apart. Lombardies that are planted in line have a way of presenting a stately appearance, but the addition of the two oaks gives the scene an uncommonly beautiful illusion of depth that isn't often captured. An arborist would undoubtedly agree that it is rare when anyone happens to contrive such an arrangement.

And Flowers, Too

The course beautiful theme doesn't stop with the tree pattern at Shaker. While Colin Smith was being converted to becoming an arboriculturist he developed a great fondness for flowers. So, it wasn't long before the clubhouse grounds and many out-of-the-way spots on the course were overflowing with color from spring until late fall.

As another step in the beautification of the Cleveland course, Smith started a project two or three years ago of raising sandtraps from their flat beds so that they are seen obliquely. He feels that supts. overlook many opportunities to improve the appearance of their courses by not doing this. Traps have an endless number of striking configurations, but these too often are not seen because the traps are buried at or below the grade level. It is only when they are embanked that the full character of the green is brought out.
