GLENN RASMUSSEN has been employed by Minnesota Toro and associated with M.G.C.S.A. for twenty years. Originally, Glenn was in the consumer wholesale division and also handled the turf accounts. After five years he moved into the irrigation division and in 1970 was named a vice-president and manager of the commercial products division. Glenn grew up on a farm in Owatonna and dates himself by saying he remembers farming with draft horses and the introduction of gas and electricity into everyone's home. The three most important developments that Glenn feels have come about since his tenure in the turf grass field started are the introduction of hydraulic gang mowers, the invention of riding greens mowers and the development of large, out-front trim mowers. Glenn and his wife, Nancy, have two boys, Bob, 8 and Tim, 5. The entire family enjoys all types of outdoor activities including skating, skiing and snowmobiling.

JOHN WILEY, though not long in terms of years of membership, is one of the many active and vital members of M.G.C.S.A. John has been with the M. T. Wiley Co. as vice-president and "main worker" since the spring of 1976. John became interested in the care of turf grass at an early age while working on the grounds crew at Hazeltine for seven years. Prior to joining his father's company, John worked as a landscape architect for a Chicago based development firm. A registered landscape architect with the State of Minnesota, John also holds a degree in that field from Iowa State University. John sees golf courses using landscaping more and more to reduce maintenance costs and eliminate various types of problem areas on the course. Three darling girls, Katie, Kim and Keri live up the Wiley household and when time permits, John and his wife, Renee, enjoy boating.
