

Sussex

The AGM of Sussex was held recently with 24 members present.

The financial position of the branch was reported as very healthy. Lionel Harris proposed sending two members to Warwick paid for out of branch funds and this was accepted by the meeting. C. Dryden and R. Ball represented Sussex at the EIGGA conference.

The election of officers was: chairman - Lionel Harris, president - Peter Simpson, vice-chairman - Allen Butrymowicz, committee members - Derek Coomber and Roy Jones and administrator - R. Jobson.

The first tournament of the season will be at Seaford Golf Club, Blatchington on April 24. Entry forms and other information from R. Jobson on Horsham 60525.

Kevin Munt (above), a founder member and trustee of EIGGA, has been appointed links supervisor at Royal Dornoch.

Hankley Common, Kevin's former club, has named Ian McMillan its new course manager. Another McMillan on the move is Billy, who has switched from Badgemore Park to join father Jack at Sunningdale. Billy will be the foreman of the Old Course. His youngest brother Cameron is already part of the team.

Billy McMillan fills the vacancy left by the departure of David Lenham to Camberley Heath, where he has taken over the head greenkeeper's role.

South Wales

The branch held its AGM at Royal Porthcawl recently. A well-attended meeting proved extremely productive with the future of EIGGA and activities in the area prompting good debate.

It is hoped that a tournament will be staged in July, combining an evening lecture by a golf course superintendent from the States. Members will be notified as soon as details are finalised.

A new committee was elected, consisting of: chairman - Bruce Jamieson (Royal Porthcawl), vice-chairman - Neil Carter (Whitchurch), golf administrator - Mike Wilson (Ashburnham), administrator - Raymond Hunt (Royal Porthcawl).

The new committee would like to thank Dennis Archer for his efforts as branch administrator and also Royal Porthcawl GC for the use of its clubhouse.

Plans are being drawn up for next winter's season of educational lectures and seminars and if any members can suggest suitable speakers, please let me know.

Finally, the branch would like to thank Eric Staniforth, managing director of SISIS, for all that he has contributed to golf greenkeeping and wish him a healthy and enjoyable retirement.

Raymond Hunt.

West

Since the last report, the section AGM has been held, courtesy of Cowglen GC, with nearly 30 members in attendance. The meeting was interesting and thanks go to chairman A. Connell for handling the meeting so competently.

Chairman Connell was elected for another year's office, as was his vice-chairman R. Fitzpatrick. A. McDougall was returned as secretary for another year. Proposals from the west section membership for the executive AGM have been put in writing and sent to the general secretary.

The section has again been playing football with different degrees of success! In the first encounter against a pub team, we were beaten 3-0 but, in the return, when back to a full first team, we won 3-2. I would like to take this opportunity to throw out a challenge to any other sides.

Important dates for the section are: Thursday May 8 - spring tournament at Cowglen Golf Club; Wednesday June 4 - team match versus Ayrshire at Milngavie Golf Club and Thursday September 28 - autumn tournament at East Renfrewshire (provisional).

We would like to take this opportunity to thank past chairman Jim Paton for all his work on the section's behalf. He has resigned to take up the job of Ayrshire section secretary and we wish him every success.

The new west section committee is: A. Connell (Cawder) - chairman, R. Fitzpatrick (Whitecraigs) - vice chairman and A. McDougall (Stirling) - secretary.

The committee consists of D. Hindmarch (Milngavie), C. George (Lenzie), A. Ferguson (Cowglen), S. Hogg (DrumPELLIER), C. Kennedy (Haggs Castle), F. Scullion (Dumbarton), D. Gall (Cardross), R. Brewer (Douglas Park) and trade members R. Aitken of Richard Aitken & Sons Seedsmen and R. Deans of Autogarden (Glasgow).

The chairman and committee hope that everyone in the section will take an active part in events this year, helping to make it the most successful ever. We also wish everyone in the section a good growing year.

A. McDougall.

Dear Editor

Every time your magazine arrives, I read it with great interest and learn something new.

Obviously, the main theme in your magazine is greenkeeping, rather than construction and architecture. Nevertheless, I consider these three elements for the establishment of a golf course very closely interwoven and it is on this point that I would like to make some remarks.

Thanks to the good and sensible advice we get from grass, soil and construction experts, we, the architects, can supply the specifications for a properly built golf course.

The experienced constructor knows how to apply these specifications to his work and eventually supply a first-class finished product.

By that time, the client is often in a happy state of mind, sitting on a cloud of euphoric contentment, satisfied that his project has been realised.

So far so good, especially for the architect and the constructor, but then what? Who is now going to be the nurse to this healthy baby? In other words, who will be the greenkeeper and staff?

Often, the greenkeeper is only taken on just before or after construction work has finished and may well come from an area or a country where conditions are entirely different.

The greenkeeper is not, and cannot, be aware of the difficulties that may have occurred during construction, the weak spots on the course, the problem areas, etc...

As a result of this, the healthy baby becomes ill after a year or so and the client unhappy and discontented.

Suddenly, everybody is blaming everybody else for what has gone wrong.

I would strongly recommend that certainly the greenkeeper and, if possible, also part of his staff work on the course during construction, thereby establishing a lasting contact with the architect and constructor and getting the full benefit of knowing how to cope with any problem areas inherent to the soil structure.

It would also do no harm to solicit the services of an agronomist, specialising in the field of golf courses, towards the end of construction in order for him to establish a maintenance programme with the agreement of all parties concerned, very much including the greenkeeper.

In that case, there will be much less arguing later and the respective responsibilities will have been clearly defined.
