

Golfdom

APRIL 2010 •

VOLUME 66 • NO. 4

17 Check out our trio of stories on green maintenance, focusing on rolling, early-season dollar spot control and the politics of green speed.

BY JOHN WALSH, ANTHONY PIOPI AND CHRISTOPHER S. GRAY SR.

GOLFDOM'S ANNUAL PUTTING SURFACE GUIDE

columns

- 4 Pin High
The Potential to Impact Livelihoods
- 12 From the Back Tees
Is Sustainable Maintainable?
- 14 Turf M.D.
Take the Time to Mentor Someone
- 64 Shack Attack
Mum Is the Word

departments

- 6 Off the Fringe
- 10 Hole of the Month

Plant Health Report PART TWO

29

Getting with the Fungicide Program

It's not just about spraying a disease when it rears its ugly head. It's about implementing a schedule that's part of a plan to achieve plant health.

By Larry Aylward

About the cover

Australian greens roller manufacturer Tru-Turf provided us with this photograph that showcases the industry's hot maintenance trend.

48

After the Deluge

The shock and awe of large-scale flooding can be blinding to superintendents. But it can also open their eyes on how to prepare for future rain events.

By Curt Harler

Turfgrass Trends

Study reveals impact of polyethylene blankets and green latex paint to protect against low temperature injury and hastening turf greenup. Also, a debate ensues over changing the classification of broadleaf fescues. See pages 57-62.

Online Exclusive

Listen to this video podcast only at www.golfdom.com/podcasts:

Golf and the Globe

— John Deere Golf's Gregg Breningmeyer, who spends many of his days on the road in America and abroad, discusses the growth areas of golf globally in this podcast with Golfdom Editor in Chief Larry Aylward.

40

Family Matters

The Kuehner brothers learned early on the most important aspect of their kin's business.

By Larry Aylward

