Greensweep. The little greens sweeper that works as well on pavement as it does on turf.

Tow the Greensweep behind the Ryan Minute-Miser or your turf tractor. It's light. Handles easily. And you won't find it leaving tire tracks on your turf.

There's a strong 3½ horse Tecumseh engine mounted on the Greensweep chassis. It powers an eight-sided fiber brush that picks up debris with a gentle swoosh.

We've run the Greensweep over leaves, thatch, aerating cores, pine needles, dirt, sand, gravel, broken glass, paper, and beer cans, and it thrives on them.

Sweeps a 48 inch wide swath.

So clean-up is not only easy, it's fast.

Greensweep. The lightweight power sweeper that's as good on a driveway as on a golf course.

Westinghouse golf cars topped Pikes Peak. A grueling 12.42-mile climb.

To prove the hill-climbing ability of Westinghouse electric golf cars, we ran two up the famous Pikes Peak Auto Hill Climb course.* Both cars made it to the top. 21,859 yards up to the summit, a 14,110 foot elevation. How steep is your course?

Power. Distance. Reliability. Westinghouse electrics deliver. Power to spare. For rugged grades. Over long courses. And they're priced right to help you make money whether you buy or lease.

And, of course, they're comfortable. Safe, too, with automotive-type brakes on both rear wheels. But the important thing is they're built to operate from dawn 'til dusk, day after day. On an overnight charge.

You can be sure if it's Westinghouse.

Westinghouse Electric Vehicles, Westinghouse Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222.

*Test sanctioned by the U.S. Auto Club with Westinghouse 3- and 4-wheel golf cars each using 6 Exide EV106 batteries.

The test was conducted with the cooperation of the city of Colorado Springs, Colorado.

SWINGING AROUND GOLF

COX'S BUSINESS SAVVY A PLUS FOR PGA

Hiring Mark Cox as executive director should be the wisest, most profitable move the Professional Golfers' Assn. has made in many years. (See August GOLFDOM, p. 32B.)

Cox has the experience and business judgment that qualifies him to be a business manager, something the PGA has needed since it was started. By any title Cox will be a business manager.

Most of the PGA's problems are due to its officials not recognizing that professional golf is primarily a business and secondly a game and adjusting its policies and procedures accordingly.

The PGA as the association of home professionals, who do a business of more than $350 million annually, has a significant influence on the multi-billion dollar investment in golf properties.

The division of the PGA in 1968 was the inevitable result of not heeding the managerial differences between the home professionals, whose progress depends on serving the golfing public, and the objectives of the journeymen professionals, whose interests are self-serving.

Until Cox came along, the PGA had been unable to get a top operating man who knew golf as a business and as a game well enough to satisfactorily manage a golf industry business.

Albert Gates, the first PGA commissioner, was a corporate lawyer who loved golf and who took the PGA job because the association needed business guidance. He wasn't the man, however, for a little outfit short of money.

Tom Crane, another lawyer, was invaluable in handling the legal problems of the PGA's growing pains. Patiently and diplomatically, he settled the political wrangles, caring for wartime difficulties and saving the PGA around $2 million, which would have put the association in bondage to John D. MacArthur, the landlord at Palm Beach Gardens. Crane was not the man, though, to get the PGA's internal and external business affairs out of complications and confusion and put them under control.

Surveys of two business management consulting firms found that the PGA could stand vast improvement in its operations as a business.

Robert Creasey, another lawyer, came in on an emergency call as an administrator of PGA business, but he wasn't the business manager the situation needed.

Lloyd Lambert, who filled in between Creasey and Cox and who had been assistant to Tom Crane, also was a lawyer and has been a valuable anchor man in arranging PGA meetings and coordinating its operations. Lambert and Tom Boyle, comptroller, have done well in trying to get on a business basis an operation that business management experts have said needs overhauling, modernization and simplification.

Although PGA treasurers, starting with Bill Wotherspoon, have tried to explain the figures and the earmarked funds to members, very few of the 7,200 member professionals, have the slightest idea of their association's condition.

That's the picture that confronts Cox as business manager for the PGA.

California with 683 golf facilities is the leading state in golfing establishments—New York has the largest number of "regulation" courses, 587. The shorter courses are proving strong features in selling retirement and vacation residential properties.

Fred Sherman, now professional manager at Escondido (Calif.) CC, recently bought by Campana Company for $3.5 million, including 50 acres for residential sites.

Gary Slatter, now manager and professional for the Corfu Golf Tour Enterprises, highly recommends the program of Harry Obitz and Dick Farley, which requires their assistants to practice an hour each day. "That hour a day of studious work on his own game is bound to make the assistant a better golf professional in every way," declares Slatter, who was assistant at a Canadian municipal course in the summer and playing an average pro game. Then, during winter work in the Bahamas with Obitz and Farley and the compulsory hour's daily attention to his own game, Slatter went north to finish second in the 1971 Canadian PGA and set six course records. He's kept at his practice during his management and promotion work for the fabled Grecian isle and got second money in the Danish Open, 1973, which had a strong field.

At present prices, a Corfu golfing holiday is the biggest bargain in Europe, the Obitz and Farley protégé maintains. The course in the scenic island was designed by Donald Harradine of Switzerland. Superintendent is Leslie Beetham from England. Slatter says Beetham is very good. The course has Penn-cross greens, rye fairways and a bermuda-type rough. There are 18 on the maintenance force. Hand weeding is done. American machinery could be used effectively, but mechanics are rare. Beetham won an inspection tour of some United States courses as a prize in an European course maintenance competition.

In case you wish to follow Ulysses and golf in Corfu, Gary Slatter's address is 21 Alexandras Ave., Corfu, Greece.

John Kinsey named director of golf, Big Sky of Montana, Inc., which plans to open nine holes this fall, with the other nine to open in spring, 1974. □

SECOND PLACE WINNER PENNCROSS SUCCESS STORY CONTEST

OFFICIAL PENNCROSS STORY CONTEST ENTRY FORM

Dear Sir:

I am the greens superintendent in the Town of Tonawanda, which has two eighteen hole golf courses. These are both public courses, Sheridan and Brighton.

Sheridan, 6785 yards par 71 and 13 water hazards. Brighton with 6500 yards par 72 and no water hazards. I am going on my 19th year with the Town in charge of both golf courses. We have 40 greens including nursery beds and putting greens. Strictly solid seaside bent, average green 5,000 square feet. In the years from 1960 to 1965 we were getting 68,000 to 79,000 rounds of golf on both courses. So I was told by a fellow superintendent to start overseeding with Penncross bent, to reduce the poa annua I had in the greens. Started this program, overseeding 2½ pounds per green. I could see a different color in the greens after a few years. I still overseed and find the play increasing. Since 1972 we've had 108,000 rounds of golf on both courses, this is the record of rounds for a public course. The Penncross bent is taking over, and holding up very good under heavy play. This makes the golfer happier and I am happy. I am still overseeding with Penncross bent and someday hope to have Penncross bent tees on a public course. Thank you.
