Melvin Traylor, Former USGA President, Dies

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, president of the USGA in 1928 and long active as a national and sectional association official, and a golf club president, died at Chicago, Feb. 14, of pneumonia, following a 35-day illness.

Traylor was one of the most popular men in golf, and deservedly so. He was a genial, smart straight-shooter; tough when the occasion demanded and a great comrade. He was prominently mentioned for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1932, and was one of our foremost bankers.
