Manufacturers claim their clubs are better because they are different. Nearly all of today's brands of irons are stainless investment castings with variations in weight placement, head shape and hosel design. Woods feature endless combinations of materials for face inserts, sole plates, head weights and shafts. Ask yourself: Are they really different from each other? Is one better than another?

Examine SI Honeycomb woods and irons. These designs, based on the strength principle of honeycomb-cell structures used in aerospace craft, actually achieve optimum weight distribution and balance. SI brings scientifically designed clubs to golf, increasing shot control and improving distance off tee or fairway.

Stop reading! Visit your pro for facts about SI and a club test. Find out how a real difference in club design can lower your score. Simmons International Corporation, 1048 East Burgrove Street, Carson, California 90746, (213) 537-6690.
