

California Clinic

P.E. Instructors, Recreation Directors cram Golf Education into four days at Monterey

Short, 6-hole course was built into practice football field at Monterey clinic.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison

Mrs. Carrol Gordon

California men and women physical education instructors, who are intent on elevating golf to equal status in colleges and high schools with the so-called major sports, increased their knowledge of the game by attending another All-Golf clinic on Monterey Peninsula late in June. The four-day meeting attracted about 150 p.e. instructors along with 50 city recreation directors.

The Clinic, which has been held every year since 1959, is jointly sponsored by the California Assn. for Health, Physical Education and Recreation and the National Golf Foundation. It is staged in cooperation with San Jose State College and the Northern and Southern Calif. PGA sections.

Exercise at Graduation

Three of the four days were devoted to what amounted to academic work. Graduation exercises consisted of a round of golf at either the Pacific Grove or Del Monte courses where the students put their newly acquired knowledge to practice.

(Continued on page 38)

(Left) Don Fry, Pacific Grove pro, helps woman student in guiding putts.

(Above) Prof. Ben King is the narrator and his associate, Howard Smith, handle the demonstration during sandtrap session. (Right) Mick Riley of Salt Lake works the tee-line helping students get their swings straightened out.

Harrison Heads Teachers

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, pro at San Francisco's Olympic Club, was the feature lecturer at this year's Clinic. He was aided by a PGA staff consisting of Mickey Riley, Meadowbrook, Salt Lake City; Howard Smith, Hacienda CC, LaHabra; Dave Mancour, Silverado CC, Napa; Ben King, Salinas G&CC; Don Fry, Pacific Grove; Joey Rey, Harding Park, San Francisco; and Jim Bailey, Pinehurst CC, Littleton, Colo.

Collegiate instructors included Mrs. Carol Gordon of Stanford; Ken Griffin, L.A. City College; Tay Brown, Compton College; Hal Buffa, Mt. Diablo Valley College; Gerry Vroom, San Jose State; and Vern Mullen, Taft Junior College.

Bayonne Golf Club Talks A Good Game

About 600 persons who belong to the Bayonne (N.J.) Golf Club don't have a course but they play and talk golf the year around. The club was organized about two years ago by Frank Rossiter of the Bayonne dept. of parks, who has been an ardent golfer for at least 50 years. Club meetings are held periodically and Rossiter either stages clinics at them or gives group and individual lessons. The City Park stadium, which has a fieldhouse, serves as a site for the meetings. As many persons sit around and talk golf as swing a club.

Youngsters in Club

The membership includes 200 women, a 92-year old man and two fellows who are in their 70s. There are competitions at the Stadium for those who want to enter them—hole-in-one contests, target shooting and driving tests. In the fieldhouse there is a driving net, chipping cage and putting green and possibly more swinging is done in the wintertime than during the summer.

The Bayonne GC annually sponsors two tournaments at local courses. But more people than not would rather sit around and talk about the game.