The golfer does not, as a rule, appear at his best at Christmas. A painful alternative is before him. Either he must wholly neglect his duty, fly to a golf course, and leave his wife to hang the Christmas tree and his children to enjoy it alone, or else he must stay at home and go through with it all, in a state of Stygian and dyspeptic gloom, in which case, although his conduct will be the less base, the sum total of unhappiness produced by it will probably be the greater.

NEW PROTURF PACKAGING MAKES PRODUCTS EASIER TO RECOGNIZE AND USE

Color coding and detailed use information characterize the new line of Scotts ProTurf packaging. Each type of product has been given its own distinctive background color on the package for ready identification. These are (l. to r. in photo) blue for fungicides and fungicide-fertilizer combination products; green for insecticides; orange for fertilizers; and a white background for herbicides and herbicide-fertilizer combinations.

The new designs will help reduce the possibility of applying the wrong product. They will also help to assure accuracy of delivery and warehouse inventory control. Clear use directions include both a Scotts and Lely spreader setting recommendation for each product. The product name, stock number, directions and spreader settings all have been made even more legible on the new packages.

The Golf Course Superintendents Association of America is spearheading a research program on this putting green turf problem (red leaf spot). We are experiencing it in our area. The combined efforts of Dr. Houston Couch and the G.C.S.A.A. are organizing data to hopefully, eventually solve this serious problem.

I feel it is a worthy maneuver on the part of our national organization; showing that the G.C.S.A.A. does benefit its members whenever possible. It was Paul Voykin that stimulated this whole project, through repeated requests directed toward our G.C.S.A.A. President Mel Lucas. Paul certainly should be commended.
