

Lincoln Werden, New York Times golf expert, was heard to remark that the most of the players in this group "are liable to shoot anywhere from 117 to 147." And that's just what most of them did when they invaded the Dunes Golf & Beach Club, Myrtle Beach, S. C., a few days before the Masters for their annual carnage. They were guests, as they have been for the past several years, of Pro Jim D'Angelo and Dunes members. In case you haven't already recognized anyone here, you are beholding the members of the Golf Writers A.C.

though she had a wedge in her hand, nobody got hurt. It was all in fun.

A Deal Is Offered

Model Six, who wore a striking blouse and skirt outfit, was given a lesson in the care of clubs. Wise tried to polish some beat-up irons that she displayed, but finally gave up in despair. He offered her an unusually good trade-in deal if she would quietly steal away and throw the clubs in the nearest body of water.

The seventh model was given instruction in the proper way of addressing the ball and, after overcoming a tendency to introduce the discotheque, did a fairly creditable job. Nola Cox, conceded to be one of the most attractive brunettes in the production and perhaps a little too anxious to make a good showing, displayed symptoms of having putting jitters. When she missed a half dozen taps from within two feet, Wise sent her away to calm down with a can of beer.

Dink Goes to Work

The finale was staged with some fanfare. Producer-Commentator Anne Meidel held up a "Color him solid gold" sign, a burlap bag emblazoned with gold dollar signs was brought out, and everyone present at the style show was urged to leave the clubhouse and repair to the pro shop where they could purchase any or all of the attire they had seen modeled.

That was the cue for Dink Wise to get down there and go to work — for the first time all day.

Organize PGA Chapter

Formation of a Western Massachusetts chapter of the Conn. section of the PGA has been approved. At an organizational meeting the following were elected officers: Frank Kringle, pres.; Jerry Gianferante, vp; Art House, 2nd vp; Ed Howe, Alan (Red) Mackintosh and Dan Webster, directors. The Western Mass. pros will continue to promote the Junior golf programs held each Friday. All pro events are scheduled to be held on Thursdays in order to avoid any conflict with previously scheduled Conn. section events.

Farm Land Value

Farm land in California and Texas is estimated to be the highest priced in the nation because so much of it is irrigated. Average value of farm land in these two states is not available, but in Illinois where land prices are considered high, it is estimated that the average value of an acre is $348. This compares with $293 an acre in Indiana; $282 in Ohio; $265 in Iowa; $218 in Michigan; $171 in Kentucky; $168 in Minnesota; and $139 in Missouri.
