

THE BEST OF GOLFDOM

Running a golf club can cause many headaches

Perennial problems include labor, management and conflicts of personalities.

Having, for three years, been serving on the Board of Directors of a country club which features golf only; having been on the Finance committee, Chairman of the Greens Committee, and a member of the Building Committee during the construction of our new clubhouse, leads me to give you who may be active along the same lines a chance to check up on your own organization. I will simply elaborate on things that actually have stood out as experiences.

One thing that worries a lot of clubs is the method of management. We have tried a General Manager and found it created a lot of friction. The General Manager wanted to make a fine showing financially, electing to buy the fertilizer and other materials for the greenkeeper. The outcome was that we had poor greens. This system of management caused friction with the professional and, furthermore, was continually on outs with the House Committee or some one else.

We then went to the system of having a house manager under the supervision of the House Committee. Our greenkeeper is under the jurisdiction of the Greens Committee. The finances are checked by the Finance Committee and the Club Secretary has supervision of the office. This system is working fine.

True—Then and Now

Few things ever change, especially politics around the clubhouse. The facts and "gripes" aired in this article could easily have been written today. However, they appeared in the May 1927 issue of GOLFDOM with the following introduction:

"Here's one of the stories we are delighted to print. Every word of it is true. Written for GOLFDOM with the very plain understanding that we'd keep its source confidential. There is priceless value to many clubs in this candid charting of the perils that clubs must run.

"We want more material like this, and so do you. If any of you have such a practical tale, please tell us. You'll do golf a lot of good, just as this anonymous contributor has with his frank 'close-up.'"

Needless to add, the same holds true today, and the pages of GOLFDOM are open to any who wish to express their candid views on golf business.—THE EDITORS.

Getting Greens Results

About 18 months ago we brought a well-recommended greenkeeper out from the East. At that time we had the General Manager and we did not see any startling improvements in our course. We then changed management and administrations and a new Greens Chairman came in. Well, we went through last year without getting anyplace. In fact, it seemed our greens got worse.

This year a new chairman of the greens was installed. He professed to know nothing about grasses. He knew nothing about seeds. He did, however, know how to run a business.

When he took hold, he ran into all kinds of excuses by the greenkeeper, the backbone of all being, "I was not allowed to do what I knew was best. I followed instructions from the chairman of the greens." The outcome was that he was told that it was up to him to produce results and do it now. He was not to do anything he did not agree was the proper thing to do.

The cooperation has been fine between the two and today we have the best greens we have ever had and our
