

NEW LITERATURE

Keystone lit details wall construction

Keystone Retaining Wall Systems has released its new technical manual.

The eight-page brochure shows improved details on designing and installing mortarless, concrete modular retaining walls used by architects, superintendents, designers, engineers and contractors.

Architects and superintendents have used Keystone Retaining Wall Systems for tee boxes, golf car path linings, pond retention, parking lots and landscape applications.

The mortarless construction utilizes high-strength, concrete modules with interlocked and reinforced fiberglass pins.

They don't deteriorate, corrode, warp or discolor. They do not require replacement like traditional timber walls or continual upkeep like boulders.

The system has the appearance of natural, quarried stone with deep shadowing effects.

Keystone walls require no special tools, equipment, mortar, special footings or preservatives.

The dry stack process requires a shallow trench to establish a leveling pad of granular material. Lay the base course, pin the units, backfill and compact. These steps are repeated to the desired height and topped off with a Keystone cap.

The materials can be installed quickly and often by the golf course's own maintenance crew. The one-and-one-half-square-foot blocks make estimating easy.

For more information, contact Keystone Retaining Wall Systems, 7600 France Ave. South, Suite 110, Edina, Minn. 55435 or call 612-897-1040 and fax 612-897-3858.
