Growing Turf the Hard Way

By TOM MASCARO

Geographical Area: Southern State

Problem: Wars have been started over incidents such as this.

When the Biltmore GC, Coral Gables, Fla., was constructed it had 36 holes. It was divided by a highway. Later on, 18 holes were sold and became the Riviera CC. One day a man applied for maintenance work at Riviera. He informed Walt Palmer, then supt., that he caddied on the course when it was just built and knew each hole. Palmer put him to work trimming grass and told him to work from green to green. The workman not knowing that the original Biltmore Club had been divided, finished his work on a Riviera green, crossed the road and began trimming the Biltmore greens. Joe Uzzi, supt. at Biltmore, ran across the workman (whom he had never seen) working like mad on his course. Joe, after a few questions, realized what had happened. He called Palmer on the phone and thanked him for sending him free manpower. Here are Walt and Joe pointing to their respective courses.
