placed in the laundry receiving bins at 6:45 each morning."

As mentioned earlier, Olympia Fields is considerably larger than the average club and for that reason the volume of work handled by its laundry is not applicable to other clubs, but the figures on the number of pieces handled in 1929 during the club's 4½ month season are interesting. The figures, as supplied GOLFDOM by Col. Holden, are as follows:

Tablecloths	16,978
Napkins	158,314
Side towels	5,854
Sheets	8,919
Scarfs	486
Bath mats	270
Pillowslips	5,404
Bedspreads	1,040
Hand towels	181,732
Bath towels	70,605
Busboys' coats	1,265
Dress aprons	576
Dress belts	540
Kitchen aprons	2,835
Dish towels	10,624
Glass towels	8,348
Cooks' towels	5,269
Golf towels	4,252
Miscellaneous	500

Total number of pieces..... 483,811

This amazing volume weighed 115,587 lbs. and does not include the laundering of employes' clothes and uniforms sent out to a nearby hand-laundry for washing at a cost averaging $212 per month.

"To operate our laundry last season," Col. Holden reports, "cost approximately $3,200. Had we sent the work to a commercial laundry, the best prices we could reasonably expect on it would have been not less than $7,000. So you see, we can figure an annual saving of almost $4,000 on a $12,000 investment. That's a saving worth while!

"And any golf club can effect savings proportionately large.

"I would say the average club deciding to put in a laundry would need a small washer of 150 to 200 lb. capacity, a small extractor, an ironer of capacity to keep up with the washer and a drying tumbler. If the club wanted, it might add a coat and trouser press. This equipment should not cost over $4,000 installed, could be operated efficiently by three people, and should result in an annual saving to the club of anywhere from $1,000 to $1,500, not counting the added life to the elinens.

Inter-city Pro League Opened by Illinois and Michigan

INAUGURATING what it is hoped will develop into pro golf league matches on the same basis as organized baseball is conducted, 12-man teams representing the Illinois and Michigan Professional Golfers' Associations will meet at Hawthorne Valley C. C., Detroit, June 2. The match will be the first of a home and home set, the return game to be played in Chicago the latter part of June.

Proceeds of the match, outside of expenses of the visiting players, are to go to the Michigan Society for Crippled Children. A big advance ticket sale is assured and the charity will net around $2,000 as a result of the pros' contribution of services. Ordinarily a charity is lucky to get a few hundred dollars from any one-day affair except a prize fight, so it is planned that charity organization participation will be enlisted by the pros in financing future matches. For the exhibition players, such as Espinosa, Armour and Cooper, it means a possible sacrifice of some income, but as the day selected for these team matches is almost certain to be Monday, the big-shot performers' off-day, they are out very little in actual cash and are giving considerable needed impetus to the development of golf as a profitable and lively exhibition sport.

Arrangements are under way for matches with teams from the Ohio and Missouri P. G. A., with the prospect of an interesting six-game schedule this year.

Forecasters of the Detroit-Chicago match pick a neck-and-neck race.

GOLFDOM has a number of requests for club pool construction costs, operating costs and data. Managers who will favor us by advising of the conditions and practices at their clubs will be extending a valuable courtesy to other managers and club officials. Charges for pool use, laundry costs and children's use of pool are some of the leading questions asked by the inquirers.
