Lakewood, put into play this summer across the river from New Orleans, is appropriately named. Hewed from the jungle, it has 11 lakes from which fill was obtained to construct it. The course is barely above sea level and fairways, tees and greens are constructed in a crown pattern to assure adequate drainage. Soil from seven or eight states north of Louisiana, washed down by the Mississippi, is incorporated in the Lakewood turf bed, and even Northern type trees that have grown from seeds washed down by the river, thrive on the course. The 11th (top) and 8th holes are seen on the cover. Lakewood was designed by Robert Bruce Harris.

Remove water hazards from your greens

with TERRA-LITE #4

After you aerate your tees and greens, make your aeration stick—and water drain—by spreading Terra-Lite number 4 size vermiculite. The fine granules of vermiculite flow readily into the aeration holes. Surface water enters the vermiculite giving you needed drainage. The water is held by the vermiculite at root level, giving the water to the roots as they need it, later on. Terra-Lite is permanent because it's a mineral . . . doesn't rot or decompose. Keeps your tees and greens puddle-free. Add number 4 size Terra-Lite each time you aerate.

You don't see enough of this kind of scenery in Golfdom, but it is only because photos of this type usually are purloined before they reach the editorial department. Anyway, these young ladies are residents of Decatur, Ala., and they are testing acrilian acrylic turf, Chemstrand's contribution to miniature golf. It is a man-made fiber that is said to have quick drying properties and won't rot, mold or mildew and when dyed gives a "grass-green" effect.

on the "PGA brainbund," and Ron Smith's column in the Clearwater Sun on the "PGA bundle of errors" show a deterioration in esteem too serious to be regarded lightly by majority of PGA members who are primarily businessmen though not politicians.

The PGA position in the conflict of dates between the Denver Open, which is PGA co-sponsored, and the TV "World Series" really is pathetic . . . After the handling of the date mess of the Memphis Open and the International Golf Assn. last year and threatening Palmer, Player and Stan Leonard with suspension and fine, and fining Snead for not going across the country to play, the association virtually reversed its policy this year and gave its blessing to its three top stars in staying out of the Denver Open to play in the TV show.

Red Smith wrote: "Leadership of the PGA has repudiated its own rule book, broken faith with the membership and sponsors, stultified and disqualified itself . . . Tying on to the 'World Series' the 'exhibition' tag helps spread the rumor — hotly denied by the promoters — that the three players, all under the same management, will take a flat $25,000 each instead of competing for $50,000 in first money, $15,000 for second and $10,000 for third."

That "World Series" deal has been poorly handled and the PGA has been cast as the gullible yokel in the show . . . PGA really doesn't deserve the criticism it has been getting for not being able to hit curve pitching . . . That isn't the PGA's game . . . Palmer, Nicklaus and Player were not present at a "World Series of Golf" party given by the TV show's promoter in Chicago and the three got blasted in Chicago by the press, advertising agents and sponsors for not showing polite, preliminary interest in $75,000 for a couple afternoons work . . . But their manager said they never had agreed to show, having been booked elsewhere at exhibition rates.

Ron Smith says the PGA needs a "commissioner." . . . That suggestion has been advanced, considered and turned down several times before . . . The PGA did have a "commissioner." . . . He was Albert W. Gates, a lawyer and former pres. of the Western GA . . . The arrangement didn't work out satisfactorily for Gates or the PGA . . . Experienced pros say the commissioner idea does not fit the PGA need as members and club officials would have to come under a commissioner's jurisdiction . . . Club officials and owners would not go for that.

The USGA possibly is the best operated sports governing organization in the United States and it does not need a commissioner . . . The USGA tells its members and all other golfers and the press what it is doing and how it stands . . . The USGA's annual report of the Executive Committee, including a detailed, audited financial report, is an example for the PGA to follow . . . Any reason for the PGA financial report to be restricted information?

Many persons think that the PGA might have kept pace with the growth of golf business if the organization's officials had established the same relationship with PGA executive secretary and counsel,
