Above: A new colour coding system makes navigation easy on the BIGGA website

The new look BIGGA website was launched at the beginning of April and is active as you are reading this article.

Jam-packed with up-to-the-minute information about BIGGA, greenkeeping and the fineturf industry in general, the website will be an informative and invaluable tool to anyone connected with the industry, game or indeed, the casual visitor.

New features on the site include an enhanced membership section, with a secure access point for members only. Once you have entered your surname and membership number, you will be granted access to a secure membership area, specially reserved for our exclusive members.

Education has also received a major overhaul, with full details of regional and BIGGA HOUSE training courses, library and career information, salary recommendations, as well as details of all our major competitions and events.

Completely new for 2000, is our 'Latest' section. Here, as you might expect, are articles and features with only the most recent information in mind. There is also an event calendar, to help you plan your BIGGA diary. If you would like to publicise an event, seminar or outing you are having, follow the email link, let us know, and we will update the page.

Also new for 2000, is the online BIGGA Golf Directory. Packed with industry links, products and services, the directory is searchable in both category and alphabetical orders. You can even link directly to a company's website, or email them instantly.

Keep checking this page regularly, as we will be launching our members directory in the very near future. So if you've lost contact with a colleague or friend, this is the place to get in touch with them!

There are also enhanced email and contact facilities for all of the staff at headquarters, so why not drop us a line!
