persons are interested in improving their games. But I've suspected a few women and, for that matter, even a few men of taking lessons just because their friends were doing it. And, of course, you always have a small percentage who are primarily interested in hearing you say they have a nice swing. If you don't get that in during the lesson they're awfully disappointed.

Bob: Yes, I guess you have to romance some of them. But in fairness to them, you shouldn't overdo it. You know, Denny, a few weeks ago I had what I thought came close to being the best student I ever taught. I said, "Nice shot," several times after he hit the ball on the button. Finally, he said, "Bob, I don't want you to stand there and compliment me when I do things right; I want you to figure out what I'm doing wrong."

Denny: A fellow like that is easy to work with.

Bob: One more question. Have you ever had a student tell you to scream at him and raise hell when he wasn't doing things right?

Denny: Fellows like that have been few and far between. The trouble is that you wouldn't dare to scream at the people you'd really like to.
