USGA research book highlights environment

than emotional analysis of the environmental effects of golf courses and should prove invaluable to those debating golf course development.

"It's a balanced account of the available information out there," said Green Section National Director Jim Snow.

The 950-page book is based on Duluth, Minn.-based Spectrum Research's review of pertinent scientific literature (not including articles from general interest magazines) that was reported to the USGA's Turfgrass Research Committee two years ago.

That report, entitled "Environmental Issues Related to Golf Course Construction and Management: A Literature Search and Review," simply listed available information.

It also suggested areas needing more research. The research committee has used the report to decide what studies the USGA should fund.

The new, easier-to-read book is divided into chapters — such as wildlife, water use and pesticide applications — and includes an extensive reference section at the end of each chapter.

The authors also updated the textbook to include important findings, like the Cape Cod and Pennsylvania State University ground water studies, that were not available in 1990, Snow said.

"The book should be very popular with anyone interested in the environment and golf courses," said Snow, adding that it will be distributed to libraries at colleges and universities with turf management programs, as well as state and federal environmental agencies.

"Every golf course superintendent should have a copy. Like any textbook, it contains more information than you'd ever need. But it's a great source when you need a reference to back up your argument."

The book includes some agricultural pesticide-fate studies, since turfgrasses and golf courses have not been studied as extensively, Snow said.

While the agricultural test results may cause concern, they actually represent a worst-case scenario since golf courses are blessed with a permanent cover crop (turf) that helps buffer leaching and runoff losses, he added.

Snow said the golf industry will gain credibility by including potentially negative, as well as positive, information.

He points to the original report, which was sent to many environmental groups, including the Sierra Club and Audubon Society.

"It hasn't backfired on us at all," Snow said. "We've received nothing but compliments about the original report."

The book's release, less than a month before the U.S. Open Championship, is convenient, said Brian Lewis of Lewis Publishers Inc., the environmental publishing house printing the book.

It will be on display at the USGA's environmental tent during the championship, scheduled for June 18-21 at Pebble Beach (Calif.) Golf Links, Lewis said.

The USGA (telephone 908-234-2300) and Lewis Publishers (800-272-7737) are also taking orders. The book costs $65.

Available in 15", 18" and 24" bars.
