He also said that it was a

He also said that it was a mistake to compare any aspect of American and British golf. I am not so sure about that if they are attacking us in our own back-yard although the general premise is very true. It has taken at least fifty years to get rid of the image of golf as a rich man's game. Then just as it is finally shed, along come super-luxe developments which risk putting it out of reach of the new wave of enthusiasts. What we really need is more developments along

This does not mean that they have changed the format of the Open Championship to Foursomes. It only indicates that made a few off the cuff comments to Joe B. (God bless him), on the way to the lockerroom and that he then went off home with his tape-recorder and turned them into a book for me after a modest amount of research. You can always tell the 'with' books because they never quite get rid of the chatty style of the original tape with its endless 'you know's', 'You see's', and 'However's' but they certainly earn their cut. So does the man standing behind the Big Name. I therefore hope that we shall see the layouts of the next decade being designed by Ben Nickler WITH Caspar Weinberger or whoever else they take under their wing.

I also hope that the promoter ensures that the end-result of their operations will bear some resemblance to the original landscape and derive its special quality from its own surroundings and internal features. He will find this cheaper, the planners will be less suspicious, the populace will be less aggressive, and we shall be able to play a round on it without budgeting in three figures.

In case you are still not convinced, look around your own county and select the course which you judge to be the most generally popular. Then try to judge the extent to which that popularity is derived from what was there before they built the course and is still there afterwards. With the long winter evenings on the way, play this game in other counties too. Send me your nominations and we will see if we agree. My theory is that the less you see of the architect's work the better the course. That is not to say he has not put his heart and soul into it. He has. But he has used the site as his fourth dimension not as a means to expressing bizarre theories.

Another sobering thought occurs to me - this anonymous character in the background who draws the plans and instructs the contractor between the annual visits of his overlord. Who is the real designer? The pro? Or the chap who sweats it out on the site? The wheel has come full circle. When James Braid or Harry Vardon used to lay out a golf course in a day's visit, it was the greenkeeper or local contractor who had to make it work afterwards. And very little credit he got for it. It was not such a big deal in those days. But now that a new project needs the full publicity treatment to create maximum 'impact' why do we never hear the name of the man who is doing the real work while the big name poses for 'pix' holding a spade, of all unlikely implements. They simply don't use them any more. (If you find this scenario a trifle far-fetched, turn back to a recent issue of this magazine for confirmation...

And still another thing. If the invisible man is clever enough to translate a few lordly waves of the hand in between air-port transfers, why does he not put his own signature on the result? He certainly deserves as big a medal as the part-time pro. Most ghost writers in golfing literature (With one possible exception) get a mention in such titles as " 'The Day I won the Open' by Fred Hawtree with Joe Bloggs'."

the lines of the Hoebridge Golf Centre near Woking in Surrey. Here the beginner will find a Driving Range, Par 3 Course, a full 18 holes, with another 9 holes Intermediate Course under construction. All these are served by central club-house facilities which are more than adequate and probably a great deal better than most private clubs. This development is only a few years old but serves a very wide spectrum and none are put off by the cost.

But cost is not the only danger. The greatest growth industry of recent years has been the departments of planning allied to conservation. Since they really started to flex their muscles, it has become more and more tricky steering a new project through the early stages and making sure that all the authorities, associations, societies, residents and pressure groups who might be remotely interested have all been consulted and persuaded that the proposed golf course will not ruin the view, will not result in an increase of traffic hazards, will not destroy the badger's favourite habitat, will not destroy the last breeding ground of the natterjack toad, and might even give a few hundred people the chance to join in the hitherto limited appreciation of these desirable features. It may sound impossible but that can still be done. But we shall be wasting our time if we turn loose many more American professionals who presumably twist the arms of the tame designers standing in their shadow in order to achieve the shock novelty they need to get their brain-child into the limelight.

Guides to the Golf Courses in Britain

Two new guides to the golf courses in Britain will hit the bookstalls in time for the Christmas stocking.

The AA Guide to Golf Courses in Britain and the PGA - Golf Guide - Where to Play and Where to Stay

Price wise, the best value for money is undoubtably the PGA Guide, offering 364 pages of information for £3.95. The AA Guide has 268 pages and costs £7.95.

This year's eleventh issue of Where to Play and Where to Stay contains a wealth of information not only listing every golf course in England, Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, but each section of the country is introduced by a leading provincial golf writer who has used his local knowledge to introduce the 'little gems' in his region. The golf courses that may not be to championship standard but are nevertheless a joy to play.

So many golfers set off on a golfing holiday with only the big names in mind and miss out a nearby 18 holes of golfing paradise known only to the locals.

As an example it is worth quoting Tony Garnett, the Sports Editor of the East Anglian Daily Times a self confessed long handicapper, who admits to knowing as much about the rough on most East Anglian courses as he does the fairways.

"The golfer who sets up base in West Suffolk is also well catered for with well designed parkland courses. My favourite is the nine hole course at Flempton, which I enjoy even more than the more famous Royal Worlington, which is less than half an hour away. Flempton has 91 bunkers which must be something of a record and they give visitors a warm welcome......" Discussing Barnham Broom he says the course is notable for its rivers and lakes, some of which are quite deep. "The last time I was there I heard a bit of a commotion behind the reeds in one of the ponds. I supposed it was a swan, but to my surprise a diver, fully equipped for the job started to emerge from the water. He threw a bag of balls onto the steeply sloping bank and there was nothing he could do as they rolled, one by one, back into the deep muddy water!"

Similar articles prefacing the sections are included from such notable journalists as John Drake from the Yorkshire Evening Post, golf writers John Reece in the West Country, Bob Jenkins of the Scottish Sunday Post, Brian Barron, Northampton Chronicle and Echo and Chris Smart, Welsh correspondent for the Western Mail.

This golf guide with a forward by Europe's Ryder Cup Captain, Tony Jacklin is excellent value for money and an essential reference for any golfer tempted to stray from his home course.

Although the AA Guide lists the British Golf Course alphabetically it was puzzling to discover they have completely ignored those in Northern Ireland, particularly as the main article, by that doyen of golf writers Peter Dobereiner, occupies nine pages telling the reader what a marvellous golfing experience awaits one in the Emerald Isle.

Perhaps the AA are producing a supplement for their members. If not there is always Where to Play and Where to Stay to refer to for details! TECHNICAL 2

We believe that our experience based on over 100 years of research and development has produced probably the finest lawn mower grinding machines available today. Our customers tell us the "EXPRESS DUAL" is a really 'honest' machine that's built to do the job and do it well! It will successfully grind cylinders 'in-situ' or 'separately', just as efficiently and just as accurately and it will keep you going when repair work builds up.

THE MASTER is a heavy duty lawn mower grinding machine particularly suitable for gang mowers and rebladed cylinders.

THE ANGLEMASTER has been specially designed and developed for bottom blade grinding.

... there's no substitute for experience!

Manufacturers of fine lawn mower grinding machines for over 100 years.

Berkhamsted Greenkeeper returns to his first course to win the Jacobsen Tournament

The third annual Jacobsen National Greenkeepers' Tournament played over the Hunstanton links in Norfolk last month again produced a nail biting finish with three players tying on 36 Stableford points.

The winner, first assistant Gerald Bruce, a four handicap golfer at Berkhamsted made sure of the trophy at the first extra hole in the play off by sinking his putt for a birdie at the par four first hole.

The two others in contention, Alan Patterson (11) an 18 year old apprentice greenkeeper from Powerfoot, the delightful seaside course on the Solway Firth and Andrew Toomey (13) Head Greenkeeper at the Rochford Hundred Golf Club in Essex needed three extra holes before Patterson emerged as runner-up.

For Gerald Bruce, his triumph was the more memorable because Hunstanton was the course where, under the tuition of Head Greenkeeper Jimmy Reed, he served his apprenticeship before moving to Berkhamsted to become the first assistant. The son of a police inspector at Kings Lynn, Gerald's success has delighted the members of his new club.

The Captain of Berkhamsted Golf Club, Mr. M. J. Howard, has issued his congratulations to Gerald Bruce in a letter to members and wished him well for his forthcoming educational trip to Houston, Texas.

The Jacobsen final has now become an established fixture over the demanding Hunstanton course, where the hospitality and welcome to greenkeepers nationwide could not be bettered. The club professional, John Carter ran the tournament from start to finish with a degree of organisation to match any major golf event. The course was presented in immaculate condition by Jimmy Reed, despite torrential rain over the previous three days which many thought would make the links unplayable. His greens, naturally, cut with the latest diesel Greensking fitted with the Turf Groomer, were like putting on polished glass. Certainly the fastest greens any of the competitors had seen this year. Over dinner Jimmy said he was cutting at 3/32nds, every day during the summer, but might raise the cutters slightly and reduce the mowing to three times a week as the winter progressed. If this is his greens maintenance programme, then for this course it cannot be faulted.

At the presentation dinner in the Hunstanton Club House, Jacobsen's General Manager for the UK, Mr. Chris Smith, said it was the company's intention to continue this tournament which has proved so popular both in the preliminary rounds and at the final. "It is our intention to make everyone a winner with Jacobsen" he added.

Gerald Bruce, in addition to his trophy and voucher for £100, has been invited to represent greenkeepers from all over the country at the GCSAA Convention to take place in Houston, Texas in February 1988. He will also be able to participate in the series of seminars, lectures and debates, which are part of the seven day programme in conjunction with the largest indoor turf exhibition in the world.

If he takes his golf clubs with him there will certainly be an invitation to play some of the excellent courses outside Houston, that is if he has the time to fit in a round between a host of other invitations likely to come his way.

This year the Jacobsen final produced a number of new faces among the competitors as well as a few 'old stagers' and no disrespect is intended to Bob Plain, and Gordon Payne! Once more the luxuries of the Caley Hall Motel were made the available to all the players kept in strict order by mine host the hospitable Clive King, whose stature and girth is a living example of the delights of fine living.

Breakfast at the Caley is only surpassed by the dinner at night, closely followed by the entertainment to suit all tastes.

Among my most treasured possessions is a book entitled 'Golf in the Making' by David Stirk and lan Henderson, published in a limited edition in 1979 and printed by Lund Humphries in Bradford.

At the time I was working in the printing industry and over several months saw this 332 page book put together. It is a complete history of the game of golf from its earliest beginnings to around the start of the first World War, with pages and pages of the most detailed research, into not only the game itself, but the development of the clubs and balls and the personalities of the earliest exponents of the game.

Now, nineteen years later, David Stirk, one of the leading historians of golf, is the author of a magnificent new book entitled 'Golf - The History of an Obsession'.

This time, David Stirk has reviewed the game from its commencement in Scotland or maybe Holland, perhaps China, though it is doubtful whether one country of origin had any influence on the other. This beautifully illustrated reference book takes golf through to the present day touching on clubs and balls, fashion changes for both men and women golfers, the growth of tournament golf embracing Tom Morris, father and son and of course the great Triumvirate, Vardon, Braid and J. H. Taylor, Finally the author discusses the Modern Game, the continuous year long, world-wide round of activity, with its megastars earning millions, supported by the hard working 'bit players', never likely to make a fortune but able to earn a comfortable living by graft, dedication and living out of a suitcase.

The book concludes with a chapter on the modern courses with superb double page colour illustrations of Turnberry, Cypress Point, Pebble Beach, Augusta and one of St. Andrews from the air, showing the course completely surrounded on three sides by the sea fringed by the most inviting stretch of golden sand any Thompson Holiday Guide would be proud of.

David Stirk, FRCS is a West Country Surgeon and a member at Westward Ho! He has twice won the Devon Open Championship and was runner up in the British Seniors Championship. As a student of golf history and a collector of golf memorabilia, no one has better qualifications to produce such a fascinating study of the game. A quote from the opening for buying it. ''I have always been fascinated, not only by the game itself, but by the history of the sport. Given man's propensity for throwing, rolling and kicking balls, and hitting them with several bats, rackets, clubs and cues, the development of the notion of hitting a small stationary ball across turf, with a stick, for fun, was inevitable".

A quote from the opening chapter perfectly sums up the author's reasons for writing the book and the reader's justification for buying it.

GOLF: THE HISTORY OF AN OBSESSION,

A new book from Phaidon Press by Golf Enthusiast and Expert, David Stirk, is priced at £25. and must be a classic gift book for every golfer.

Greenkeepers Win Trip to Houston

More than 100 people attended the Institute of Groundsmanship's third annual Education and Training awards ceremony held in the main library of the Reform Club in London's Pall Mall on Friday 30th October 1987.

Although more than 40 awards were made, highlight of the evening was the announcement of the winners of the 1987 Groundsman of the Year competition, organised by the Institute, sponsored by Scottish Agricultural Industries plc. Greenkeepers won the two top prizes of a trip to the GCSAA Convention in Houston in February. Winner of the Young Groundsman of the Year title was 21-yearold Huw Morgan, Head Greenkeeper of Fairwood Golf Club, Swansea. He received a framed certificate, engraved crystal whisky decanter, as well as the top prize of an allexpenses-paid trip to Houston, Texas.

Winner of the Master Groundsman of the Year competition was Laurence Pithie (35), Golf Course Manager of the Minchinhampton Golf Club near Stroud, and runner-up in last year's competition. He received a similar prize.

Twenty-one year old Huw Morgan has been at Fairwood for two years and is responsible for the maintenance of the 147 acres parkland course, along with his staff of four.

Married, he enjoys all sports, but especially golf and football, and he is also a keen gardener. His father, Vivian, is Course Manager at the Pontadawe Golf Club Laurence Pithie (35), has been at his club since 1981 where he is responsible for two golf courses: one, on National Trust land, has to be run without any of the aids of modern sprays and chemicals, but at the other Mr. Pithie is free to use whatever modern devices the budget will allow! On this New Course Laurence has undertaken a number of major construction projects during 1987, including the addition of a lake.

Married with two young children, he has a famous next-door neighbour. The Minchinhampton Club borders on the estate of the Princess Royal at Tetbury. His hobbies and interests include, playing golf, badminton, football, travel photography and stamp collecting.

During his 1970-72 apprenticeship he gained all four City & Guilds certificates in greenkeeping, and last year successfully completed a correspondence course in golf course management.

APPOINTMENT

ROGER DIX, General Manager at Monro Horticulture Limited

General Manager appointed at Monro Horticulture Limited

Monro Horticulture Limited, created from the combination of Fyffes-Monro Horticultural Sundries Limited and Kenneth Wilson Horticulture, in February this year, has appointed Roger Dix as General Manager.

Roger Dix joins Monro Horticulture Limited after seven years with J. W. Chafer Ltd. the Doncaster based company specialising in liquid fertilisers, chemicals and crop spraying machinery, where he was a director. Previously with the agricultural division of ICI, at their Millbank headquarters he also worked in Africa.

Commenting on his appointment as General Manager, Roger Dix told Golf Greenkeeping, "Monro Horticulture occupies a highly respected position in the industry. The enlarged company has several exciting developments in hand, which will bring many benefits to our customers and contribute to Monro's future growth and prosperity".

Now giving national coverage from seven depots, the expanded company is recognised as a major national supplier to the horticultural industry. NEWS 11

New 3-wheel Drive Triplex from Triplex

Greenkeepers can now get 3wheel drive on Jacobsen's Tri-King 1471. The new option gives golf course managers better traction and manouverability for improved performance on slopes and in wet conditions.

Jacobsen's 3-wheel-drive option was developed after discussion with turf managers who said there was a definite need for 3-wheel drive for hillclimbing, side-slope mowing and traction in wet conditions.

The hydraulic motor on the rear steering wheel significantly improved traction performance. The 3-wheel-drive Tri-King is able to mow up slopes where other triplexes either slip, stop, or must raise their reels to get traction. The new 3-wheel-drive option -

The new 3-wheel-drive option together with other options such as 5- or 10-blade reels, grass catchers, grooved or solid front rollers, front micro-height adjusters, and traction wheel weights - lets greenkeepers set up the machine to match their conditions. NEWS 10
