fore another season starts. Pockets which hold water should be eliminated. Surface run-off is the quickest way to remove surplus water. Tile drainage is advisable on greens with heavy compact subsoil. The herringbone system should be used and laterals should be spaced about 15 feet apart. Seepage is often bad in greens adjacent to abrupt slopes. The tile lines should be placed between the green and the hillside slope. The trench must be filled up to within four to six inches of the top with stone or gravel to trap the water and lead it down to the tile. The tile without the gravel backfill will not stop seepage.

questionnaire, I will be glad to make up sample questionnaires for them.

Obviously, serving as assistant to a PGA pro for three or five years should not admit a man into organized golf. He should first be forced to pass a rigid examination. There are many aspiring to be pros who could never pass a reasonable examination even in ten years; but there are others who could do it in a year or two. These men, if they really know their stuff and have the character, should not be barred from membership in the PGA, or from pro golf just because they have not put in the "time" in a "recognized" pro shop. The primary requisite for a pro is ability, all-around ability. Budd has no need for concern about clubs hiring unqualified pros if the clubs are informed as to the type of man they need, and what they can expect from the man they hire. If this man cannot deliver the services as specified by the PGA, he should be suspended from membership, and the club employing this pro should be so informed. BUT, before this action is taken, the PGA should cooperate with the unqualified pro in teaching him and helping him to become the pro that the club thought it was hiring. While this man is learning, the PGA should place its knowledge, without cost, at the disposal of the unfortunate club. Pro golf would soon win the respect that it justly deserves and must have for the good of the game, and the club would soon have a real golf professional at its service.

GOLF BALL RETRIEVER

A gadget for rescuing golf balls that land in water hazards called the Water Mashie is constructed of a thin, hollow aluminum shaft measuring over six feet, and has a little dip net on the end making it easy to fish balls out of the water up to ten feet from shore. Weighing only 7 ounces, it can be telescoped to a three foot-length to fit any golf bag. According to the Norton Products Co., manufacturer, two or three balls saved pay for the cost.

COMBINATION GOLF TEE-PENCIL

A golf tee with a pencil tip is the novel combination known as a "Tee-Writer" now being merchandised by Schaeffer's Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio. Ideal for golfer who often finds himself without a pencil to mark down the score, the Tee-Writer serves a triple purpose — as golf tee, pencil and advertising medium. Packaged in a folder similar to a large book of matches, the Tee-Writer comes in sets of five standard size tees. Space is provided for the advertising message of the donor. Information as to prices, shipment, etc., may be obtained by writing Schaeffer's, Inc., Hippodrome Building, Cleveland 14, Ohio.

Morie Morrison, sports cartoonist of the San Francisco Chronicle, has produced "Here's How in Golf" which Doubleday & Co., Inc., 14 W. 49th, New York 20, have published at $2.95. The book has by far the clearest, most understandable illustrations we've ever seen in any golf book. Morie is a genius at this sort of a job and his illustrations undoubtedly will help pros explain points that the typical adult golf pupil doesn't get readily into his or her mind and muscles. Morie's pictures with related type and the compact introductory material to sections of the book, present a formula that is bound to have influence on future golf books. The pictures are entertaining as well as instructive. There will be several decided differences of opinion regarding instruction recommendations Morrison got from pros and presents in his book, but even these will be valuable to pros and pupils in instruction because of the way in which the illustrations lend themselves to explanation. The text and illustrations on the mental and physical conditioning phases of the game are especially good and deserve far more attention than generally given them in teaching.

TAKES IN BASEBALL FANS

Patty Berg, good will golf ambassador for the Wilson Sporting Goods Co., recently invaded the baseball empire to give one of her many exhibitions which she finds time for in between tournament events. During an eastern trip she gave an exhibition at the Phillies-Cubs baseball game in the evening, hitting some long iron shots to center field and then chipping some shots around the different bases, using them as targets, after conducting a clinic in the afternoon at the Springhaven CC, Wallingford, Pa., near Phila. where Ted Bickel, local PGA pres., is professional.

She recently conducted 14 clinics in five states — Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma — worked the New York territory for several weeks while east for the Women's Eastern Open, and then returned to the Midwest for clinics in St. Louis, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Georgia before entering the Women's Western Open.
