British Study Golf Swing; Hope to Mass Produce It

The Golf Society of Great Britain has engaged six scientists to spend the next three years in an effort to uncover the secrets of a good golf swing. The Society points out that many famous golfers have tried to explain the secrets of their swing, but in actual performance, don't carry out what they preach. The British researchers will examine the muscle action of a perfect swing, determine a formula for it and then try to mass produce it. (At this point they concede they may not find the perfect swing they are looking for.)
