Older hands

Yet most clubs key their operation around the manager or professional. I think this is why we were so successful at Clifton Springs. I made the superintendent and the crew the most important part of the club's operation. And my old-timers deserve a great deal of credit for making it the course it is."

Without these older men, there's no doubt that Clifton Springs would be just another run-of-the-mill country golf course. And there's no doubt, either, that without Clifton Springs, these men would be unhappy, made to feel unwanted by a society that has passed them by and in some cases, wouldn't be alive today.

Many other golf clubs around the country could improve their course conditions, cut their budgets for course maintenance and most important, keep some senior citizen a living, working, happy part of the community by following the example set by Al DePorter at Clifton Springs and now at Newark CC. □
