THE FINEST GREENS ARE PLANTED WITH Warren's STOLONS

Perfect even texture and color are maintained with clean, pure-strain WARREN'S STOLONS. Greens planted with seed do not hold their uniformity of color and texture as well as greens planted with stolons. They are apt to develop a "patchwork" look after a few years.

The cost of STOLONS over the cost of seed is insignificant compared to the overall cost of the establishment of a golf course. Why be satisfied with anything less than perfect greens only obtainable from pure-strain STOLONS.

A case against

sate. He must eliminate two clubs. Is this not like asking today's surgeon to operate without his complete modern bag of instruments? Usually the golfer eliminates the #2 wood and the one-iron. These are two of the most demanding and exciting clubs in the set. The player then improvises by making the #3 wood into a 2½ wood and maybe taking some loft off his number two-iron. Stronger players might remove one or the other at the expense of the #3 or #4 wood. But once the set is altered, something is taken from the game.

We read of the great brassie (two-wood) shots of Bob Jones. Think of the memorable one-iron shots of Sam Snead, Arnold Palmer and more recently, Jack Nicklaus.

The particular flight of the #2 wood into the wind on a long par five or that one-iron into a crosswind at a tough par three is something to behold. The exact result cannot be produced by a 2½ wood or a two-iron with less loft, even in the hands of an expert.

Perhaps, if the rule were changed to 16 clubs, there would be more improvisation. A weaker player might substitute the #5 wood for the one-iron. Or, perhaps, some would carry three wedges.

But what is the greater evil, permitting the player, particularly the duffer, a slight leeway, or destroying the integrity of the modern matched set by adhering to a rule retained to perpetuate a philosophy of playing the game which no longer exists?

The Metropolitan Section PGA of America recognizes its obligation to express its views on controversial issues which affect the game of golf. □
