reasoning applies to other players. One in the other end of the spectrum, the slow, deliberate type, can be fitted with quick-draw clubs because you can be almost 100 per cent sure that nothing is going to cause him to hurry his swing.

About the only other thing I keep in mind is the player's age. With very few exceptions, persons who hit the 50 or 55 mark should be using lightweight clubs with plenty of flex. Many of them will try to talk you out of this notion, but I try to remain firm. I've seen altogether too many Senior golfers who no longer have the muscle or agility to swing stiff and heavy clubs to change my mind on this.
