HIRAM F. GODWIN

Box 122, Redford Station, Detroit, Michigan

to the golfer by the US golf ball department, through John Sproul, who advised:

1. Be sure to buy golf balls of recognized brands to assure yourself of the best performance.
2. The average golfer should choose a high grade ball with a tough, durable cover as this type will give him as much distance as he can get from any ball including the so-called professional type, plus far greater service.
3. Take lessons from your pro to learn more accurate hitting. This will reduce the number of ruined and lost balls due to mis-hit shots.

4. Give up the idea that a new ball is needed after every round. A good quality ball is good for many rounds.

5. Keep your ball clean to protect the cover and ball from grit and sand. Hot water should never be used in washing, and the ball should not be allowed to soak. Avoid scrubbing too hard.

6. Use your old, cut-up balls for practicing, saving those in good condition for actual playing.

7. Do not place golf balls near steam pipes or in any other overheated place; also avoid direct sunlight in hot weather.
