nuni course Town trustees vote to purchase r

LAKEWOOD, Ill. - Lakewood Village trustees have voted to buy the 240-acre municipal golf course from E.M. Melahan Construction Co. in Algonquin for about $3.2 million.

The golf course was built as the second course for the Turnberry subdivision. When that subdivision's last developer declared bankruptcy, and later attempts to find a new developer failed, trustees decided to bid.

The partially completed course is scheduled to open Aug. 31. Officials will attempt to reach agreement with an outside firm to operate the course.

Polo to add unique touch to Kentucky golf complex

LEXINGTON, Ky. - An 18-hole golf course and a polo field will be unique centerpieces of a 300-home, $60-million subdivision called the Polo Fields off Flat Rock Road in far eastern Jefferson County.

Developers are billing the 295acre project as "the first moderately priced golf and country club community in eastern Jefferson County." Homes, including the lot, will sell for $150,000 to $200,000.

The golf course and polo field are expected to be finished in mid-1992.

The unusual polo theme is expected to sell well in horse country.

Site preparation, including roads, utilities and clubhouse, will cost about $5 million, the golf course and polo field another $4.6 million. William Newcomb is designing the Another subdivision being developed around a golf courses is HFH Inc.'s Glenmary.

"The golf course is a real draw," said HFH spokeswoman Mary Lawrence Young.

Hole-riddled oak stands in midst of controversy

CHICO, Calif. - The proposed 12th hole of the re-aligned Bidwell Golf Course has been the subject of several verbal swings because of a once-mighty oak tree.

The large, half-dead blue oak tree estimated to be about 150 years old may be weathered and weary and riddled with pockmarks from woodpeckers, but it's a lively issue to environmentalists.

They contend tree protection is necessary to ensure survival of woodpeckers using as an acorn cache "Tree No. 50," as it's referred to in golf course plans.

Golfco, which manages the course for the city of Chico, counters, "The alignment is necessary to make the course usable for championship-caliber golf tournaments."

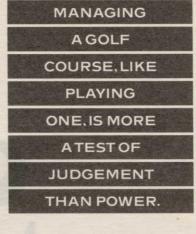

Two park commissioners see golf course expansion as a violation of the Bidwell Park master plan which they claim specifically calls for "preserving and enhancing wildlife habitat" in the park.

Walter Koenig, University of California at Berkeley professor considered "the world expert on woodpeckers," wrote: "Removal of the tree will, for all practical purposes, be tantamount to both killing the birds and rendering the area uninhabitable by woodpeckers for decades to come."

If Triumph' were a golf club, it would be graphite.

It is that advanced. It is that powerful.

In fact, no other turf insecticide achieves faster, longer lasting control of problem pests.

But along with this power comes the tremendous responsibility to always use it properly.

After all, the beauty of your golf course isn't the only thing we are working hard to preserve.
