#1 CHOICE FOR SEDGE CONTROL!
NOW THE INDUSTRY'S

GET FASTER SEDGE RESULTS

STOP FUTURE POPULATIONS

Nothing Puts You in Control of Sedges Like Dismiss® Herbicides

Why is Dismiss® the industry's number one choice for sedge control? Dismiss herbicides not only deliver visible results against sedges in just 24–48 hours, they produce a noticeable difference the next season: a significant reduction in new sedge populations.

That's because Dismiss fights yellow nutsedge and green kyllinga underground, impacting reproductive structures to help reduce future generations of weeds. With Dismiss, you're getting the industry's fastest visible results and fewer sedges next season, saving you time and money.

Yes, we've finally gone to the dogs!

This summer we put together a research project that examined your best friend on your turf maintenance team, that furry companion riding shotgun in your golf car, that four-legged, varmint-control expert – your course dog.

First and foremost, we want to thank the good people at Jacobsen for sponsoring this course canine project. Jacobsen has a long history of supporting the dogs of turf through their collar give-away program.

So what did we learn?

You'll find the results of this research project on the following pages. In some cases we broke the numbers down further to see if there were any distinctions between private- and public-course dogs. Sometimes there were variances, but more times than not the numbers held fairly true across the demographics.

In addition, we did some follow-up reporting and collected anecdotal stories from superintendents about what made their mutts special, as well as personal stories that just seemed to best reflect the kind of buddy they are to you. Frankly, we were impressed with the volume and honesty in your stories, as well as overwhelmed by the generosity of pictures and videos many of you forwarded us. Those we couldn't share in this story will be available in this issue's app edition.

In a nutshell, you love your dogs unconditionally. In fact, if we would have asked, we half expect many of you would've ranked them near the top of the most valuable members of your maintenance team. Heck, most of you subsidize your dog's care and kibble out of your own wallets.

Lastly, as a research incentive we pledged to donate $1 to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA) for every valid return. The ASPCA was the first humane society to be established in North America and is, today, one of the largest in the world. We're happy to report that we'll be making a $500 pledge in care of GCI readers. – THE EDITORS

KINGSTON, YELLOW LAB

I treat my dog as well as I treat my two kids. He means the world to me. I love him so much that I get a little anxious when he's not with me. We were driving down to the pump early one morning before the sun came up. He's 6 now, but he was only 2 years old at the time. There were some wild turkeys in a field that borders the 15th hole on our south course. I got him riled up, stopped the truck and let him get out to chase the turkeys. Well, he chased them deep into the woods. He usually responds to my call but he didn't return. So I went continued looking for him. After looking and calling for about 30 minutes, I started to get real nervous. I decided to return to the truck to grab my phone. Well, when I got back there, he was sitting shotgun like he usually does waiting for me. I have no idea how we didn't cross paths, but he amazed me. It was a big relief.

BASIL, AMERICAN STANDARD BOXER

Best thing a person can have with them daily is a dog. Hate it when she's not around. She helps with everything, most importantly mine, the crew's and our members' attitude. Hard not to smile and enjoy yourself when Baz is around. It was a stressful time one spring. We were in our morning meeting and everyone was on egg shells around the new boss who was making his presence felt and it was making things miserable. As we were delegating morning jobs he chimed in with a few choice words for some members of the crew and it soured everyone's mood further. Once he finished, Baz, just a few months old walked into the middle of the room and took a poop in the middle of the floor. Definitely lightened the mood and was the joke every morning for several weeks. The boss didn't like it, but it was exactly what the crew needed, something to laugh at together.

POA, AUSTRALIAN SHEPHERD

He's unbelievably loyal and too smart for his own good. He's by my side to say "Hi!" no matter how the day is going, and has been a wonderful companion for the 10 years (out of his 12) that I have been his caretaker. Poa would prefer me not share all his daydreams of heroic rescues and courageous adventures, and said to spare the stories of the numerous parades he's had on Main Street honoring his goose-chasing prowess. He's just been the perfect dog who hangs his head out the window on the highway – at the appropriate angle, of course, so you can hear his nostrils whistling – chases the cats at home to only be put in his place with a quick swat at his nose, greets visitors at home with a quick head shake and his distinctive multi-syllable "Awooooo-ooo-oooo" howl. He is nearly attached to my leg, following my every move (including from the couch to the recliner) and ready to please on whatever his next task is, even if it means to just "hang out." He loves everyone, lets my kids pull his hair and climb on him if needed, and REALLY gets the ladies' attention because he is utterly adorable. He is the best!

JAGER, BLACK LAB

Jäger has adopted the art of armadillo eradication. Since construction of our course in 2009 we have battled armadillos and the damage they do to the turf. Since 2009 Jäger has "removed" 93 of those 'lil varmints from the course. There are so many memories and stories of him hunting and chasing these critters that make me laugh. The members want to throw him a party when he hits the century mark!

OZZIE, AUSTRALIAN SHEPHERD

We have a female who had a litter of 10 puppies 4-and-a-half years ago. When they were just a few months old I began taking them to the course to become acclimated. After just a few visits to learn the 'ropes' from their mother, three of the puppies and I happened to be driving home when I saw a small flock of geese on the 1st fairway. Naturally, as we got closer I got the dogs pretty excited about their upcoming test. Needless to say, I was not disappointed. When I got close enough to open the door the dogs took off like thoroughbreds out of a starting gate. After the birds got airborne the dogs nearly overtook them and then continued to chase them for another 200 yards. It was quickly obvious they were going to enjoy their work. Not only do they provide a valuable service for our facility but I consider them family members. I can't imagine life without them.

MURPHY, BASENJI MIX

Murphy and Jasper are shelter-rescued family dogs who get to go to work every day. Murphy is an 8-year-old Basenji mix. Jasper is a 3-year-old mix of undetermined origin. Jasper was my son's big Christmas present a couple of years ago and both love to chase geese. Murphy might not be able to tell the difference between skunks and cats and tries to sniff the butts of skunks. He no longer gets to run the course free in the dark due to five such encounters in 10 days a few years ago. A couple years ago, he was tethered to the cart. I was moving tee markers on a tee in the dark. I heard a commotion and turned just in time to see a skunk walk up to the cart, spray Murphy, and start walking away. Murphy lunged so hard at the skunk that he broke the chain and landed on top of the skunk. They tangled briefly before I was able to call Murphy back and the skunk disappeared into the darkness.

LADY, LAB/BLUE HEELER

Jim Ellison, the retired Bay Hill superintendent, was visiting my course as the senior agronomist with Palmer Golf. We were touring the course and, at the time, I was contemplating bringing Lady on full time. Jim and I were standing on No. 15 green looking back down the fairway when we see Lady coming out of the woods. It appeared she was carrying something. We drove down to check her out and she has a ground hog in her mouth. Jim looks at me and says, "You better bring that dog to work with you every day." Enough said. She's been by my side ever since.

ROCKY, LAB

When Rocky was about 2 years old we had a terrible storm blow through our area. We were cleaning up around and in a lake, which had a lot of limbs in the water. We were getting what we could from the bank and I heard a splash. Rocky had jumped in the lake and started dragging limbs to the bank so we could put them in the back of the truckster. He wanted to help and he sure did. He has been the best dog/companion I have ever had. He follows me wherever I go – at work or at home. He sleeps at the foot of my bed, he rides in the front seat of my truck and is with me every step of the way on the course each day.

MYLEE, GOLDEN RETRIEVER

Mylee is a big part of the golf course not only in the removal of the geese, but in the joy she brings to the workplace. When she is not here at the course patrons ask where she is and want to know if she is OK. Mylee is both a great friend to my family and my crew. Mylee really enjoys being out here at the golf course, she will get in and on just about any piece of equipment just to say hello. She will ride from hole to hole on a Triplex which is really funny to watch.

MY SUMMER READING LIST

Jeff provides a run down on what's worth reading and why.

Many decades past my school years, I still feel the need to report on "what I read this summer." I read as many golf architecture books as I can, and as more and more golf architecture books are showing up, and I am – or will be – enjoying them all.

First up on my summer reading list was the new release by Mark Leslie, called "The Design's the Thing!" This book is similar to "Secrets of the Golf Course Architects" but with sharper editing. While golf architects have great stories, they are often poor storytellers. Leslie uses his editing background (including a stint at this magazine's forerunner) to take stories from the road, philosophical quotes and humorous statements from my brethren, and edit them down to just the good stuff. It's a fun read.

He adds a few chapters from his other writings, covering subjects that have always rankled at least my feathers – such as potty parity laws. I mean, if women need more toilets because of small bladders, what about old men with large prostates?

Another new read is Bradley S. Klein's "Wide Open Fairways: A Journey across the Landscapes of Modern Golf." I have always admired Brad's writing, with its unique style, derived from the many subjects he's covered.

Brad is almost an accidental golf writer and he brings a more professorial tone to the proceedings. Case in point: His first chapter is called "A Sense of Place" – my very first lesson in landscape design school 40 years ago. This also mirrors one of my favorite college landscape architecture texts, "Reading the Landscape of America" (by May T. Watts, 1957), which explains the various landscapes of America (such as bogs, sand dunes and forests) to laypeople. Klein takes a similar approach, discussing golfing landscapes, their meaning, and how we react to them as humans.

It's deep, but not too deep. He touches on the development of courses from New York (contrasting Donald Trump to Depression-era Bethpage), to Los Alamos, N.M., to the sand hills of Nebraskas. They are all woven into interesting stories and all will make you think about golf's place in the universe.

“ He adds a few chapters from his other writings, covering subjects that have always rankled at least my feathers – such as potty parity laws. I mean, if women need more toilets because of small bladders, what about old men with large prostates?”

Leslie and Klein give us two different looks into golf courses – Leslie the quick read and Klein's a deeper look. Both are worthy of your time.

In perusing Amazon, I also noticed a few other books that I've purchased and now await arrival. I can review one – "Methods of Early Golf Architecture: The Selected Writings of Alister MacKenzie, H.S. Colt, and A.W. Tillinghast (Vol. 1)" – because I have well-worn copies of the books these selected writings came from. I learn much from reading "the old dead guys," and I am always struck by how similar the thought process has been over time, even if the products came out differently.

For those who missed out on the reprints of these classic architecture books offered a decade ago, or simply want a smaller cross section of Golden Age architecture thoughts, this book will fit nicely in many golfers libraries.

Three recently released books, in one way or another, speak to the relationship between sand and golf courses.

"The Golden Age of Pinehurst: The Story of the Rebirth of No. 2" by veteran writer Lee Pace, covers the changes made last year by Coore and Crenshaw, and also has some background history of the resort set in the pine hills of North Carolina.

"Golf in the Nebraska Sand Hills: The Next Mecca for Golf" by Dean

Kratz was released late last year and is a mix of photos and a general overview of golf in the sand hills of Nebraska, not touching on much of anything in great depth. However, for those as interested in this region, it has value.

"Sand and Golf: How Terrain Shapes the Game" by George Waters will be released later this year, and it promises to explore what the relationship between golf course architecture and sandy terrain, which has existed since the inception of golf on the naturally occurring areas of short grass found among the coastal dunes of Scotland. For real students of golf architecture, this should be a great read.

While I try hard to be your single source of golf architectural knowledge, I encourage you to branch out and see what many others have to say on the subject. GCI
