

of a few members. To get the project underway it is often necessary to start work on the ground long before the membership roll is complete. While this is undoubtedly a gamble it is a most effective means of increasing membership.

Groups now struggling with organization and fund raising can take heart by realizing that successful completion of the project is always worth the time, effort and money involved. In all probability the country club will be used by future generations and will be a monument to those who have promoted it. The construction budgets of the 10 clubs may provide the very new group with only somewhat superficial information needed for preliminary discussion. Before a major step toward organization can be taken, however, considerably more specific estimates are required.
