that of lima and snap beans. The beans germinated poorly and most of the resulting plants died. Therefore, it may not be desirable to plant beans and related crops on soils which have been treated in previous years with heavy applications of arsenate of lead, if untreated areas are available. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, 'To do so may reduce the normal return for the effort and be incompatible with the current effort to conserve seed, fertilizer, and insecticide materials.'

"If your course is in an area where Japanese beetles occur, and you desire additional information on the possible effects of arsenate of lead already present in the soil on vegetables, it would be well for you to seek the advice of your Plant Quarantine Regulatory officials, or the entomologists in your State Agricultural Experiment Station, or your State Extension Service."

Heart Attack Fatal to Bill Hickey

WILLIAM HICKEY, pro at Brookside municipal course, Pasadena, Calif., died suddenly June 5 of a heart attack, believed to have developed from illness he contracted in civilian defense work.

For three years Bill was secy. of the Southern California PGA, and was a Southern California representative at three PGA national meetings. He was born in Denver of Irish-American parents.

Hickey took up golf in St. Louis under the able direction of Johnny Manion and Jack Malley. His golf career was interrupted by World War I. After combat service and a year with the American Army of Occupation, Bill came back and worked as a salesman. At a physician's advice he switched back to golf and became pro and mgr. at Eagle River, Wisc. Then he followed Leo Diegel at Augua Caliente, and seven years ago took the Brookside job vacated by his old pal Malley.

Bill is credited with having made Brookside the most popular course in Southern California. He extended its service as a public recreation utility by introducing golf into Pasadena high schools and by numerous other activities in extending golf.

As an official of the Southern California PGA Bill's work for his colleagues has
