Continued...

A change is being made to the distribution arrangements in the UK for Morrison/Jacobsen products, which will be marketed separately by new companies. Morrison equipment is to be distributed by a company owned by the current general manager Ray Woodward. It will be called Morrison Mowers UK and based in Gloucestershire. Jacobsen will be forming a new company known as Jacobsen UK, continuing at the present King's Lynn, Norfolk base.

The Tidytee is a combined ball cleaner and litter bin 'with useful additions' from Bridges Pennants of Southend-on-Sea, Essex (Tel: 0702 612344/67393). All items use a single support. There's a litter bin with a removable container, a holder for two golf balls, a hook for a towel, the company's proven golf ball cleaner and a holder for a plastic water container. Steel parts are galvanised after manufacture and maintenance of the unit itself is minimal.

The Tidytee is priced £96 (excluding carriage and VAT). The water can and towel are extra.

Harry Johnson, 74, consultant director of Joseph Bentley, died recently. His association with Bentley's spanned 60 years, broken only by the Second World War. He joined the company in 1926 and progressed to salesman, company secretary, director and then managing director in 1965. Although Harry retired as managing director in 1976, he continued to work as a consultant director.

Bob Andrews has been appointed sole UK distributor of the Amazone range of tractor-drawn Groundkeeper mowers and E.K. fertiliser spreaders.

The Groundkeeper, a development of the Lawn Genie machine, is available in different sizes to suit tractors from 12hp upwards. It cuts and collects long or short grass and scarifies large areas of mown grass, collecting the rubbish. In autumn, it becomes a leaf collector.

The E.K. spreader is made for Bob Andrews by a company that has specialised in fertiliser broadcasters for 50 years, during which time it has made and sold 750,000 spreaders.

The EK300 and EK400 models hold 300kg (265l) and 400kg (375l) respectively. They work well on 15hp (or larger) tractors and broadcast any free-running material over a 30ft swath at almost any selected rate per acre. Amazone EK spreaders handle rock salt and grit for roads and paths.

For further information, contact Ken Salt on 0344 885575 or write to Bob Andrews, Pontiac Works, Fernbank Road, Ascot, Berkshire SL5 8JH.
