ticular importance to the golf industry, and something, heretofore a far cry to the greenkeeper suddenly hits home. For the golf industry discover local governments constructing golf courses, maintaining them at a loss, and nonchalantly extracting the difference out of the hides of the genial but long suffering taxpayer. Particularly has this problem confronted the owner or manager of 'fee courses' in the 'provinces' away from the thickly populated metropolitan areas. With the rising popularity of golf several years ago many such cities built and now maintain fine courses for their people. In a great many cases these courses were built at the organized insistence of golfers who had not the facilities to enjoy fully this newly found sport at prices they could afford to pay. Needless to say, all this support has had an important influence on golf, generally speaking, and more specifically in the health building and recreational advantages it provided for thousands of people who a few years ago, thought a driver was the boss, and a mashie had something to do with potatoes.

"This entrance of government into golf was a fine thing for the golfer, especially if he wasn't a taxpayer of consequence, but it was a bitter pill for the public golf course owner. How does he fit into this picture? And particularly, how does he fit into the picture, if the city-owned course operates at a deficit and he then contributes a share of his tax money to foster golf at less than cost and at the expense of his own business? Unfortunately for him, lower prices means more votes to his competitor, and he is interested in profits, not votes.

"Competing against this obstacle means nothing but red ink and probably insolvency. And to further aggravate the situation, he doesn't even get credit for his passive and genial resignation to the wolf at his own door."

LYMAN CARRIER NOW OFFERS SEASIDE BENT SEED

Granger, Ind.—Lyman Carrier is introducing a new seed known as Carrier's Seaside Bent Seed; it is Agrostis palustris, H. Maritima; Coos County strain. Tests rate this seed at 95 per cent purity and 90 per cent germination.

Carrier tells why he is introducing this new brand at this time: "I have felt for some time that a high quality, reasonably priced product, backed by our concern, would reach the hearts and pocketbooks."
