

Jacobsen Acquires "Standard"

Rotary Power Mowers

The Jacobsen Manufacturing Co., Racine, Wis., has announced purchase of the goodwill, manufacturing and sales rights of the Standard rotary mower from the Standard Mfg. and Sales Co., Lebanon, Ind. The Standard line of rotary power mowers, leaf pulverizer and other units will be manufactured by the Worthington Mower Co., subsidiary of Jacobsen, in Stroudsburg, Pa.

Standard rotary power mowers were among the first to be built of this widely used type. Built in a wide range of cutting widths, the Standard rotary mower has a series of horizontal discs, with cutting blades on each disc which rotate at high speed and cut the grass on the principle of a circular saw. Standard's special safety bolt and nut holds blades to discs preventing them from coming loose, but permitting them to turn back under the disc when an obstruction is encountered. This type of mower is used most effectively in clearing high stands of grass.

The Standard Leaf Pulverizer, an outstanding device for collecting and disposing of fallen leaves, brushes the leaves up, chops them into fine mulch, and spreads it evenly through the grass. The mulch will disintegrate within a few weeks, returning to the soil as fertilizer. The Pulverizer, quickly attached to Standard rotary power mowers, sweeps a 37 in. swath. A 6 h.p. motor furnishes ample power for the machine with sulky drive if desired.

Jacobsen, president of the Jacobsen Mfg. Co., Racine, Wis. Mr. Jacobsen, who is also chairman of the Racine Friendship Fleet committee, is on a Scandinavian trip at present with a goodwill committee of Wis. business leaders. He is pictured on the right.
