Suggests Fringe Benefit Inquiries by Clubs

The superintendent is not predominantly mercenary in his aims, but he has professional status and responsibilities that his employer at a private, public or semi-public course must consider. When clubs compare superintendents' salaries with those in industry it becomes obvious that the superintendent is not overpaid.

A recent check of industry shows an average expenditure of 32 cents per hour for fringe benefits such as insurance and retirement plans. These are benefits too few clubs provide.

The superintendent never has been a 40-hour-a-week man. He has to be on the job pretty much at all times and certainly during emergencies without over-time pay.

In examining the increased costs of golf course maintenance, chairmen and other officials usually find that superintendents' salaries are not advancing nearly as fast as other items in a budget.
