

Can you guess the guests at Banquet 2000?

BTME 2000 is guaranteed to be a magnificent occasion, one which will be talked about well into the next millennium, but that in itself gave BIGGA HOUSE staff a real headache.

Who would we get to headline the Banquet and expand on the success of an occasion which has witnessed some wonderful entertainment over the last few years? Who will forget Tom O'Connor, Stan Boardman, Bobby Davro, Lee Hurst and, last year, Showaddywaddy, who had everyone on their feet?

Well, we are confident that next year's headliners will certainly not let the side down and that BTME 2000 will have another feather in its cap.

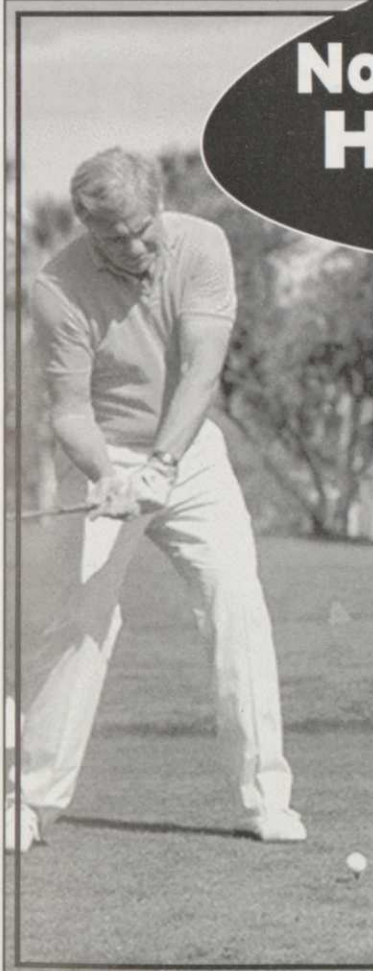

A Clue?

One of the songs for which the band became famous includes in its title the first name of one of BIGGA's Golden Key Supporters.

To help you even further, we've also printed part of a photo of the guesting band. If you still haven't got it, don't worry. There'll be another clue next month!

North Staffs Irrigation HAVE DONE IT AGAIN!

We were the first to standardise on five sprinklers per green for our irrigation installations and now we have developed an automatic drainage system (patent applied for).

The UK has suffered from greater than usual rainfall during recent golfing seasons and this has resulted in many courses being closed because they were waterlogged.

We have the solution. Our systems are able to remove the casual water which is then redirected to the nearest suitable escape route. The operation is automatically controlled in a similar way to an irrigation system.

Traditional drainage methods still have their place in sports turf maintenance but our system takes the removal of water into a new age.
