Ocean Course sale delayed by environmental concerns

By PETER BLAIS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Just how much wetlands restoration work will have to be done and just who will pay for it is holding up the final sale of The Ocean Course at Kiawah Island to the New York Audubon Society.

The South Carolina Coastal Council, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Resolution Trust Corp., Virginia Investment Trust (VIT) and New York Audubon are trying to determine the extent of unpermitted damage done to wetlands during construction and whether the placement of certain bridges violates environmental permits, according to New York Audubon Executive Director and Counsel John Santacrose.

Santacrose said he had expected the deal — which would make New York Audubon and investor VIT the property owners — to have originally been completed by this spring. Now he doubts the issue will be resolved before late summer or early fall.

"It's such a unique transaction that it's been fairly difficult," Santacrose said.

Technically, the Resolution Trust Corp. still controls the environmentally sensitive course built by the now-defunct Landmark Land Co.

"It's the RTC's problems to correct," explained VIT Vice Chairman Beverly Armstrong. "We have no involvement in that whatsoever."

John Santacrose

"It hasn't affected our financial commitment to the purchase at all. It's just taking longer to get it done than we'd expected."

New York Audubon was the winning bidder for the RTC property at last summer's bankruptcy auction of Landmark holdings.

Under the purchase agreement, VIT subsidiary AMF Inc.

was to eventually take over management and financial ownership of the property in exchange for certain conservation easements that would allow New York Audubon to stipulate how further development would proceed.

But the Coastal Council and U.S. Army

GreenVisions becoming major player in Midwest management

By PETER BLAIS

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — The steady growth in golf course development in the Midwest has helped a Northbrook firm become one of the leading management companies in the region, if not the United States.

GreenVisions currently operates 10 golf facilities in Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa. In early May the Northbrook firm took over the management contract at New Berlin (Wis.) Hills Municipal Golf Course. It plans to spend $500,000 on capital improvements there over the next five years. It is building Sand Creek Country Club in Chesterton, Ind., and remodeling Emerald Hills Golf Club in Sterling Hills, Ill. Plans are to add two to four courses annually.

"We'd like to be in the 15 to 25 range within five years," President and Chief Operating Officer Tim Miles said. "We don't have an ownership interest in a course, yet. But it will happen."

GreenVisions leases and manages golf clubs for a variety of clients, ranging from banks to municipalities to forest preserve districts.

"The Midwest has been strong, particularly for municipal work," Miles said. "The Midwest, especially Illinois, is helped by government agencies like park districts. There are between 300 and 500 in Illinois alone. Each one has taxing and bonding capacity. That's a big help in getting courses built."

GreenVisions offers full management services including marketing, budgeting, accounting and personnel management functions. One of its specialties is turning around ailing operations, such as Highland Park (Ill.) Country Club.

The former private club filed for bankruptcy in the early 1990s, according to GreenVisions Chief Financial Officer Allan Swaringen. LaSalle National Bank hired GreenVisions as a consultant in 1991. The company assisted with the foreclosure, ap-

Marketing Idea of the Month

Getting word out called key to success

By JOE GLASSER

Getting the word out on the benefits of your facility is the greatest challenge facing course operators.

Whether you are starting a new facility or want to improve business at an existing one, your solicitation plan should start with establishing a relationship with the media.

Invite editors and reporters to see what you are developing during construction. Get to know them on a first-name basis. Invite them to lunch. Keep them posted on the development's progress.

Feature articles during development can create interest in your target markets and give you a head start promoting what you plan to offer the golfing public.

Prepare a master list of media representatives from local, regional and national publications and broadcast outlets. Plan a media day celebration including complimentary golf before the official opening to introduce your facility.

While I was with Marriott, we held a media day at Marriott's Grand Hotel at Point Clear (Ala.) to introduce a nine-hole addition. It is a fairly isolated facility and needed an aggressive marketing approach. The event resulted in numerous stories at the local, regional and even national level.

The media can also be helpful at an existing facility. Whether you have remodeling plans, management changes, or sim-
