MGCSA Continues To Be A Leader In The Green Industry

Rick Fredericksen, CGCS
MGCSA President

As long as I have been involved with the MGCSA, I am proud to say that our association has been the leader in the green industry and remains the leader. We have championed environmental issues, we have led the way in sponsoring research and we have been active in helping guide legislation. Unfortunately the State of Minnesota - Board of Electricity interpreted a new piece of legislation that will affect all golf courses in the state.

The Low Voltage license requirement stems from a 2002 revision of a two-decade old law. The reworded law requires personnel that install or perform maintenance work inside irrigation controllers to be licensed or work under the supervision of a licensed employee. One licensed employee can have up to two staff members working under the licensed employee. A tight timetable does apply to the initial testing process. The association has secured a training opportunity for our members and staffs. On March 12, at Edinburgh Golf Club in Brooklyn Park, there will be a training class to prepare for the State exam. You will have until April 30, 2003 to take the test. To take the test you must first apply for the application to take the test. I know, it is crazy, but the consequences of not testing are severe.

Beginning May 1, 2003, to be eligible to test for the exam you will be required to complete three years of approved experience or completion of an approved technical program. Forms for registration for the training class have been sent out. Contact Scott at our association office for more info.

The Green Expo was a short two months ago and from all indicators the conference and show was a success. Over 7,100 people were in attendance and with approximately one third representing the Minnesota Turf and Grounds Foundation. James Bade, MGCSA Conference and Education Chairman, did a great job of setting up this year's speakers. Presently he is organizing 2004's educational sessions. He values your input in selecting speakers. Please e-mail your ideas to James at jsbade@aol.com if you have a topic or facilitator you would like the membership to hear.

Having just returned from the GCSAA Convention and Show in Atlanta, I can only report from my observation that attendance was down as expected. The Opening Session featured former Ohio Congressman John Kasich. Obviously not well known outside of Ohio by the numbers in attendance, he had a good message in his belief in the American people. I know Atlanta was not the destination city people enjoy bringing their family to, but the majority of Superintendents were there to learn.

Why did our local Green Expo attract record numbers to downtown Minneapolis in January and the National had a drop in attendance? Obviously the combining of the MNLA and the MTGF shows dramatically increased the participants. However, the weather the past few seasons has impacted budgets, as has the downturn in the economy. Many of our members are being asked to reduce costs and make immediate cuts. Typically one of the first reductions is the travel and education line item. As President of your Association I pledge that we will hold the line on MGCSA costs and remain fiscally responsible

As I write this article, our country is becoming increasingly involved in a war with Iraq. Some of you may have sons, daughters, staff members, or know of others in the military that are stationed abroad or here. Our thoughts and prayers are with them as they are called into service. Please let me know if you have children stationed here or over seas. E-mail me at r_fredericksen@msn.com. It is my intent to develop a database for those interested, to be able to send their support to our service personnel.

ON FIRE!

MGCSA President Is So Hot He Sizzles!

By JACK MACKENZIE, CGCS

Rick Fredericksen, CGCS, has led a very busy life. In the turf industry for 34 years, a family man for just shy of a quarter century and a participant in the Long Lake Volunteer Fire Department for a decade. His life has been so active you could say that he is on fire!

As a lad of 13, Rick began his career at the Elk River Country Club. He would ride his bike to work and contribute his efforts for the incredible sum of a buck and four bits per hour. Not bad for a neophyte teenager in 1969. Under the tutelage of John Hopko, Rick performed the tasks of picking rocks off the new course as well as other physical jobs side by side with the rest of the five-member crew.

Besides hard work on the course, Rick busied himself with other high school activities such as the 4H Club and both the golf and wrestling teams. However, his first passion was law enforcement and the dream of becoming an FBI agent.

To fulfill this goal, Rick maintained excellent grades, a clean record and continued his education at St. Cloud State University in pursuit of a degree in Criminal Justice. His post high school education also included the courtship of Jackie Strand, whom he had met at college. However, after spending a term attending class at the St. Cloud Penitentiary, Rick's law enforcement attitude waned and he soon changed majors to turf Management and schools to Penn State.

For two years Scott Austin, CGCS, at Midland Hills Country Club, shuttled to and fro from Penn State with Rick. According to Scott, the road trips often provided "adventures" along the way, but most importantly, he solidified a growing relationship with a fine individual and fellow turf manager. Summers at Elk River and winters at Penn State prepared Rick for the ranks of upper management when he graduated in 1978 and became the Superintendent at The Huron Country Club in Huron South

After nine years of employment at the Elk River Country Club, Rick ventured west to cut his teeth as Superintendent. His first position taught him the value of patience and furthered his agronomic skills. Two years of South Dakota hospitality later, and shortly after becoming a newly wed to his bride Jackie, Rick applied for and accepted the position of Superintendent at the Rolling Green Country Club in Hamel, Minnesota.

"He is an extreme individual. Extremely trustworthy and hard working, one couldn't ask for a better assistant, mechanic or right hand man."

-- John Hopco, former Superintendent at Elk River Country Club and Rick's first boss

Back to the land of 10,000 lakes Rick brought his wife, and with vigor he tackled new challenges. An opportunity actually, chances to install a new irrigation system and learn the intimate details of financial management and fiduciary responsibility. All the while starting a family. Two active girls kept Rick and Jackie as busy away from the course as Rick was when he was on the course. Their daughters, Jodi and Sandy, enjoyed then -- and still do today -- horses, skiing, boating and track.

And as though maintaining a country club and being an active father were not enough, Rick felt obligated to participate in the management of a growing professional turf-grass organization, the Minnesota Golf Course Superintendents Association. During the 1980's, Rick attained a position on the MGCSA Board of Directors with the goal to improve upon the advancement of the turf management profession.

Rick's diligent support on the Membership, Scholarship and Research Committees paved the way for his becoming Secretary, Vice-President and finally President of the MGCSA in 1992. During his first stint upon the BOD, he saw unprecedented growth, improved funding in research, the development of an environmental awareness program and a visible push "to the next level of professionalism." About the time Rick was Secretary of the MGCSA, the Superintendent's position became available at Woodhill Country Club. Encouraged by his maturing family, Rick pursued and accepted the opportunity in 1990. Although his clientele was a bit different than those he had catered to at Rolling Green, growing turf and grounds management was still of utmost importance.

For the last 13 years Rick has provided his membership at Woodhill only the very best of social experiences and recreational opportunities. Venues include paddleball, ice-skating, tennis, swimming opportunities and, of course, golf. Although pressed by an outdated irrigation system and a multitude of irrigation challenges, Rick has historically surrounded himself with a very competent staff. Former assistants and upwardly mobile professionals in the industry under Rick's fine leadership is apparent in the product they create.

From the first tee in the spring to the ice between the nets in the winter, Rick and his staff keep the grounds at Woodhill in exceptional condition.

Managing a prestigious golf club and raising two teenage girls wasn't enough for Rick so he reinvested himself back into Association politics in 1999. Last year, after climbing back through the ranks, he began his second term as President of the MGCSA and instigated a year of celebration dedicated to the 75th anniversary of the MGCSA. On December 3, 2002, Rick hosted an exceptional dinner party, which brought over 220 members and their spouses together to celebrate the achievements of distinguished guests as well as the association.

Currently his concerns center around the long-term funding of the TROE Center at the University of Minnesota and committing to a permanent research and teaching facility on the site. Rick is also interested with the membership and their needs during this ever-changing economy.

Beyond work and family, Rick has been very active with his community, particularly as a member of the Long Lake Volunteer Fire Department. His skills as a past member of the Trollhaugen ski patrol and Emergency Medical Technician prepared him well for his current position as both a Captain of the Fire Department and a Training Officer as well.

Could our president's life be any busier? Probably not! However, between his management of a pre-eminent golf course, his commitment to family life and rescuing his neighbors from burning buildings, Rick is always available to his constituents. Always willing to embrace new ideas and challenges, Rick maintains an open line policy and welcomes your input into the association's continuing prosperity.

71 MGCSA Members Attend Hospitality Night In Atlanta at the GCSAA Convention in February

Seventy-one MGCSA members enjoyed a break during the GCSAA National Convention in Atlanta by attending a MGCSA Affiliate sponsored hospitality night on February 13th.

Although not noted to be a touted vacation spot like Orlando, Las Vegas or San Diego, Atlanta proved to be a very adequate spot to hold the conference. Some members took advantage of watching live NHL action when the Atlanta Thrashers were home against the Washington Capitals during convention week. The hockey arena was just a few blocks from the convention.

Of course, it isn't all fun and games when attending the GCSAA show. Members attend meetings, seminars and workshops throughout the week and mingle with peers on the exhibit floor.

Minnesotan Mike Klatte, CGCS, was one of twelve nationally who were honored with 25-year certification awards at this year's convention. Klatte became certified in 1977.

ENJOYING SOME HORS' DOEUVRES are James Gardner, CGCS, left, Director of Golf at Indian Hills and The Wilds, along with James Bade, Superintendent at Somerset Country Club.
