

BUYERS' GUIDE

T&G Irrigation

For the past two years or so the Gods have conspired to make the life of all specialist irrigation companies extremely challenging. Wet summers have caused many golf clubs to review irrigation budgets and to postpone numerous major projects. The effect on some companies has been severe.

T & G Irrigation took the changing market conditions as a sign that it was time to diversify and set about finding alternative ways to maintain work levels for the staff. It has been rewarding to see that with a relatively small effort new doors opened and work has been sourced from a wide variety of places.

Several local councils have installed literally dozens of new bowling green irrigation systems having seen the whole life costings, producing savings in labour and improvements to the actual greens. Surprisingly, there has been great interest in private garden systems, especially for the upper end of the market. We recently installed a football pitch system for one Client at the bottom of his extensive garden. Landscape schemes for diverse private companies has also risen in popularity.

Now that the sun is back we find ourselves with a broader Client base and a greater range of schemes to offer our Clients. All of which proves that in the face of adversity if you are prepared to tackle the challenges you come out the stronger for it and as far as T & G Irrigation is concerned we are looking forward to a brighter future.

So, if there are any Clients who wish to have a bespoke scheme designed for any particular application they should contact Paul Curtis on either 07860 542616 or at the office on 01427 874200 and our staff will be pleased to help
